The annual long distance motor-boat regatta for the world's sweepstakes, is on. The course is especially cosmopolitan, international and polyglot; it starts from a point just off the Villa Mimosa, Monte Carlo; lies through the Chinese District of San Francisco, makes a sharp turn and continues until the village green of Jamestown, Va., is on the starboard quarter, bends through the Colorado coal mines into the stretch, which ends at the Plaza de Toros of Seville.

All of this, of course, is inside the grounds of the Lasky studios, at Hollywood. Heavy rains have recently raised the water level of the entire grounds to a depth sufficient for light draught boats and hydroplanes, and a yacht club has been organized.

Commodore Cecil DeMille in his yacht "Static," George Melford in his "Baby Retake," Hector Turnbull in his 250 horsepower "Close Foreground," and Frank Reicher in his "Double Vision" are all entered for the event.

Thus do we wake from the long night of obscurity to find fame staring in through the misty morning. In the latest advertising of the Thanhouser corporation we note a strip of faces bearing the caption, "The Smartest and Niftiest Boys," and among them we pick out the counterfeit presentments of such brethren of the typewriter as George D. Proctor, Lynde Denig, Tom Kennedy, Peter Milne (twice), Lloyd Robertson, Pat Kearney, Charles Condon, Wen Milligan and Jim Milligan. Smartest and Niftiest is right, and in werry good taste say we.

And now, children, our next picture, which at first may be mistaken for the flight of a Bluebird, is nothing more nor less than Ida Schnall, in a really characteristic pose.

This is a very, very, very exclusive photograph of Miss Schnall playing the part of the "U" in "Undine"; viewed from other angles it will be found that Miss Schnall is playing the triple role of the "N" and the "D" in the same production, and if any reader doubts her ability to play the other letters, additional photographs will be supplied upon receipt of the signatures from six Panama Canal bonds.

Pauline Frederick has taken up literary work in addition to her screen work as a Famous Players Paramount star. Her first contribution will appear exclusively in this department this month.

Picture work has atracted the attention of a number of noted artists and illustrators recently. A group of men whose names are known all over the world, through their signatures on magazine illustrations, as well as more serious work, are now contemplating a venture into motion pictures.

They are men who have considered the field carefully, and promise to bring to the industry something novel, and above all, highly acceptable in the way of comedy and fantastic features.

Up to the second of going to press Gail Kane was still using pumice stone and sand-paper in a panicky effort to get the Indian make-up off her face. Results will be announced in this space.

H. Cooper Cliffe, who appears in his first Fox picture in "A Parisian Romance," with Dorothy Green, is an unique figure in the picture world. He is an Englishman and an actor, yet he did not descend from any member of the nobility, nor was he ever in the Dragoons.

This is a dare issued to the publicity department of the Universal, Mutual, Associated, Pathé, Metro, Paramount, General, Fox, World, Equitable, V-L-S-E, Triangle, Kleine companies and Joe Farnham. We defy them to show that their companies were not mentioned in this department this week.

Rushville, Indiana, which gave to the world Tom Geraghty, and Kid McCoy Selby (page 49, MOTION PICTURE NEWS Studio Directory) seeks further honors in the great world of cinematography. The town always was clever, but now it has started a "trade-at-home campaign" which promises to extend to other cities of the same size and spirit.

Cameramen have been engaged to film the town, or spots of great local and historical interest, such as the post-office, Odd Fellows Hall, Court House Square, the First M. E. Church, Old Doc Tevis' house, the Princess theatre, and the entire vista of Main street, showing the crowds going into Hodgett's store, and hovering about the Busy Bee restaurant.

The picture is to be shown in connection with the campaign, which is planned to wean the local trade away from Indianapolis and Cincinnati stores.

Efficiency and economy go hand in hand. This has been demonstrated to the satisfaction of everybody by some of our best known publicists. The most striking evidence, however, came to light last week, when a member of the World Film publicity staff was arrested and taken over to the West Forty-seventh street police station. When he was searched, this letter was found in his possession:

"World Film; Gents.:—

"Much against my families' wishes I have decided to be a movie actor and as I have seen your pictures so much and like them awfully much, I want you should have the first chance to hire me.

"I would make a fine type for leading man, hero parts, first villens, comical characters and Jewish. Another reason why you should cease this chancet is that you would save a lot of money on me in face paint.

"I understand all movie actors paint their face yellow. This would not be necessary in my case as I have the jaundice."

(No. 119—Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl

There is no program in the whole world which gives the exhibitors anything like the vast number of real screen and stage stars that the Universal program gives.

Nor is there any program which contains from one year's end to another, the tremendous quantity and fine quality of stories written by the best authors of the day.

Neither is there any program which gives employment to such a big staff of brainy and original stage directors.

We've reached out and secured also the greatest staff of scenic artists, expert drapers, interior decorators and high-class camera experts ever gathered together by any company or group of companies in the film business.

We use and have always used better talent of all kinds in our one and two reel pictures than others have even attempted to use in big features.

During all the hubbub about features we have never for an instant neglected our shorter length pictures, because we knew as well as we knew our own name that the short picture is the basis of the picture business. The feature is the thing of a month or of a year, for example, but the one and two reelers are for all time. AND THE UNIVERSAL HAS ALWAYS BUILT FOR PERMANENCE, NOT FOR THE MONTH OR THE YEAR!

We have the only completely world-wide selling organization in the business. You may not think that this concerns you, but it does. Because every dollar's worth of goods that we sell in foreign countries enables us to put that much more money into our product. We can afford to operate, and do operate, on a smaller margin of profit per picture than any other company because the volume of our sales is so much greater.

Think back! During the past two or three years you have been told many times that new organizations were coming into the field which would overtop even the huge Universal company. WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

And where would YOU be now if you had depended on any of them for your source of film supply? What prices would you be paying now if the tremendous resources of the Universal had not been used to hammer the business down to a commercial instead of a wild cat basis?

The only weak spot in our organization in the past was in our photography and in our laboratory work. This was because we had some poor cameras and about the most miserable laboratory in the world. We knew the trouble existed, even before you did and we fought like fiends to overcome it.

We finally accomplished it by spending HALF A MILLION DOLLARS in erecting in New Jersey the most perfect film laboratory and the finest glass studio in the world. It has taken a year to build it and we have been breaking in the new apparatus during the past few weeks, but IT IS ALREADY SHOWING THAT THE IN-

Laemmle, Pres. Universal Film Manufacturing Co.)

VESTMENT WAS A GLORIOUS ONE BECAUSE IT IS GIVING US THE BEST PHOTOGRAPHY AND PRINTING EVER KNOWN TO THE TRADE!

We are paying more for stories and scenarios than we ever paid; and more than any other program has dared to pay. The result is that we are getting the cream of the market, instead of the skimmed milk!

Our buying power is so limitless that we are enabled to secure the very best things in the market for each and every branch of the business. Film producers in all parts of the world who through lack of organization have failed in their endeavors to market their own product are NOW SUBMITTING THEIR NEGATIVES TO US. Whenever a high class one is viewed by our committee of experts, we buy it for cash and thus get the pick and choice of all productions made by unattached concerns.

World famous playwrights, highly successful authors whom we formerly could not approach without a letter of introduction are now coming to us and giving us first chance to buy their brain-products. Men with original ideas, inventors, and all others who seek the greatest market for their ideas or inventions come to the Universal FIRST.

The pick and choice of the world's very best is at our feet—and we've got the money with which to buy it.

This is not idle boasting. There was a time when we had to scrape the very bottom of the exchequer to pay our bills. There was a time when our credit was not looked upon with overwhelming favor by some of our creditors. But we weathered the storm.

The result is that all these good things are at the beck and call of Universal exhibitors. You get the results of our supreme strength, not only in our unequalled features but also in our one, two and three reel pictures.

You've heard wild prediction during the past year or two, to the effect that programs were doomed and all that sort of bosh. But the fact remains that THE UNIVERSAL PROGRAM IS NOT ONLY STRONGER THAN IT EVER WAS BUT IT IS DOING A BIGGER BUSINESS; not only in this country but in foreign lands where our own representatives are turning in sums of money that we never expected in our wildest flights of imagination.

Talk didn't accomplish this sensational success. Advertising didn't do it. Bluffing didn't do it. Nothing on earth did it but CONSISTENTLY GOOD PICTURES, week after week and year after year.

These are all cold facts. Every one of them is susceptible of proof. They are things which every exhibitor should weigh with the most careful thought and consideration.

If you have ever had a shaky feeling with regard to the future of your own theatre, or if you have such a feeling now, THERE IS A REMEDY AT HAND! Tie up tight with the Universal—the strongest film organization in the universe—and cast fear and worry to the four winds!

The UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

After all the Press Agent talk has subsided and you get right down to brass tacks and go over the situation in the cold grey dawn of the morning after, you'll find that NO program on earth begins to measure up to the Stars on the Universal program. You can substantiate this absolutely for yourself by looking into the FACTS. Not alone the greatest assemblage of Stars but the cream of them all, ALL on the Universal Program.

A Quiet Tip—Tie up to The Universal Program Now—"More Later"

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Jan. 26.

THERE is considerable activity in the motion picture field in connection with the national campaign for a million dollars to endow the Actors' Fund of America, and a number of events have been planned for the future for the purpose of raising money at the studios and by various entertainments.

Jesse L. Lasky was appointed chairman of the southern California committee, which is composed of the heads of practically all the studios. The first effort for raising funds is being made at the studios by popular subscriptions, and already several thousand dollars have been pledged.

February 10 will be Actor's fund day at all of the Los Angeles studios, when a percentage of the receipts will go to the fund. Plans looking to the extension of this to all theatres in California are now being made.

On March 3 a de luxe dinner will be given at Levy's Cafe. Sixty per cent. of the proceeds of which will be donated to the fund. On March 31 will be given a five-hour vaudeville entertainment in which many photoplayers will take part.

Later an exposition is to be given at which Daniel Frohman, president of the Actors' Association, will preside. Later it is planned that a ball shall be given.

A bridge built across the usually dry Los Angeles River at the rear of the Signal Film Corporation studio for scenes in the ninth episode of "The Girl and the Game" serial, was totally destroyed by high waters Thursday of the past week, the entire structure being carried away by the water and damaged beyond repair. "The Girl and the Game" company has spent the past week at Los Vegas, N. M., filming exteriors for the eighth episode.

Spero Company Finishes "Candy Cook"

The M. E. Spero Company, under the direction of Dave Linthicum, has just completed filming a one-reel comedy, "The Candy Cook," with a cast composed of Rena Rogers, Josh Binney and Dave Allen. The scenes for this are laid in a candy store and small factory adjoining. The subject will be released as a Vogue comedy on the Mutual program.

One of the mammoth redwood trees in the national forests near Santa Cruz, California, has been named deMille, by the chamber of commerce and citizens of Santa Cruz in honor of a visit by Cecil B. deMille and a company of Lasky players filming the John Fox, Jr., novel, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," during the past week.

The Lasky Company has had invitations from the chamber of commerce of this city for several months to go to that vicinity and film a picture, and during their stay everything was done to make the visit of the photoplayers a very pleasant one, all of which ended in the chamber of commerce presenting a proposition to Mr. deMille to build and equip him a studio, the use of which should be gratis, if he would but induce the Lasky Company to locate a producing company there.

"To Have and to Hold," a coming Lasky subject, has been filmed partially on the plan of a game of checkers. The company, which included Mae Murray and Wallace Reid, directed by George Melford, spent the past week in the vicinity of San Pedro to secure water stuff.

In this they had no trouble on land, or by the sea, for the rains which have been almost continuous since the first of the year, almost hid the dividing line between the two. While in make-up, the company would wait under the shelter of the buildings until the sun would peak out, and then beat it to a location, shoot a scene and then get back into shelter away from the rain.

The town was completely surrounded by water, and it was impossible for them to return to the studio. After four days, Melford succeeded in driving out by passing through water which came up to the engine.

Valeska Suratt, who starred in Lasky's "The Immigrant," is soon to return for appearance in another subject.

"Blacklist" Completed by deMille

"The Blacklist," filmed under the direction of William C. deMille, and featuring Blanche Sweet, has been completed, and rehearsals taken up for another subject.

Los Angeles clubs are making the most possible of the visit of Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, and the English actor is daily besieged with invitations.

Plans are being made for the presentation of a number of Shakespearian plays to be given with natural backgrounds, and an effort is being made to induce Mr. Tree to take part in this following his engagement with the Fine Arts Company.

The reproduction of a street scene in the Montmatre section of Paris is being made at the Fine Arts studio for scenes in "The Little Apache," adapted from the George Carpenter drama.

The studio librarian has secured no less than twelve books dealing with conditions in this section of the French city, and every effort is being made to give this a most true to life appearance.

TWO DRAMATIC MOMENTS IN "HELL'S HINGES," KAY-BEE-TRIANGLE WITH WILLIAM S. HART

IN THE CENTER MABEL NORMAND DOES A HAIR-RAISING FEAT FOR THE FIRST OF THE EASTERN KEYSTONES

The making of this film is in charge of Lloyd Ingraham, and Mae Marsh appears in the name part, supported by Robert Harron.

For the first time in her motion picture or legitimate stage career, Lillian Gish is to partially hide her identity, in that in "Marja of the Steppe" she wears a brunette wig, thus hiding her characteristic blond hair. In this subject she appears as a Russian girl who later comes to this country.

"Macbeth" Cast Is Picked

Constance Collier, the English actress, who came to the Coast and appeared in two subjects at the Morosco-Pallas Pictures studio, has been loaned to the Fine Arts Company to play opposite Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree to take the part of Lady Macbeth.

Previous to coming to America, Miss Collier played with Mr. Tree in Shakesperian productions. Wilfred Lucas, who has just completed playing the star part in "Acquitted," a Fine Arts drama, has been selected to appear in the role of Macduff; Ralph Lewis will play Banquo; Mary Alden, Lady Macduff; Spottiswoode Aitken, Duncan; Jack Brummel, Malcolm, and Raymond Wells, the Thane of Cowder. A number of scenes have already been completed for this. The first scenes were made Saturday.

The Third Annual ball of the Static Club of America, composed of almost a hundred camera men, is to be given at Rutherford Hall, Los Angeles, on January 28.

The Photoplay Authors' League, through its publication, The Script, began a campaign to secure for the writer credit in all advertising of the company, as well as on the screen.

The writers maintain that credit given to them will result favorably to the manufacturer the same as to the book publisher, also that the name of a scenario writer will become an asset to a picture, the same as the name of a star, or producer.

Hal Cooley, who was engaged to play juveniles in Signal Mutual masterpictures de luxe, has returned to the Universal stock company. Rhea Mitchell, also engaged by the Signal, has accepted a place with the American at Santa Barbara, and has gone to that city. She will be featured in American releases.

Signal Filming "Web of the Grafters"

The Signal Film Company is filming "The Web of the Grafters," in five reels, which is an "underworld" story dealing with the life of a young man who becomes a member of the police force. The first duty that falls to him is that of collecting graft money for the chief.

While doing traffic duty he becomes acquainted with the daughter of the mayor, and later when the grafters cause the murder of this girl's father, the young policeman becomes the leader in running down the grafters.

Norbert A. Myles is playing the juvenile lead; Edythe Sterling, the daughter of the mayor; Willard K. Wilson, juvenile heavy; F. J. MacDonald, character heavy, and the direction is in charge of Murdock MacQuarrie.

The new laboratories of the Signal Film Corporation are now completed, and in full operation. They are in charge of Orrin Denny and have a capacity of fifteen thousand negative development, and an equal amount of positive printing and finishing per day. The laboratory is equipped with Bell & Howell printers.

The Morosco and Pallas Company, headed by Dustin Farnum and director William E. Taylor, are braving the zero weather in the vicinity of Bear Lake Valley, making scenes for the coming production, "David Crockett." It will require a week or ten days in the snow country to complete the exteriors for this subject.

"Very Good, Eddie!"

The second Constance Collier-Morosco subject, "The Code of Marcia Gray," written and produced by Director Frank Lloyd, was completed during the past week. This is a story of modern social conditions and high finance in which Forrest Stanley plays the lead opposite Miss Collier. The nerve of Harry DeVere and Howard Davies was taxed to the limit one evening during the past week, when both of the men, neither one of whom can swim, rolled off the pier at Los Angeles harbor in a fight scene for "The Code of Marcia Gray." The shock of the cold water proved disastrous for Mr. DeVere, and other players had difficulty in rescuing him.

The interest in motion picture making was illustrated a few days ago when the Frank Lloyd Morosco company, including Constance Collier, and Forrest Stanley were filming a scene in the Los Angeles County jail.

Because of light conditions, a cell at the end of a corridor was selected, and rehearsals started there. It was impossible for one prisoner to see what was going on, and almost as soon as the photoplayers began work, a hand holding a mirror came out of a cell. The reflector was adjusted to secure the periscope effect, and the prisoner was thus able to watch the action.

J. C. Van Trees, cameraman, has been added to the photography staff of the Morosco and Pallas studios.

Lois Meredith, former Morosco legitimate stage actress, who was starred in "Help Wanted," "Peg o' My Heart," and other successes, and who has been playing in motion pictures for Pathe, has been engaged by the Balboa Company, and will be featured in five-reel subjects, the first of which is now being produced by Director Harry Harvey.

The producing company of the Balboa-Pathe serial, "The Red Circle," are now completing scenes for the thirteenth episode.

Departure from the usual class of productions is being made by the Balboa Company as their director, Henry King, has taken up the filming of a Western multiple reel subject.

Bertram Brackin, who for the past several years has produced for Balboa, has resigned and is now on a trip in the East. Prior to his work with Balboa, Mr. Brackin made a tour around the world for the Melies Company.

Can't Keep Marriage Bells from Ringing

The christening of the studio at the corner of Gower and Sunset Boulevard, Hollywood, as the permanent home of Nestor comedy, makers of the Al. E. Christie Motion Picture Company, occured Wednesday evening of last week, when a marriage was solemnized there.

All members of the two Nestor companies took part in this, but the principals were Harry Lyons, character comedian, and brother of Eddie Lyons, who hailed from the capital of the world, Beardstown, Illinois, and Helen Krell, popular and well known member of the younger social set of Chicago.

Al. E. Christie, father of the Nestors, in the absence of the bride's father, did the giving away. Eddie Lyons was best man, and Mary Lyons, who is here for a visit of a month, was maid of honor. Betty Compson, Billie Rhodes, and Ethel Lynn were bridesmaids, and Lee Moran was master of ceremonies.

The wedding took place in a set just completed and representing the interior of a college fraternity house. Following, a dinner was served the company at a popular down town cafe. The newlyweds have taken up bungalow life in Hollywood.

The event was a notable one in the history of the Nestor Company, in that the studio is located on the ground occupied by the first permanent studio in Hollywood, where Mr. Christie, as managing director, located on Thanksgiving Day of 1911, the company which was then the nucleus of what is now the Universal Company.

Al. E. Christie is producing "Lem's College Career," a semi-western comedy in two reels in which Lee Moran as the Easterner comes West to spend a vacation on a ranch, and, because of his popularity with the maids, gains the ill will of the cowboys.

Eddie Lyons as a cowboy, in love with the ranch owner's daughter, in order to win her as his bride, goes East to school, she prescribing that her husband must be a college man.

When Eddie reaches the Eastern university, Lee sees his opportunity to come back, and the hazing that follows is most severe. A big scene is that of a football game when Eddie comes forth in his spurs, chaps and sombrero. Betty Compson plays the feminine lead.

Nestor Filming "Across the Hall"

The Horace Davey-Nestor players are filming "Across the Hall," an apartment house comedy in one reel with Neal Burns, Ray Gallagher and Billie Rhodes.

Two notable additions were made to the Universal stock company this week in the persons of George Barnes and Thomas Jefferson. Barnes is an English vaudeville artist who will play in the Joker Company with Victor Potel, and the first subject in which he will appear is entitled, "When Bosco Disappeared."

Thomas Jefferson is the son of the internationally known Joe Jefferson of "Rip Van Winkle" fame, and is working in the company of William C. Dowlan as a character actor. The first subject in which Jefferson appears is "La Vinia Comes Home."

Actual production of "The Grey Seal" series, adapted from the stories entitled "The Professional Adventures of Jimmie Dale," by Frank L. Pritchard, have been begun by the William Worthington Universal Company.

Herbert Rawlinson appears in the part of Jimmie Dale, the son of a safe manufacturer, who as an expert wrecks safes manufactured by competitors. A mysterious woman induces him to take up other crimes by threatening to expose him.

The series gets its title from the fact that the safe wrecker always leaves a grey seal in or about a wrecked safe. The scenarios are adapted by H. G. Stafford and Calder Johnstone.

"Jenkins Trained Mice" Manager an Actor

H. L. Massie, "Buck," known from Coast to Coast, and gulf to lakes, because of his many years as advance man and general manager of circuses, including the celebrated Jenkins Trained Mice troupe, is wearing grease paint at Universal City in the impersonation of the president of the insurance trust in the eleventh episode of the "Graft" serial.

Although Buck Massie has been connected with the Universal for the past year, this is the first work before the clicking camera, and the unfortunate feature of it all is that his thousands of friends throughout the country will see him killed off in cold blood.

Richard Stanton, who is directing the production of this thirty-reeler, is now playing the lead part, that of the honorable Robert A. Harding, a relative of the family, exterminated by the graft circle.

Hobart Henley, who has been at the Universal Coast studios for nine months, is leaving for New York City, where he will play leads for a special feature company to be organized.

A one and two-reel subject has just been finished by the Julian Universal company, the smaller being entitled "The Blackmailer," which portrays a woman gaining possession of letters, and thus foiling the man who had forced her to furnish him with money.

The principal parts of this are taken by Rupert Julian and his wife, Elsie Jane Wilson. The two-reel subject is "Ship Me —Home," the title being given because of the wife of a representative of an English trading company located in the Panama Canal Zone, continually wishing to return to her native land, while the husband is contented and prosperous in his position in the south. The story has a melodramatic plot.

Teacher for Children at "U" City

Because of the number of children employed at Universal City, it has been found advantageous to open a school there, and a teacher has been engaged.

There are between ten and fifteen children employed at this producing plant continuously, and they will be in charge of Hazel Hunt, who was selected by the Board of Education. School hours will be such that children can take part in pictures a few hours every day.

Rumors have been afloat to the effect that J. D. Spreckles, the San Diego millionaire, has purchased a big allotment of stock in the Universal company, and was to soon succeed President Carl Laemmle.

Also that Spreckles is to move the producing plant to San Diego, where he is owner of the entire town, or at least has controlling interest in many of the corporations owning street cars, water, telephone, boat, fuel, light, and other public utilities.

Because of these rumors, President Carl Laemmle this week made a statement to the public press denying every phase, and asserted that Mr. Spreckles has not purchased any stock, nor have there been any negotiations.

Director Oscar Apfel, assistant Lester Scott, William Farnum, Dorothy Bernard, Studio Business Manager Moe Morris, Cameraman Alfredo Gondolphi, and about forty others constituting the Fox company, now filming "Hoodman Blind," from the successful stage play of twenty-five years ago, this week went to Rio Vista in the lumber regions north of San Francisco, where they will remain ten days or more for exterior scenes.

During their absence from the studio, work of completing the new stage is being carried on with the hope that it will be ready by the time the players return.

The size of this is to be 65 x 90 feet, and will afford sufficient space so that sets may be built on one stage while the company is working on the other.

Anita King Holds Receeption in Northwest

Anita King, the Paramount-Lasky girl, is just home from Seattle, Spokane, Tacoma and other Northwesern cities, where she won additional honors.

She went to Seattle to preside at the opening at the new Coliseum theatre, and remained there several days. One afternoon was devoted to a reception to girls who wished to become screen queens.

The announcement of this went out in two morning papers and theatre and hotel managers thought that probably ten or a few more would call, but they were greatly surprised when they came by hundreds, in many cases mothers bringing their daughters.

It is estimated that Miss King greeted more than six hundred during the afternoon. Tea was served, together with portions of a two hundred and twenty-five-pound fruit cake presented Miss King by the Northern Pacific Railway.

Zoe Beck, the five-year-old Chicago girl who has played in pictures for the past year, principally with the Biograph company, has been engaged by the Universal, and is now playing in "Through Baby's Voice," a one-reel subject by Calder Johnstone, being produced by George Cochran.

Douglas Girrard and Edna Maison are the other principals in this photoplay.

Historie Town in Lasky Subject

Jamestown, Virginia, has been reproduced on the Lasky lot as it appeared in 1621 for scenes in "To Have and to Hold." The green is represented, together with the governor's mansion, church, and in all about twelve buildings of log cabin type.

One of the big scenes made on this location will be the apportioning or distribution of the bevy of girls who came to America to become wives of the pioneers, known in history as "Sir Edward's Doves."

Mae Murray appears as one of the doves in this subject in the featured part.

Work will be taken up this week by Director Turner in the filming of "The Gay Lord Waring," adapted from the book of Houghton Townley, by F. McGrew Willis.

Jack Kerrigan is appearing in the name part, with a supporting company composed of Bertram Grassby, Lois Wilson, Maude George, Howard Holland, and Harry Carter.

The remaining scenes of the Carter De Haven subject, "Get the Boy," by Ford I. Beebe, will be filmed under the direction of Harry Carter, supervision by Otis Turner.

J. P. McGOWAN AND HELEN HOLMES IN "SPIKE'S AWAKENING," CHAPTER 7 OF "THE GIRL AND THE GAME" (Signal-Mutual Serial)

Director Allen Curtis is filming the one-reel Joker "Too Many Wives," which has the usual Joker players for its cast.

Work of completing the Universal-Rex five-reel subject, "The Altar of Friendship" is being carried on at the enclosed studio.

Principals in this adaptation of the Isabel Ostrander story are Lon Chaney, Agnes Vernon, Louise Lovely, Colin Chase, Marjorie Allison, Hayward Mack, Jay Belasco, and little George French.

The Jacques Jaccard western company is filming the two-reel story, "The Wedding Guest," featuring Harry Carey.

Smalley Completes Power Film

The first Tyrone Power Universal feature has been completed under the direction of the Smalleys, and the second entitled "John Needham's Double," will be taken up in a few days.

This as the first will consist of five reels. Olga Printzlau adapted the story by Joseph Hatton. The cast for this subject has not been selected.

The Lloyd B. Carleton Feature Company, headed by Hobart Bosworth, are making the final scenes for "Dr. Neighbor," a five-reel psychological drama with an exceptionally strong cast which includes Gretchen Lederer, Dorothy Davenport, Adele Farrington, Margaret Whistler, Orring Johnston and Charles Hickman.

A Central African story of two reels, "Under the Leopard's Paw," is being filmed by Jay Hunt and company, of 101 Bison players.

Jack Lait, author of "Help Wanted," is engaged in preparing a new photoplay series for the Balboa Amusement Producing Company. This will be Mr. Lait's first subject written for the screen.

D. F. Whitcomb, after taking a brief lay-off, has again become a member of the Balboa's scenario staff. Mr. Whitcomb is a former newspaperman, and the author of "The Shrine of Happiness," "Pawns of the War God," etc.

Donald MacDonald, director at the American studios at Santa Barbara, has just completed the five-reel feature entitled "The White Rosette."

This is a reincarnation story showing the destinies of three people. E. Forrest Taylor, Helene Rosson, Eugenie Forde, William Stowell and Harry Von Meter are those in the cast.

"When the Light Came" and "According to Saint John" are two Mustang photoplays recently completed by Tom Chatterton at the American studios.

In "When the Light Came," Anna Little did some very daring riding at El Capitan ranch, near Santa Barbara, and also displayed her ability to handle cattle.

WESTERN LUBIN PUTS IN A WEEK ON "GULF BETWEEN"

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

San Diego, Cal., Jan. 12.

The Western Lubin Company has been at work for the past week on a three-reeler entitled "The Gulf Between," a script by Tom Gibson, of Los Angeles.

Edward Sloman has been directing, with D. L. Davis at the camera. It is a story concerning opium smuggling, with a romance woven in. Alan Forrest appears as Fred Mason, a society man who joins the customs service, and Jay Morley is seen as Bob Austin, his friend, also an inspector.

The part of James Vorec, the head of the opium operators, is taken by Melvin Mayo, while Helen Walcott impersonates Helen Vorec, his daughter, who is innocent of her father's illegal traffic.

George Routh takes the part of Joe Bent, Vorec's right-hand man and a rejected suitor for Helen's affection. Ben Hopkins appears as Brant, the head of the service, and George Spencer as a butler in the Burrows family.

Evelyn Page, a recent acquisition to the company, is seen as Amy Burrows, a society girl, while Adelaide Bronti appears as her mother, Mrs. Burrows.

Jay Morley, who is participating in one or two of the pictures at the Lubin studio, is also filling a month's engagement in stock with the Jane O'Roark Players at the Empress.

Julian Lamothe has returned to his desk at the Lubin studio as scenario editor, after spending the holiday season at his old home in New Orleans. ALLEN H. WRIGHT.

Film News From Foreign Parts

Last Year Beats 1914 With 200 Exclusives in England

London, Jan. 22.

STATISTICS of last year's trade indicate that over two hundred more exclusive subjects were put on the market than during 1914, and side by side with this fact it is noteworthy that there were 2,000 less open market films issued than during 1914.

Although during recent months the vogue of the exclusive has increased enormously, it has by no means yet reached—in fact it is a long way off—its zenith, and in proportion to production of multi-reel subjects, it seems likely that the number of exclusives will be augmented.

Big films are in great demand—the support given to Metro, Broadway, and Blue Ribbon Features demonstrate this, and by way of comparison it is interesting to note that while at one time exhibitors were most nervous about showing anything longer than two or three reels, many now consider a four or five reeler not only desirable, but necessary.

The feeling against the exclusive film so recently as twelve months ago was most hostile, but competition has had the effect of compromising this, and dissension is becoming less and less. At the same time, however, the position of the open market film is firmly consolidated. There was a total of 4,800 subjects for 1915. An innovation is being made by the Vitagraph Company, which announces that henceforth the whole of its output, beyond a certain length will be rented, and in this category will save the popular Blue Ribbon and Broadway Star Features.

The renting of these films will be supervised by a special department, which will have the appellation of the Vitagraph Renting Company—a title which fully explains itself.

"An American Home" will be the first subject to be dealt with under the new arrangements. Incidentally, it may be mentioned that the first Vitagraph serial, "The Goddess," will be put on the market shortly. An important statement may be expected shortly from the Edison Company concerning their open market releases. Is there another surprise in store?

Chief Constables and Censorship

One of the principal grievances of the manager is the unsatisfactory basis for the censorship of films in Great Britain.

It is true that there is a British board of film censors, but as this is supported entirely by the film trade, the magistrates of many of the provincial towns refuse to recognize the certificates issued by the board, and either assume the role of censors themselves or delegate their functions to certain of the police officials. The war, however, has imposed extra duties on these officials, and there is no doubt that considerable difficulty and unpleasantness is being experienced by the authorities in fulfilling the taste which they set out to perform, as evidenced by a decision come to at a meeting of the Lancashire Chief Constable Association, who passed a resolution calling upon the government to appoint a censorship of films.

It may be interesting to mention that twelve of these officials have been served with writs for condemning films, and whether they were smarting under this procedure they accepted the resolution as a matter for conjecture.

From the feeling which prevails among the exhibitors of my acquaintance, one can state that there is a strong feeling that the present board should receive official sanction from the government, and if this were done, much of the friction which now constantly occurs would be done away with, and the local powers would be obliged to accept the rulings of the board.

Unanimity would thus be assured and there would be an end to the chaos which has been manifested on occasions during the last few months.

The film artiste who is now winning his laurels as a fun-provoker is Billy Reeves who appears on the Lubin comedies of which I have heard a great deal of favorable comment.

Exhibitors and renters are looking forward to seeing more of these appealing comics. L-Ko comics, showing Billy Ritchie, have attained considerable success.

Pathe Freres, Vitagraph and Nestor (Trans-Atlantic Co.) are all doing a big share of the trade in comics. I hear that a new series is to be issued shortly by the Lubin Company, featuring D. L. Don, whose films by Mr. Brockless, the English renter of Lubin productions, declares, "will receive the hearty support of the open market exhibitor." The house of H. A. Browne & Company, the English and colonial agents for Kriterion Sales Corporation of New York, have issued a new brand of comedies known as "Kine-Billy," produced by Billy Merson, the eminent music hall frolic, featuring Fred Leslie, also of vaudeville fame. "Patriotic Mrs. Brown," the first of the series is 1,070 feet and is quite exhilirating in tone.

Topically, it is full of appeal, portraying, as it does, the emotions of a wife who on the grip of a patriotic fervor, shows a greater fondness for a soldier billeted at her house, than her husband, who ultimately re-establishes himself.

J. D. Tippett, managing director of the Transatlantic Company, who has just returned to England, has been evidently much impressed by his visit to the States, and has announced that his company intend to import two new brands of five reel exclusives—"The Red Feather" and "The Blue Bird," to be released weekly.

Of the latter great hopes are entertained, and it is declared that they will raise the are of the photo play to a plane hitherto unheard of. As one of the biggest supporters of the open market, considerable interest attaches to the announcement that the Trans-Atlantic Company intend to increase their output to 20,000 feet per week.

Renters' Society

A new company has been registered in London known as the Kinematograph Renters' Society of Great Britain and Ireland for the purpose of promoting the interests of persons engaged in the cinema film renting, manufacturing, producing and exhibiting trade.

No person may become a member of the society unless bona-fide engaged in purchasing or leasing at least 20,000 feet every calendar month or first release open market film and renting same.

The Essanay films, showing the six-year-old twins, the Misses Ida and Ella Mackenzie, have been given a very favorable reception, and the first of the series entitled, "The Little Prospector," has vreated a decided impression. This will be succeeded by "The Indian's Narrow Escape." The doings of the precocious youngsters are full of interest for both grown ups and the children. The stories of films in which the juvenile Mackenzies appear, will be published in the well-known children's magazine, Little Folks, which will afford valuable publicity.

The Barker Motion Photography Company has purchased the cinematograph rights of a number of popular novels and plays. This firm is making a bold step forward, and it is expected that by the end of this month the new factory, which they have built in London, will be opened.

Preparations are being made for doing business on a much bigger scale than in the past, and I learn that the framework alone of the new factory has cost over $55,000.

Growing business has made it necessary for the Williamson Film Printing Company to increase the plant, and they have now opened a new factory at Barnet.

The Ideal Company has up to the present received over three hundred bookings for its great feature film, "Caste," which portrays Sir John Hare.

THREE TENSE MOMENTS FROM "THE YELLOW PASSPORT," A WORLD FILM SUBJECT, STARRING CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG

WORK ON "THE IMMORTAL FLAME" BEGUN BY IVAN

"The Immortal Flame" is in process of production at the Ivan studio under the direction of Ivan Abramson. The theme treats of the immortality of true love and the sacrifices and heartaches one can undergo when imbued with the spirit of this divine fire.

It was written especially to feature Maude Fealy by Ivan Abramson, who realized that an important role was necessary for the famous star of the screen and stage.

An especially strong supporting company headed by Paula Shay, Joseph Burke, James Cooley, Edna Luby and Willard Case appear in the cast.

As soon as the interiors are filmed the entire company will leave for Washington, where some of the most important scenes in the play will be taken. Several of the official buildings will be used.

MAUDE FEALY

It is expected that "The Immortal Flame" will be ready for release the early part of March.

Clara Kimball Young Company for 2 Months in Cuba

Old Fortifications at Santiago, with Its Underground Passages, Torture Chambers and Dungeons, Will Be Used for Drama of Modern Spain, World Subject

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG, the World Film star, left last week for Cuba where the big scenes for a new spectacular feature to be called "The Feast of Life," will be made. It is announced the production will be the most pretentious in which Miss Young has yet appeared.

Special permission has been obtained from the Cuban Government to use the old fortifications at Santiago, and the underground passages, torture chambers and dungeons will be "wired" and studio lights installed, so that the mysteries of the old fortifications will be exposed to the public eye.

The period of the drama is modern Spain, and in its development hundreds of characters appear, and sets of great magnitude will be employed, according to advance reports.

The scenario is by Frances Marion, who is said to have written in this play a vehicle remarkably suited to Miss Young's ability.

On the site of the new World Film tropical studios near Santiago work on the picture is proceeding under the direction of Albert Capellani, who expects to make full use of the rugged mountains, beautiful bays and tropical scenery of the island.

It is expected the company will remain in Cuba two months or more. During this time the sets now under construction will be capable of utilization.

A special train of five cars conveyed Miss Young's company from New York to Key West, where a steamer had been chartered for the second stage of the journey to Havana.

A train took the party across the island to Santiago. In the party were Miss Young, Paul Capellani, who will be her leading man, Director Albert Capellani, Robert Frazer, Mrs. Lewis J. Selznick, and a large supporting cast.

Lewis J. Selznick, vice-president of the World Film Corporation, will join the party later.

Three camera men and a full supply of chemicals suited to tropical climates were taken along.

Anna Held Picture Is Scheduled for February 7

Morosco Preserves French Atmosphere in Settings of "Madame La Presidente," Based on Play of Same Name by Maurice Hennequin and Pierre Veber

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the New York offices of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company that Anna Held's initial subject, "Madame La Presidente," has been completed at the Los Angeles studios of the company, and will be released on the Paramount program, February 7.

"Madame La Presidente" is adapted from the play of the same name by Maurice Hennequin and Pierre Veber. In Europe the play enjoyed remarkable success, and in this country it was presented about two years ago, with Fannie Ward.

The photoplay version, it is announced, has been staged lavishly. The French atmosphere has been preserved in the settings, the type of furniture used, the reproduction of the tall doors of the French Chamber of Justice, the imported telephones, and other items which go to make up the desired realism.

A large cast is presented in support of Miss Held, including Forrest Stanley, Herbert Standing, Page Peters, Lydia Yeaman Titus, Helen Eddy, Howard Davies and Dick La Strange.

A feature of the production, according to advance reports, is the display of costly gowns worn by the star. They were brought to this country fresh from her Parisian modiste.

A large amount of money is said to have been expended on the production. In addition to Miss Held's salary, which is reported to have been $25,000, the producers chartered a private car to convey her to the Pacific Coast studios from New York, and leased a villa in Pasadena which was used by the star during her stay in California.

The photoplay rights to the play were purchased through Sanger and Jordan at a considerable figure, according to the Morosco announcement.

STAR COMEDY CARTOONS IN SEVENTH WEEK AT BROADWAY

The Star Comedy Cartoons, which are being handled on a state right basis by the Herald Film Corporation of 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York, opened on their seventh week at the Broadway theatre, New York City, last Sunday.

The rights for Ohio, western Pennsylvania and West Virginia has been sold to the Quality Film Company, of Pittsburg; California, Nevada and Arizona to C. L. Williams & Co. of San Francisco, Cal.

Northern Jersey goes to the Metropolitan Motion Picture Company of Newark, N. J.; Missouri and Kansas to H. G. Gill of Kansas City, Mo., and Greater New York to the Star Comedy Cartoon Service of 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York.

Negotiations are pending for a number of territories throughout the United States as well as for Canada and Europe. From the reports received from territories already closed these cartoons are meeting with popular favor wherever shown.

Letters are received daily from exhibitors from all the country inquiring where these cartoons may be booked in their respective territories.

DINNER HELD IN HONOR OF COHN, EDITOR, UNIVERSAL ANIMATED WEEKLY

On Wednesday, January 19, at Murray's, New York, Jack Cohn, editor-in-chief of the Universal Animated Weekly, was tendered a dinner by the heads of the topical news departments of other organizations.

The purpose of the dinner was to congratulate Mr. Cohn on the scoop he made last fall when he entered the Sheepshead Bay track and filmed parts of the Astor Cup race, developing his negatives in time to exhibit them at the Strand theatre, the same night.

Those present at the dinner were, Pell Mitchell, editor of The Mutual Weekly; S. MacKean, editor Hearst-Vitagraph News; Fred Beck, editor Paramount-Newspictures, and Messrs. Mayell and Cohen, editor and assistant editor, respectively, of Pathé News.

Mr. Cohn received the hearty congratulations of all present on his alacrity in getting the pictures to the Strand in such record time.

"Every Need of Director Taken Care of"—Blackton

Vitagraph Looks Far Ahead to Prepare for Developments in the Industry, in Making Plans for Its Studio Designed to Accommodate 12 Studio Supervisors at Once

THE Vitagraph Company announces that plans are in process of preparation for the construction of a studio which will be unique in many respects. It will probably occupy a site at or near East Fifteenth street and Locust avenue, which is now a vacant lot.

When completed the building will meet the needs of the modern screen director in every particular.

"We are not prepared just at this time to tell the amount of money we propose to invest in the new studio," said J. Stuart Blackton, vice-president of the Vitagraph, "but undoubtedly every need of the producer and director will be taken care of.

"We have tried to look a long way ahead and prepare ourselves for new developments in the moving picture enterprise."

According to the present plan, the main studio will occupy a space of 150 x 200 feet. In this will be twelve minor studios,each providing space in which a director can proceed with his instructions.

This will do away with wasted time and will thus reduce overhead charges, placing the business on the most efficient basis as regards film output.

It will concentrate the work and give opportunity for the production of more plays, thus meeting the continually growing demands for this line of entertainment.

The most modern equipment will characterize the new building. It will be fireproof and special attention will be paid to ventilation. Bedrooms, bathrooms, living rooms and other conveniences wil be part of the equipment.

This Might Sound Unbelievable But It's True

A Woman Out Kansas Way, Mrs. Cora G. Lewis of Kinsley, a Member of the State Board of Administration, Advocates a Strict Censorship of Music for the Pictures

Kansas City, Jan. 29.

AND now comes a woman of Kansas who would have the music in the motion picture theatres of that state censored before allowing it to be played at a motion picture entertainment.

She is Mrs. Cora G. Lewis, of Kinsley, Kansas, a member of the state board of administration, and she advocates a strict censorship of motion picture music, the same as that applied to films.

She talked before one of the women's clubs in Kansas City recently and stated that the censoring of the music of the motion picture theatres would cause mothers and fathers to become interested in better music and that she was going to take the matter up with the state educators of Kansas, to see if the matter of censorship could not be worked out.

This would mean that the exhibitors of Kansas will have another heavy tax thrown on their shoulders. If such things as these are kept up in the state of Kansas it is only going to be a matter of time until the exhibitor will be compelled to close his theatre, for he will be taxed to such an extent that he will be unable to make a living.

It is not probable that any radical censorship such as is advocated by Mrs. Lewis will go through, for there no doubt will be in the next legislature enough members who are business men who can see that if another burden of censorship is put on the shoulders of the exhibitor he will be compelled to close his show. And these men would not allow such a measure to pass.

SCENES FROM "DIMPLES," METRO'S NEW FIVE PART STARRING VEHICLE FOR MARY MILES MINTER

METRO PICTURES BOOKED FOR LOEW HOUSES IN BOSTON TERRITORY

Boston, Jan. 29.

Opening of Loew's new Orpheum theatre in Boston recently was a triumph for Metro pictures, since it signalized the fact that Marcus Loew had entered into a contract for the presentation of Metro pictures in all his playhouses in this territory.

The first Metro shown at the Orpheum was "The House of Tears," in which Emily Stevens is starred.

Louis B. Mayer, manager of the Boston Metro office, was present, holding an informal reception in the lobby. Manager Meagher, of the Globe, and Manager Brennan, of the St. James, also assisted in opening the new house.

Metro under the new arrangement will be shown, among other houses, in the Bijou in Fall River, and the St. James in Boston.

Billy Armstrong in Horsley Release February 4

Star in Cub Comedy Was Associated with Charley Chaplin and Comes from England, Where He Played Under Management of Karno in "Early Birds" and Other Successes

IN the Cub Comedy release on the Mutual program for February 4, David Horsley introduces a featured comedian new to this brand. The newcomer is Billy Armstrong, recently an associate of Charley Chaplin in his release with Essanay, and previously a member of Fred Karno's various pantomime companies in England.

The fact that Billy Armstrong is featured in the aforementioned Cub release does not mean that the George Ovey releases are to be discontinued. For that time being the Ovey subjects will be alternated in the release chart with the Armstrong pictures.

The comedies presenting the new Horsley star are different in type from those featuring Ovey, being constructed along more pronounced farcial lines.

An all-comedy cast has been furnished Armstrong by Mr. Horsley, the comedian's chief aides being Tommy Hayes and Grace Gibson.

Billy Armstrong is a pantomimic comedian of wide experience. He is still a young man, having been born in Bristol, England, in 1881.

He made his first appearance on the stage with his father, a well known comedian of his day, at the Alhambra theatre in Paris and was with his father until 1910 when Fred Karno, the biggest pantomime producer in England, made him an offer which he accepted.

For four years he played under Karno's management, being associated during that time with Charley Chaplin, Billy Reeves, Billy Ritchie and Syd Chaplin.

He appeared in the juvenile part in "The Early Birds"; the comedy conjurer in "A Night in an English Music Hall"; the comedy lead in "The Wow Wow's"; the principal comedy part in "The New Slavey," and also played opposite Syd Chaplin in "The Hydro"—all Karno productions.

Armstrong came to this country in March, 1915, at the call of Charley Chaplin to play opposite that comedian in Essanay productions.

Among the releases in which he appeared were "By the Sea," and "In the Bank," his role in the latter picture being that of the janitor.

Tommy Hayes, who is playing opposite Armstrong, is also an English comedian. He was born in Ireland, but as a youth went to England where he began his stage career.

The leading woman in Armstrong's company is Grace Gibson, who, by a peculiar coincidence, is also a native of the British Isles.

She was born in Wales, but when a child was brought to this country by her parents. She made her first appearance on the stage in 1905 at Volk's Winter Garden, New York.

Following this engagement she toured the Orpheum circuit in a character singing act under the management of Martin Beck. She next joined Olga Nethersole's company, playing one season with it, and then was engaged by the Shuberts for musical comedy parts. At the conclusion of this engagement Miss Gibson took up motion picture work, appearing in the releases of several different companies.

The title of the first Armstrong release is "The Defective Detective." The following week, February 11, the Cub release will be "Jerry's Millions," in which George Ovey is featured.

Injuries of Player in Hospital Fail to Check Work

Ford-Universal, Making Scenes for Five Subjects, Including "Study of Light and Shade" and "Betty's Bandit," Take Incidents While Miss Cunard Is Compelled to Remain Indoors

Los Angeles, Jan. 29.

THE Ford-Cunard-Universal Company are now making scenes for five different subjects, portions of which were filmed while Miss Cunard was recently confined to a local hospital, as the result of injuries received in the making of scenes.

Three of these are one-reel subjects, and entitled "A Study of Light and Shade"; "Betty's Bandits," and "The Bandit's Wager."

"The Madcap Queen of Corona" consists of two reels, and contains several characters familiar to those who viewed the "Lucile Love" and "Broken Coin" serials.

In fact, the action takes place around an imaginary principality, and deals with the prince and count both being in love with the madcap queen. Jack Holt and Neal Hardin both have important parts in this subject.

Another subject to be finished by the Ford-Cunard company, now that Miss Cunard has returned, is entitled "His Majesty Dick Turpin," which is a serial of two episodes, each of two reels.

The cast for this is composed of Peter Gerald, I. Lipner, Jack Holt, Neal Hardin, Lou Short, Robert Murdock and Burton S. Wilson.

In this subject characters including Prince Frederick, the Madcap Queen, originated for the "Broken Coin" serial, take part.

Prince Frederick upon reading the adventures of Dick Turpin who robs the rich to benefit the poor, decides to follow this plan and commits wholesale robberies of the wealthy class to aid the poor to pay taxes.

When he is about to be captured by the officers of the king, his father, the announcement is made that the king has suddenly died, and the prince escapes punishment by becoming his own ruler.

Sol Lesser Opens His New York Office in 43d Street

Pacific Coast Exchangeman Whose State Rights Propositions on Feature Productions Will Be Considered at His Eastern Headquarters, Is Located at 218 West 42nd Street

SOL LESSER, well known as an exchangeman with large affiliations on the Pacific Coast, has extended his activities, and on January 28 opened elaborate offices in New York.

These offices comprise a whole floor at 218 West Forty-second street, from which Mr. Lesser will exploit "The Ne'er-Do-Well," to which he recently obtained the national rights. This is Rex Beach's famous dramatic story, produced by Selig, and now being distributed on a states right basis by Mr. Lesser.

On his trip East, Mr. Lesser stopped at Chicago for a conference with W. N. Selig. There he was joined by E. M. Asher, his personal representative, who came on to New York with him.

Mr. Lesser reports great success for "The Ne'er-Do-Well." Just before leaving the coast he placed the production at Clune's Auditorium, Los Angeles, where it played a three weeks' engagement to capacity, and he is now negotiating with a number of large theatres in New York and Chicago.

One of the last things Mr. Lesser did on the Pacific Coast was to place "The Ne'er-Do-Well" in the Portola theatre, San Francisco, where it opened on January 23.

On the train he received this telegram from Manager Roth of the Portola: "Opening 'Ne'er-Do-Well'—topped opening of Spoilers. Public enthusiastic. Congratulations."

Mr. Lesser announces that his new deal will in no way affect his Western enterprises. His states rights on feature productions will be considered at his New York offices for the Golden Gate Film Exchange and the All Star Feature Distributors.

"NATION" BARRED IN KANSAS

Special to Motion Picture News

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 29.

"The Birth of a Nation" cannot be shown in the state of Kansas. That has been the verdict of the Kansas censor board and they have been sustained by the appeal board.

Many exhibitors throughout the state wanted to show this picture and according to them their patrons wanted to see it. But the censors have set their foot down.

ILLUSTRATING POSTERS ISSUED BY PARAMOUNT TO ACCOMPANY THE BRAY CARTOONS AND GILBERT SILHOUETTES

"THE CRAVING," MASTERPICTURE, IS NEARLY FINISHED

Within a few days the special feature company of the American studios at Santa Barbara, Calif., headed by William Russell, Charlotte Burton and Roy Stewart, the heavyweight heavy, will have finished the five reel Mutual Masterpicture de Luxe, "The Craving."

The first scenes for this were made in Los Angeles when the American players bucked the line of the football team of the University of Washington.

Both Mr. Stewart and Mr. Russell found they had their hands full in the football game scenes, but emerged from the struggle, filmed on a sea of mud, without a scar. This same organization recently filmed "The Thoroughbred."

Kalem Makes Jacksonville a Producing Center

"The Metropolis," Published in the Florida Winter Resort, Acknowledges the Part the Motion Picture Company Has Played in the Development of the City

NOW that Jacksonville, Fla., is enjoying its greatest picture season since a picture company first located there, and more and more screen producing organizations are announcing their intention of putting companies to work in the Florida territory, Kalem is particularly proud of the part it has played in the development of Jacksonville.

That this pride is justified is well proven by a tribute to Kalem which appeared in a recent issue of the Jacksonville Metropolis.

In this issue, a special motion picture edition, the local writer also declared Jacksonville's pride in having Rose Melville, the creator of the famous Sis Hopkins, located in that city. The article continued:

"When Kalem recently announced the acquisition of the famous Rose Melville, creator of Sis Hopkins, for a series of motion picture comedies, it was a foregone conclusion that Jacksonville would be the scene of the production of the pictures, for Kalem has been a Jacksonville booster since its first director shouted 'Lights' in this city.

"Since 1909—which in this infant picture business is like saying 'since 1776'—every winter has found the Kalem organization at work in this city.

"It would be almost impossible to attempt to calculate how many thousands of feet of Kalem film have carried the beauties of Jacksonville to the world.

"The roster of stage and screen stars who have come to 'Jax' with the Kalem Company would make an equally formidable list, as would an attempt to total the columns of newspaper and magazine publicity concerning Kalem that have brought the name of Jacksonville to the country.

"Nor has this company been backward in taking stars from Jacksonville. Kalem producers have been quick to recognize the ability of local players. Right now the company at work on the 'Sis Hopkins' comedies carries on its roster such familiar names to local ears as Arthur Albertson, Mary Kennedy and Miss Cohen, particularly.

"Those who have been fortunate enough to secure an opportunity to watch the 'Sis Hopkins' company at work in the local studio are loud in their praise of the organization.

"Rose Melville has surprised even the severe critics of the studio and private projection room by her ability to adapt herself to the screen."

"Battle Cry of Peace" Makes Stir in the Capital

Members of Military Organizations and Other Individuals Interested in "Preparedness" Seek Permission from Management of Moore's Strand to Speak on Mission of the Picture

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.

NEVER before have the citizens as citizens taken such a vital interest in a motion picture production as has been evinced in the presentation of "The Battle Cry of Peace" at Moore's Strand theatre.

Military organizations and individuals interested in the cry of "preparedness" have taken this as an occasion to seek permission from the management to speak on the mission which this photoplay so vividly presents.

Mr. Moore, however, has kept such permissions within the bounds of the dignity of the production. Headed by Mrs. John A. Logan, the women's section of the Navy League arranged a special performance of "The Battle Cry of Peace" at the Strand, at which not only Mrs. Logan spoke, but others as well.

Among these may be mentioned Mrs. V. Poe Wilson, recording secretary of the woman's section of the Navy League; Mrs. Frank D. Odenheimer, president general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy; Mrs. William Cumming Story, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution; and representatives from the Woman's Relief Corps, Colonial Dames, and other patriotic societies.

Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, who is responsible for this production, was also a speaker at several performances. While in Washington, he took occasion to express his pleasure at the serious and patriotic manner in which Mr. Moore has presented his production.

It has been his desire to keep this from sensationalism, as he believed this would detract from the keynote of its mission—that of preparedness. In the capital of the nation, above all places, was he desirous that this motion picture should be given a dignified viewing.

The city might be said to have gone "Battle-Cry-of-Peace"-wild, for there has been a steady line of anxious patrons waiting outside the Strand for a block in length from two to four deep.

Extra police have been detailed about the theatre to keep order among the crowds going and coming. All the newspaper and magazine material published had not been able to bring the lesson of "preparedness" so vividly to the public.

World Film Corporation Acquires Equitable Stock

Arthur H. Spiegel, Formerly of Chicago, Heads New Organization, Which Will Be Known As World Film and Will Command $800,000 Working Capital—Two Features a Week Will Be Released—Dual Program—Lewis J. Selznick Retires and Plans to Produce Pictures Independently

THE World Film Corporation has acquired the stock of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, according to a statement sponsored by Milton C. Work, chairman of the Board of Directors of World Film.

Mr. Work's statement, which has appeared in the daily press, follows:

"For some time we have been considering the acquisition of another film company, as it became apparent that by doing so we could greatly enhance our efficiency and make and distribute pictures more economically. The board of the World Film Corporation has therefore decided, and their decision has been ratified by the voting trustees, to acquire the stock of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation. The majority of the Equitable shareholders have accepted this offer, and we believe that all of the shares of the Equitable corporation will be exchanged under the proposed plan.

Spiegel Heads New Combination

"Mr. Arthur Spiegel, president of the Spiegel May Stern Company, of Chicago, will head the new combination and take immediate charge of the active conduct of the business. Eight hundred thousand dollars of additional working capital has been provided. The corporation will release two feature pictures each week. Mr. Spiegel was induced to come to New York only after he had become satisfied that the capital requirements of the new organization had been adequately taken care of, that the future of the company was assured and that it might be used as the basis of a world-wide organization.

"Mr. Selznick has canceled his contract as general manager and resigned as vice-president of the corporation. He proposes, however, to engage in the manufacture of pictures and will thoroughly co-operate with the new management of the World Film Corporation in the future development of its business."

Mr. Spiegel, when seen late Saturday evening, favored the interviewers with a statement of the future policy, prospects and plans outlined for the newly conceived dual program. The new company will bear the name of the World Film Corporation, but the arrangement will continue whereby the two weekly releases will bear the individual titles of Equitable and World Film. The gross releasing capacity at least for the forthcoming year, will aggregate one hundred and four features.

Business Policy Outlined

An out and out business policy administered by heads of the five most important executive departments, namely, sales, service, film, publicity and advertising, is the concrete intention of the reorganized concerns.

Mr. Spiegel, the newly installed head of the dual concern, as head of the Spiegel May Stern Company, Chicago, founded and developed that business to large proportions.

Under the supervision of the production department heads, the following directors will be actively engaged for World Film: Maurice Tourneur, Albert Capellani, Barry O'Neil, Emile Chautard, Frank Crane. These players will work for World: Clara Kimball Young, Holbrook Blinn, Robert Warwick, Alice Brady, Francis Nelson, Chester Barnett and June Elvidge; and for Equitable these directors will work: Frank Powell, James Durkin, S. E. V. Taylor, Edmund Lawrence, Harry Handworth, John Ince and Burton King, and under their direction these stars will work: Gail Kane, Carlyle Blackwell, Clara Whipple, Arthur Ashley, Mary Boland, Bruce McRae, Mary Charleson, Muriel Ostriche, Henry Kolker, Charles J. Ross, John Mason, Edwardes Davis, Edna Wallace Hopper, Gerda Holmes, Kitty Gordon and others.

Within a few weeks the new companies will launch a comprehensive advertising campaign. A general bettering of delivery of accessories and exploitation material will be instituted so that an exhibitor can, if he considers it essential, exploit his plays a month in advance.

Bernstein Directs Production Department

Isidor Bernstein will be in direct general control of the productional department of both World and Equitable. Mr. Bernstein will assume command of the fourteen directors at present permanently engaged at the six studios of the company. The producing of each picture will begin only after the five principal departments, sales, publicity, service, film and advertising, have sponsored the written book, it is announced.

With the exception of the branch managers and actual sales forces in the field, each of the heads of departments will have a vote and veto in the final selection of material to be visualized.

This policy will be a direct effort to appeal to the ultimate consumer in behalf of the immediate consumer, or to help the exhibitor interest and appeal to his buyer.

Three Women Stars in Lasky Subjects for March

Mae Murray Will Make Her Screen Debut in "To Have and to Hold"; Fannie Will Be Seen in "For the Defense," and Blanche Sweet in "The Sowers"

WITH three prominent women stars in the leading roles, the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company in March will release on the Paramount Program, some feature productions of interest.

The stars and the plays in which they will appear are: Mae Murray, who makes her debut on the screen in Paramount theatres, in a picturization of Mary Johnson's "To Have and to Hold"; Fannie Ward in "For the Defense," and Blanche Sweet in "The Sowers."

The first of the three to be released will be Mae Murray in "To Have and to Hold," on March 5. Miss Murray, one of the popular stars of the musical comedy stage for several years and declared to be among the most beautiful young women in America, will take the role of Lady Jocelyn Leigh in this production, and Wallace Reid will play Captain Ralph Percy.

By reason of the widespread circulation of Mary Johnson's novel when it first appeared several years ago, the story of "To Have and to Hold" is well known.

In presenting it in motion picture form all the incidents of the story are retained. The time of the play is in the year 1620, or thereabouts, and the action takes place in and near Jamestown, Va., in the days when brave men and courageous women first came to this continent as settlers.

Considerable of the action also takes place on a Spanish pirate ship and a British sailing vessel.

In the cast in addition to Miss Murray, who will be the star, there appear Wallace Reid, Tom Forman, Raymond Hatton, William Bradbury, James Neil, Bob Gray, Lucien Littlefield, Camille Astor and Bob Fleming.

Following her recent success in the Lasky-Paramount photoplay "The Cheat," Fannie Ward will be seen in another Lasky production, released March 12, entitled "For the Defense."

Here again is the happy combination of author and star, as the story of the play is by Hector Turnbull, who wrote "The Cheat." Margaret Turnbull wrote the scenario and Frank Reicher is the director.

This is a story essentially written for the screen and the action occurs at places as widely separated as France, from which a young woman, played by Miss Ward, flees when war is declared, to the far west of America.

The third play of the month will be Blanche Sweet in "The Sowers," a picturization of Henry Seton Merriman's story of the same name.

MANTELL WORKING ON SECOND FOX PICTURE IN TROPICS

Robert Mantell is working in the second William Fox picture to be enacted in the tropics by the company of which he is the star.

It is a story whose scenes are laid in Italy, India and France, and includes in its personnel Genevieve Hamper, Stuart Holmes, Claire Whitney, Henry Leone, William Gerard and Franklin B. Coates, the author.

ANNA HELD AND SCENES FROM "MADAME PRESIDENTE," THE MOROSCO PHOTOPLAY IN WHICH SHE IS STARRED

SPECIAL MEETING OF CHICAGO REEL FELLOWS FIXED FOR FEB. 2

The regular monthly meeting of the Reel Fellows' Club of Chicago was held in the club rooms at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday, January 19. The meeting was opened by President Nehls, and regular business was disposed of.

It was moved to have meetings twice a month; this motion was tabled.

The subject of entertainment for the meetings was brought up, and E. A. Hamburg offered to furnish a full evening's entertainment at the next meeting, provided that four other members would similarly volunteer. H. C. Miller offered to furnish the second evening's entertainment. Both these offers were accepted.

It was then decided to hold a special meeting on February 2 so that arrangements can be made for other entertainments.

It was moved and carried to open negotiations with the Chicago Film Exhibitors Booking Club regarding the extending of the use of the Reel Fellows Club rooms to that organization.

It was voted to give the club rooms to the Thompson Club of Chicago for luncheons Saturday noons. The meeting was adjourned at a late hour.

FRANK DANIELS TO BE A FIXTURE IN PHOTODRAMA

Frank Daniels, comic opera comedian, who has been working under the direction of C. Jay Williams in a series of one-reel comedies for the Vitagraph Company, is so thoroughly interested in his work that he intends to forsake the legitimate stage forever.

He has been acting the role of an old soldier and his antics have been so funny that the work in neighboring studios has often stopped so that the directors and actors could be amused.

In one scene, Mr. Daniels was required to consume a quantity of food, throwing it in with both hands. He displayed such dexterity at this that Director Williams questioned him about it.

"Yes, I am 'ambidextrous,'" Daniels admitted. "When I was a boy my father always said to me: 'Frank, learn to cut your finger nails with your left hand, for some day you might lose your right hand.'"

Bushman and Beverly Bayne Off to Florida Again

Stars, with a Strong Supporting Company, Will Appear for Metro in "The Wall Between," by Paine, and "Boots and Saddles," Founded on Stage Play of Same Name

FRANCIS X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, the Metro stars who recently completed the stellar roles in "Man and His Soul," a five-part production, have left again for Florida at the head of a strong supporting company, where they will begin work on two new Metro features.

The first will be a picturization of the widely read novel "The Wall Between," written by Ralph D. Paine. Their second vehicle will be "Boots and Saddles," adapted for the screen from the successful play of the same name by Eugene Walter, author of "The Easiest Way," "Paid in Full," and other notable stage plays.

"The Wall Between" is the story of a young man who has failed to make good in a banking institution, and in desperation joins the United States marines. Though of good breeding and well educated, he finds there is a strong "wall between" the commissioned and enlisted men in the corps.

This formidable barrier proves annoying when a brilliant young society girl enters the situation. Complications arise in many quarters, and many thrilling situations develop.

Among the big scenes to be staged in this production will be a battle between the United States marines and more than two thousand blacks in an uprising in Nicaragua. Battleships, cruisers, and scores of tenders will be used in producing these wonderful battle scenes.

John W. Noble, who will direct the production, is a West Point graduate, and is well qualified for the task, having spent seven years in the regular army. He campaigned in Cuba and was injured in the Philippines.

William "Bill" Bailey will assist in the direction of the picture.

Part Exchange Franchise and Part State Rights

Ocean Film Corporation Decides Upon This Plan for "The Fortunate Youth," by William J. Locke, and "Driftwood, or the Wrong Way," February Releases

THE original policy of the Ocean Film Corporation to market its features under franchises to be awarded to independent exchanges covering definite territory upon an advance on account of a percentage, has been in part altered by the directors of the company, the new policy having been determined upon at a meeting held at the company's New York offices last Wednesday, January 26.

After a careful canvass of the sentiment of exchangemen throughout the country, and the present condition of the film market, it was ascertained that certain territory would realize a larger sum upon the awarding of a franchise, as originally contemplated by the management of the Ocean Film Corporation, and that other territory would work to better advantage if the features of that company were disposed of on a state rights basis.

It was therefore determined to dispose of so much of the territory of the United States as is uncovered by the franchises, on the time-honored states rights plan.

The franchise plan takes in the states of New York, New Jersey, eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Iowa, and the several New England states.

The balance of the country is being disposed of on the states rights plan, being an outright lease on the Ocean Film productions.

The February release of the company, "The Fortunate Youth," by William J. Locke, will be succeeded by "Driftwood; or, the Wrong Way," in which Vera Michelena is starred, supported by Harry Spingler and Charles Graham.

SOL LESSER STOPS IN CHICAGO ON WAY TO NEW YORK

Sol Lesser, who has purchased the rights on Selig's "Ne'er-do-well," was in Chicago last week on his way from the Coast to New York.

He was accompanied by E. M. Asher, his special representative, and also by Mrs. Lesser and their child. It is Mr. Lesser's intention for the time being to make his headquarters in New York.

While F. G. Bradford, general manager of the Gaumont Company, is spending several weeks at the winter studios, Jacksonville, Fla., the main plant at Flushing, N. Y., is in charge of his assistant, C. M. White.

In addition to directing the customary activities of the Flushing organization, Mr. White is also making the preliminary arrangements for the large building operations which will result in a new studio by the time the Gaumont companies come north in the spring.

CROWN CITY AGAIN PRODUCING, UNDER FORBES

Los Angeles, Jan. 29.

A number of the stockholders of the Crown City Company have reorganized and employed a producing staff which is now engaged in making a five-reel subject entitled "The Robber Bold."

Charles Forbes is in charge of the direction, Lamar Johnston and Neva Gerber will play leads, Rex Downs appears as heavy, and the photography is in charge of H. Bredson, late of the Edison Company.

MARCUS, WALSH AND BENOIT IN FEATURES FOR FOX IN WEST

James Marcus, George Walsh, George Benoit, John Resse are in Edendale, California, where they will begin work on a series of big feature productions for William Fox, under the direction of Raoul A. Walsh. This is the second Fox company to go to California.

"Hop, the Devil's Brew," 4th Bluebird Subject

Picture Is Directed by the Smalleys and Based on the Evils of Habit-Forming Drugs and Their Widespread Use—"The Wrong Door" Will Follow

"HOP, THE DEVIL'S BREW," a film based on the traffic in opium, will be the fourth Bluebird feature. "Jeanne Dore," in which Mme. Bernhardt is starred, and "Secret Love," a vehicle for Helen Ware, have already been presented by the Bluebird corporation.

The Bluebird people are also bringing out "Undine," a sea fantasy, with a large company of swimming and diving girls who participate in spectacular scenes.

The Smalleys directed the production of "Hop, the Devil's Brew," Lois Weber (Mrs. Smalley) provided the scenario and both Mr. and Mrs. Smalley carry the leading roles in the film exposing the widespread consumption and the great evil effects of the habit-forming drugs.

U. S. Government officials co-operated with the Bluebird people in presenting authentic and accurate incidents in the fight being vigorously waged against opium smuggling.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt is the leading spirit in a nation-wide campaign against the use of narcotics, and it is believed that "Hop, the Devil's Brew" will be a potent factor in exposing the traffic, and in heralding the warning that public spirited citizens are trying to carry into the most remote sections of the country.

The Bluebird release set to follow the anti-opium film will be "The Wrong Door," directed and produced by Carter De Haven, who has for his leading lady Flora Parker De Haven, his wife. "The Wrong Door" is said to be a thrilling detective story, replete with sensational features and telling an engaging love story.

"The Wrong Door" is set for release February 21 as the fifth in the Bluebird series of features. The announcement of subsequent releases will follow shortly.

Lubin Advertising for 3 Features Is Attractive

Company Issues 24-Sheet, 6-Sheet, 3-Sheet, One-Sheet, Half-Sheet Card, Photos in Colors, 8 by 10 and 22 by 28, Ready-for-Use Newspaper Advertisements and Banners with a "Punch"

LUBIN has issued some very attractive advertising to accompany three recent features, "The Wonderful Wager," "Gods of Fate," and "The Great Divide," all released through V-L-S-E.

For each picture advertising has been prepared as follows: a twenty-four sheet, a six sheet, a three sheet, a one sheet, and half-sheet card, photos 8 x 10, in colors; photos 22 x 28, in colors, prepared newspaper advertisements, press sheet, slide, banner, herald, and cuts.

The posters are artistic and splendid for purposes of display, ranking with the best of their kind. The "Gods of Fate" twenty-four sheet shows the train collision, one of the spectacular scenes in the picture, and this scene is also carried on the six sheet.

The twenty-four sheet for "The Great Divide" is perhaps the most striking of the lot. It shows Ghent carrying Ruth Jordan up the incline of the Grand Canyon, with the Canyon itself spread like a panorama in the background, and brought out in its wealth of natural color.

The twenty-four sheet for "The Wonderful Wager" depicts a near collision of a train with two automobiles, and is an effective bit of color advertising.

With each goes a book of press matter and advertising helps, including detailed synopses of the pictures, casts, suggested newspaper advertisements and notices of various length, and reproductions of cuts which the manufacturer furnishes in mats or electros at a nominal figure.

The selection of subjects for the color sheets is unusually good—as good as the execution of them—and they especially ought to be very serviceable to exhibitors who book these three features.

JOSE BUILDS DIKE FOR FLOOD SCENE IN "IRON CLAW"

In the forthcoming Pathé serial "The Iron Claw" Director Edward José secured some very remarkable flood effects. He hired an island off the coast of South Carolina and with the aid of a gang of negro workmen built a dike which shut out tht ocean from a little bay.

Here he put up some buildings and then at the proper time broke the dike and let the water sweep over his houses. The result was that his flood scenes are remarkably realistic, and furnish some real thrills according to advance reports from the manufacturer.

TRIANGLE MOVES TO BROKAW BUILDING, ON BROADWAY

With a five years' lease that provides that no other film company may have quarters in the building, the Triangle Film Corporation moved Monday, January 24, from Twenty-third street to the new Brokaw Building, in Broadway between Forty-first and Forty-second streets, New York.

The Triangle takes the entire upper section of the structure, occupying the eleventh and twelfth floors and the roof.

On the eleventh floor are the executive offices of H. E. Aitken, president of the Triangle Film Corporation, and the vice-presidents in charge of production, David W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince, and Mack Sennett.

The various departments, exchanges, publicity and promotion, etc., are also on this floor.

Above are film storage vaults, projection rooms and an emergency studio for rush work on unfinished scenes. The Triangle is fortunate in obtaining quarters in this modern and centrally located building.

The amount of rental involved in the lease is said to be between $75,000 and $100,000.

COLOGRAPH COMPANY, INC., ABOUT TO PRODUCE FEATURE AND COMEDY SUBJECTS

William E. Clode, general manager of the Colograph Company, Inc., of Pueblo, Colorado, has been staying at the Knickerbocker Hotel, New York City, completing his arrangements for the distribution of feature and comedy pictures to be manufactured by the Colograph company.

Before coming to New York Mr. Clode was on the coast lining up his company, which will begin work about March 1. The personnel of this company will come as a surprise to the trade in general as Mr. Clode has in his organization several very well known stars.

Mr. Clode is well known throughout Montana, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Arizona, Idaho, western Texas and New Mexico where he has represented both the Paramount and Kleine-Edison service. He also managed Selig's "Spoilers" on a twenty-eight week trip throughout the territory where he assumed the entire responsibility.

First Clara Kimball Young Release in October

Lewis J. Selznick, President and General Manager of Company Capitalized at $1,000,000 to Issue Pictures Featuring the Well Known Actress, Will Put Out One a Month

THE first release of the Clara Kimball Young Company, Lewis J. Selznick president and general manager, recently capitalized at $1,000,000, will appear in October. One release a month will be issued thereafter.

Miss Young will be starred in each production. The Clara Kimball Young features will be based upon scenarios especially written for Miss Young by the best known authors of the day.

Miss Young's name has been brought before the public recently by her winning the popularity contest held by New York and Boston newspapers.

Work on the Clara Kimball Young studios, which will be located in the vicinity of New York, in the South and in Cuba, is being rushed through and the plants will have all improvements.

Mr. Selznick will play an active part in the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, personally supervising every foot of film that bears the Clara Kimball Young brand. Two well-known directors have been placed under contract and the work of engaging a picked company of well-known stage and screen favorites to support Miss Young is now going forward.

Said Mr. Selznick in discussing the plans of the new corporation:

"It is my aim to make Clara Kimball Young features distinctive in every possible way.

"The photography will be the very best that masters of the art can produce, the direction will be in the hands of the best producers I can obtain."

Miss Young, in speaking of the new corporation that bears her name, says:

"The dream of my life is at last accomplished. I hope to make the features of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation classics of the screen in every sense.

"My ambition, in fact, is higher than that, I want to be the founder of a studio that shall be to the film industry of America what the classic Theatre Francaise of Paris is to Europe.

"My plans include a training school for young actresses who will be taught the technique of the screen, as most of us now know this is widely different from the art of the stage.

"Shortly I shall make a more detailed announcement of my plans in connection with the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation."

Bluebird Advertising in Journals Fixes Attention

"The Copy" Combines Good Taste with Effective Appeal and Indicates a Fount of Originality Kept Constantly on Tap by the "Fountaineers" of the Publicity Department

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS, INC., have recently attracted attention by the artistic appearance of their advertising in the trade journals.

This advertising combines good taste with effective appeal, and mechanically is excellent. One of the notable things about it is its large amount of white space. There is enough type to carry the message, but the advertisement is not overcrowded.

Panel effects are used for these advertisements, and the whole tone is white and gray rather than old-fashioned black, from which advertisers of every description are fast getting away.

The Bluebird publicity department is also issuing very complete press matter for their features. This is printed on light blue stock, and contains complete synopsis of the play, gossip about the stars and various other items intended for use in newspapers.

Each story has a couple of blank lines in which may be inserted the theatre name and dates of showing.

Instead of printing a large sheet, the Bluebird people hit upon the idea of using a page, 11 x 8¼, with one side blank. Six of these pages are printed together, and fold conveniently. Another is inserted. This form is more serviceable than the customary broadside.

The last page carries specimens of stock cuts supplied for newspaper use. These are built along the distinctive lines of the Bluebird advertising mentioned above.

MUTUAL MASTERPICTURES
DE LUXE EDITION

THE most profitable photoplays, from an exhibitor's standpoint, are those combining commercial value with artistic merit; that is, photoplays which attract extraordinarily big patronage and also provide a high quality of entertainment.

David Horsley productions are built on these lines.

Take "The Soul's Cycle," a five part feature to be released February 12 as a Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition, for an example.

It has drawing power in that it presents Margaret Gibson, a beautiful and accomplished actress and a prime motion picture favorite, as the star; also in that the name of David Horsley, always associated with good pictures, is back of it.

In respect to quality, "The Soul's Cycle" pictures a subject of great popular appeal, intelligently interpreted by a big cast of artists, and produced on a lavish scale with careful attention paid to technicalities.

David Horsley productions are profitable to book —they have the merit to please and are money makers at the same time.

Bookings obtainable through the branches of the Mutual Film Corporation in the United States and Canada.

Screen Examinations

"HAZEL KIRKE"

(Pathé Gold Rcoster—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE famous old novel is here presented as a tense picture, full of real drama, and with carefully contrived and well built up situations. The only real fault in the script is that Bruce McRae has been all but written out of it. It is too bad to see an actor of the calibre of Mr. McRae stumbling around without a part. He plays Squire Rodney, and although great sympathy is directed his way throughout the story, he is seldom on hand to receive it.

Full advantage has been taken by the producers of the winter scenery up state to produce beautiful views in the woods and along the old mill stream, and the old mill itself is an attractive and home-like setting. This atmosphere of home life, upon which the story depends for its force, has been excellently created and held.

Dunstan Kirke, the old miller, is on the verge of losing his mill and home; Squire Rodney steps in and saves them. When payment is proffered, he asks that he be allowed to educate the miller's daughter, Hazel, and later make her his wife.

The agreement is made and Hazel goes away to school. There she meets Arthur Carringford, son of wealthy and socially prominent parents. The two fall in love, and after Kirke has learned of it, and has turned Hazel from the house because of the broken faith with Rodney, she and Carringford are married.

Carringford's servant, however, knowing the young man's mother would oppose such a marriage, gets a "fake" preacher in the slums, and a mock ceremony is performed.

Later Carringford's mother calls on Hazel and tells her she must give up Arthur, as he must wed a wealthy girl of his own station. She breaks the news that the marriage was not real, and in despair, Hazel wanders from the house, and makes her way back to her old home.

There squire Rodney finds her, hears her story and offers to make her his wife. Carringford, however, hearing from his mother for the first time that the girl and he were not really married, follows, determined to right the wrong to Hazel.

It then develops that the "fake" preacher was a real minister of the gospel, doing reform work in the slums, who had acted purposely to prevent what he saw was to be a mock marriage, and the marriage had been legal and binding.

William Riley Hatch gives an excellent characterization as Dunstan Kirke; Creighton Hale and Pearl White are also in the cast.

"BEHIND CLOSED DOORS"

(Triumph-Equitable—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE siren who steals away the heart of a young man from his former sweetheart is the central character of this photoplay. Murder is committed and the young man is accused of the crime. Released on bail, the adventuress pleads with him to flee the country. To do this would be to admit guilt, so he stays.

The siren sees him going back to his former love and she writes a letter confessing the murder and afterwards she takes her own life.

The scenario for "Behind Closed Doors" has been well constructed. The author has gotten a generous portion of suspense from his material and save for the presence of a few subtitles that are rather awkwardly written he has conceived a very good story.

Perhaps the observer will discover himself twenty-five or fifty feet ahead of the action at times but for all that the story will interest because of its theme.

As produced by Joseph Golden, the scenario has been transformed into a theatrical picture. By that we mean that the actions of the players, and particularly Marie Empress who is featured, scent strongly of the speaking stage.

They have a great inclination to gasp and start, in this manner conveying surprise instead of employing facial expression.

In like manner are some of the scenes arranged. For instance, Miss Empress, dresses as a newsboy, eavesdrops on a park bench conversation. The two conversationalists arise and face each other and Miss Empress creeps close but they are unable or unwilling to see her.

THE GAMBLER'S GAME DISCOVERED

For spectacular effects the picture presents an extensive gambling house and a court room, both of which are extensively employed.

Photographically, "Behind Closed Doors" rates averagely high, save for some few scenes that give the apearance of having been printed on poor stock.

Wright Huntington plays opposite Miss Empress as the young man who falls under her spell. Marian Swayne is his fiancee, while Paul Irving, Thomas Tracy and Regan Highston complete the cast.

"SOULS IN BONDAGE"

(Lubin-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

NANCE O'NEIL is the star in this melodrama with a novel ending. Daniel Carson Goodman, author of the story, has drawn upon old material—a self-sacrificing sister takes the blame for her sister's misdeeds even to the extent of assuming responsibility for the latter's illegitimate child—but the theme as a whole is well handled, though coincidence is a little over-worked at times.

As is usual in sex pictures, there are several scenes depicting gay life, with its attendant revels and suggestive situations. The mountings of these are quite beyond criticism. The acting of them is good enough to hold the spectator's interest.

Two scenes stand out from the rest as highly dramatic. In the first of these, Rosa Brenner (Miss O'Neil) finds her husband in the apartment of her gay sister. Rosa's rage, which comes near eventuating in murder, her despair at her sister's ingratitude, are grippingly portrayed by Miss O'Neil.

The second incident serves to give the picture an unusually effective climax. Rosa abandons her impulse to suicide and becomes a Red Cross nurse in Europe. Because she aids a beardless youth to escape from his regiment, after his recovery from a wound, she is court martialed and ordered shot.

ILLUSTRATING "THE DRIFTER," A GAUMONT-MUTUAL MASTERPICTURE DeLUXE, WRITTEN BY JOHN B. CLYMER, AND STARRING ALEXANDER GADEN

The firing squad takes its post, facing Rosa, whose eyes are blindfolded and arms pinioned. Just before the signal is given she frees herself, tears the blindfold from her eyes, and falls under a fusillade of bullets. This is the best single scene in the production —one which Director Edgar Lewis evidently worked out with much care.

In the supporting cast are Ida Stanhope, who gives a sympathetic impersonation of the erring sister; William Corbett, as the unfaithful husband; Mrs. Stuart, as Mrs. Forbes, Sr.; Mrs. Carr, in a fine character bit as Rosa's Puritanical aunt; Bernard Siegel, as the father, and a number of extras.

"THE BALLET GIRL"

(Brady-World Film—Five Reels)

(REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE)

THERE is much about this drama of stage life that merits attention, because of the final good effect that the picture produces.

The plot is highly entertaining, being strong in suspense and possessing a sustaining element of mystery that holds the interest until the finale.

That the plot is able to do this when it opens with a lengthy introduction that presents a little story in itself, is a tribute to the directorial staff and the pronounced ability of the cast. The picture was adapted from the novel by Compton MacKenzie.

For realism it stands two or three points above the average feature. Realism is its strong point. It convinces continually. In particular is this applicable to those scenes laid in that ever fascinating locale, behind the scenes of a musical show.

Rehearsals, dressing rooms with the girls making up, the electrician's board and the show itself, are some of those scenes that are shown, while the girls of the chorus seem to have a definite idea of dancing, an unusually rare accomplishment in motion pictures.

There are other spectacular sights furnished by a cabaret after the hour when all God-fearing people have departed, a glimpse of the French Students' Ball and a view of several artistic and unconventional folk at supper.

The cabaret looks as if it had been snapped at Rector's, the ball shows a crowd of people who know how to dance and the supper seems quite the real article.

While the World Film press department has neglected to define the cast as "all-star," "The Ballet Girl" offers a real opportunity to do so. Alice Brady, seen in the title part, is called upon to portray a varied series of emotions.

As a crippled woman, as a lithe young girl, as a ballet dancer, and as a loving wife, Miss Brady appears and does exceptional work whatever the exigencies of her role.

Holbrook Blinn, though playing in one key throughout, gives an outstanding characterization of the country lover of the ballet girl. Alec Francis as an old dancer carries one of the best character parts ever allotted him, while Julia Stuart, as well has a kindly part as the old nurse. Others are Robert Frazer, Harry Danes, Laura McClure, Jessie Lewis and George Relph.

The story opens with La Syrena, an aerial dancer. Her husband, a confirmed inebriate, jealous of her partner, cuts the wire by which she is suspended in midair and as a result she is crippled for life.

The series of scenes by the way in which the husband conceives and executes his villainous deed are very well arranged, so that the utmost suspense is produced.

The story then leaps many years and takes up the career of Jennie, her daughter, how she gets on the stage, becomes acquainted with a stage crowd, to fall in love with one of their number, only to find him fickle; and how she at last marries her country lover, to again encounter her old lover and discover that she really loves her husband, forms a story and climax of real interest.

The photography in general is good, but in a number of scenes scattered here and there through the picture, the film appears granulated and coarse.

"HAM TAKES A CHANCE"

(Kalem—One Reel)

(REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE)

IT is hardly necessary to state that this comedy marks the reentrance of Lloyd V. Hamilton into Kalem comedies. In his original character of Ham he appears in this one reel release to his usual comical advantage.

The same elongated shoes, bristling moustache and perforated clothes, decorate the lumbering physique of old friend Ham, so his actions are as funny as ever. It is even funnier perhaps owing to the fact that Ham has been absent from the screen for such a time.

The plot for Ham and his associates, which include Bud Duncan and Ethel Teare, though not original, furnishes plenty of chances to the leading comedians to make it so. Ham and Bud join forces with a vaudeville team, the male member of which is a knife-thrower.

He chooses Ham as the subject around which to stick his wicked looking knives, but the moment before the show opens the old man is taken sick.

Ham volunteers to throw the knives if Bud will stand against the wall. Bud does, but very much against his will. The scenes in which Ham is shooting the knives between his legs, over his shoulders, and in divers other ways at trembling Bud, are very comical.

Interspersed between them are views of Ham bowing awkwardly and foolishly before the audience, bits which furnish added cause for laughter.

Ethel Teare, who carries snakes around for pets, does a most pleasing little dance, and doubtless when the picture is released many of the closeups displaying the reptiles will have been eliminated, as when viewed the subject was in two reels.

"THE DRIFTER"

(Gaumont-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW.

THERE is considerable that is refreshing and novel in John B. Clymer's story and the settings which have been thrown around it. The story itself is out of the usual and into it has been infused the thrill and atmsophere of the race track, with tense drama and psychology of an interesting order.

Two characters of especially sympathetic appeal have been provided, and they are thrown into a series of unusual situations, in the development of which a convincing and attractive plot has been created.

The story starts with Harold Derwent, a young divinity student with a mania for gambling. It gets him into trouble, and he is expelled from college, leaving behind him the girl who was his guiding star.

Three years later he is a noted race track plunger. He loses everything in one plunge, and his friends desert him. He leaves the scene of his disaster, and the train in which he is riding is wrecked.

One of the passengers, a young minister, with a striking resemblance to Derwent, is killed, and the gambler, recalling his divinity schooling, resolves to impersonate the minister and allow the race track plunger to be reported dead.

He fills the pulpit and makes a great success; then he discovers that the dead man was the husband of the girl of his college days. She alone recognizes him, but for the sake of the work he is doing, she allows the world to think he is really the preacher.

A woman who figured in his life in racing days appears and blackmails him, finally inducing him to bet the church's money on the races; but he recovers himself before it is too late, and the adventuress is unmasked.

The preacher makes a clean confession from the pulpit, and for the sake of the work he has done the old life is forgotten forever, and he marries the girl who has stuck by him.

Alexander Gaden gives a sympathetic portrayal of the young gambler-preacher, and Lucille Taft is the girl. Iva Shepard is good as the adventuress.

"A NIGHT OUT"

(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

IN "A Night Out" the Vitagraph people have one of the best comedies that has ever graced the screen. It is filled with laughs—laughs that are brought forth by truly amusing situations.

It is clean, too, and in keeping with the refined tone already exhibited in such Vitagraph comedies as "The Dust of Egypt" and "Green Stockings."

"A Night Out" moves faster than those two did, and there is also a modicum of slapstick, but that is subordinated to the main business of the picture—the presentation of a genuinely humorous train of incidents.

The mainspring of the action is Granmum, a delightful old lady who takes her fling late in life. She is aided and abetted by her two grandsons, and the particular "Night Out" finds them at the Three Lights cafe, where Granmum dances the tango with the proprietor. All goes well until the police, guided by Jonas Deacon, a Purity exponent, raid the place.

Into the plot a good deal of clever satire is worked. Jonas Deacon is recognized easily as a professional reformer, of the "Gentle Grafter" class. His son, whom he thinks quite immune from the lure of the white lights, turns out to be both a sport and a thief. Other foibles are satirized with fine effect.

The cast comes very near being a collection of comedy stars. It is headed by May Robson, as Granmum. Her performance is delightful. Flora Finch appears as the mother of the two boys, and therefore Granmum's daughter.

Her attempts to keep the household in the straight and narrow path are amusing failures. Hughey Mack plays excellently as the proprietor of the Three Lights. George Cooper makes Deacon's son a genuine character. And the other members of the cast—Kate Price, Eva Taylor, William Shea, Charles Brown, Belle Bruce, Ethel Corcoran, Jack Storey, and Arthur Cozine—each deserve individual commendation for their work.

Miss Robson and C. T. Dazey are the authors of the piece. George D. Baker, the director, put it together in splendid style. The staging is of the usual Vitagraph quality.

We unhesitatingly recommend this picture to exhibitors as a sure-fire laugh maker.

"LILLO OF THE SULU SEAS"

(American—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

WHEN a metropolitan society man falls in love with a girl in a different environment—whether she be nurse-maid, country lass, or demimondaine—the sparks are bound to fly.

And despite the innumerable celluloid versions of this theme, seldom have the sparks made so interesting and delightful display of pyrotechnics as this picture affords.

There is excess footage in some of the scenes, and too little in others, but these faults can be condoned in view of the excellencies that more than counterbalance them.

LOVE'S DREAM THE WARNING

Harold Lockwood fans will see him in a role that amply demonstrates his abundant good-looks and matinee-idol graces. May Allison, in attenuated and unconventional garb, is very easy to look at, and she has real dramatic ability as well as an attractive person.

The main plot is straight-forward and powerful, but the secondary plot occasionally weakens it, and seems, for the most part, superfluous. The settings are varied and appropriate.

Ralph Holt, junior partner of the New York pearl merchants, Holt and Son, goes to the South Seas to get some rare pearls from the divers. There he meets Lillo, a comely girl diver, and he falls in love with her.

When the schooner they are on is wrecked, these two, and the girl's father, are the only survivors. They reach an island and are welcomed by an American hermit.

This hermit recognizes the man who poses as Lillo's father as being the man who many years before ran away with his wife and baby daughter. Lillo is the hermit's daughter.

But Lillo's joy in the reunion is short-lived, for Ralph must return to New York. Holt, however, returns a short while afterwards, having been given permission to represent the firm in that region.

"PUDD'NHEAD WILSON"

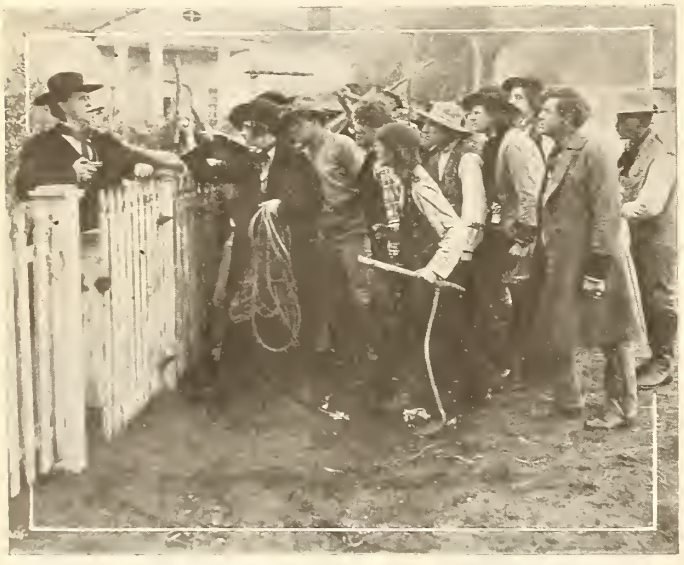
(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

MARK TWAIN'S famous story of ante-bellum days has been picturized in excellent fashion by Lasky. Careful direction and attention to detail have brought out a picture eminently worth while—for its interesting, at times thrilling, plot; its staging and Theodore Roberts.

Exhibitors already know the high quality of Mr. Robert's acting. But we believe they will agree, when they see his work as Pudd'nhead Wilson, that he has few if any screen equals as a character star. Henceforth, every time we have occasion to think of "Pudd'nhead Wilson" we shall think of Mr. Roberts. He caught the spirit of the character remarkably well. In support of this statement we offer you the verdict of a delighted audience at the Strand, New York, last Sunday.

As a picture, "Pudd'nhead Wilson" resolves itself largely into a theme of suspense. From the moment when Roxy, the mulatto nurse, substitutes her own child for Tom Driscoll, her master's, keen interest is aroused in the spectator's mind; and when



"I'LL SURRENDER THE BOY TO THE SHERIFF!"

Rowena Cooper, from "up North," falls in love with the real Tom, whom she believes to be a negro, the spectator is left with mixed feelings. The exchange of infants is shown clearly in an early scene, however, and the audience therefore understands it, if Rowena does not.

In the end, Lawyer "Pudd'nhead" clears everything up by finger-prints, lifting a false charge of murder from the real Tom, besides proving him to be white, and convicting the false Tom, who up to that moment had been masquerading as a Caucasian. We will not presume to tell in further detail a story so well known as "Pudd'nhead Wilson."

We may remark that because of the complicated plot, and particularly because of the confusion of identity between a white man and a negro, the meaning of the story may be misunderstood for a few moments by picture-goers who enter the theatre in the middle of the feature. Assuming, of course, that the spectator hasn't read the story.

The sets are excellent. The atmosphere of an old Southern village of the 1830-1851 period is gained to a remarkable degree of exactness, and the costuming is just as good. The voodoo hut, the slave quarters, the angry mob in front of the Wilson house, a real cotton-field with a crowd of darkies at work, the pursuit of Roxy by bloodhounds, the trial—these are a few of the scenes which make us wish for more pictures directed by Frank Reicher. The lighting effects equal any previous Lasky efforts along that line.

Supporting Mr. Roberts are Alan Hale, Thomas Meighan, Florence Dagmar, Jane Wolff, Ernest Joy, Gertrude Kellar—in the principal subordinate roles—comprising a cast of uniform worth. The scenario was written by Margaret Turnbull, and is a careful and convincing piece of workmanship, with moments of distinct brilliancy.

"THE RULING PASSION"

(William Fox—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

TROPICAL JAMAICA, with its graceful palms, broad lawns and brilliant skies, furnished a wealth of novel and pleasing backgrounds for this story of Oriental passion, brutality, hypnotism and conspiracy. The picture was made in the West Indies, though the locale of the plot is India. Mr. Fox should be commended for having made such a happy choice of location.

William E. Shay appears as Ram Singh, a native Indian prince, whose bestial nature leads him to poison a harem favorite after he tires of her, and to beat another when she displeases him. He also orders the eyes of one of his slaves gouged out with hot irons. This scene is shown in some detail. The prince has hypnotic gifts, and by their exercise gets into his power the wife of an English officer (Claire Whitney). She escapes from his harem, shortly afterwards becomes a mother, and is reunited to her husband following the discovery of the prince's attempt to lead an uprising against the British governor. The prince is shot to death in his palace while he is inciting his followers to insurrection.

Mr. Shay gives a finished interpretation of his part, and Miss Whitney performs with her accustomed ability. The cast is a large one, and includes Stephen Grattan, Florence Deshon, Katherine Gilbert, Harry Burkhardt, Edward Boring, Violet Rockwell, Thelma Parker, Augustus Balfour and Milly Liston.

In the harem scenes a number of Oriental dancing girls, in scanty attire, appear. The interior of the prince's palace is of appreciable depth, and is almost completely filled with "extras" in the final scenes when the prince is exhorting his followers. The costumes are elaborate and entirely in keeping with the theme.

James Mackay directed the picture under the personal supervision of Herbert Brenon, author of the scenario. The climax comes sudenly, and is rather unexpected. At times the plot tends to become a succession of scenes broken by somewhat long intervals of time. In contrast to much of the action, which is necessarily concerned with the prince's brutality and pleasure-seeking performances, a full-screen close-up of a smiling infant is introduced near the end. This is preceded by a pretty scene between the unfortunate Englishwoman and her husband, who apparently never learns of her harrowing experience in the harem.

FLORENCE REED IS STARRED ALONE IN "THE WOMAN'S LAW," ARROW-PATHE

BY inadvertence it was stated in an advertisement in the Studio Directory issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS that Florence Reed and Duncan McRae were featured in "The Woman's Law," an Arrow-Pathé Gold Rooster feature by Albert S. LeVino and Harvey F. Thew.

The advertisement should have stated that Miss Reed alone is starred in "The Woman's Law." This correction is made gladly in justice to Miss Reed and at the request of the advertiser.

HENRY B. WALTHALL AND EDNA MAYO IN SCENES FROM EPISODE 2 OF ESSANAY'S "THE STRANGE CASE OF MARY PAGE"

"THE UPSTART"

(Rolfe-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

MARGUERITE SNOW is quite the most pleasant factor about "The Upstart." We have seen various screen artistes, who hold honors for interpreting romantic roles, receive the adoring attentions of male admirers, but to our mind Miss Snow can accept romantic advances from the opposite sex just about to perfection.

In fact, she is so human while playing such a part that the miserable spectator, of the trousered variety, gets awfully jealous of Miss Snow's opposite.

Besides accepting this love from her husband's chauffeur, Miss Snow in "The Upstart" plays charmingly in all the other phases of her role. Suffering under the foolish ideals of her husband, a minister, she is the object of great sympathy and when she comes to a decision and decides to elope with the chauffeur, she is to be admired for her pluck.

THE JUDGE OVERTAKES THE RUNAWAYS

"The Upstart" is a satirical comedy that will evoke laughter not by what its pictures tell, but by what it leaves to the imagination. The subtlety of its situations, and the satirical way in which the theme is treated, stamp it as a comedy for those of culture and refinement or, better yet, those who are on familiar terms with the drama. "The Upstart" will go showing right over the heads of a "movie" audience.

The upstart is Coventry Petmore, a young fanatic who believes that divorce is a great big cancer in the social system. Consequently he goes out to preach against it. He enters a home, where dwell Judge Mitchell, his son, a minister and his wife Beatrice.

At the beginning of the first reel things being to happen. Beatrice is unhappy with her husband, because he believes that divorce is caused by familiarity between husband and wife.

Consequently she seeks solace in the arms of the chauffeur. Coventry learns of the situation existing between chauffeur and wife, and arranges an elopement after the husband has been acquainted with the state of affairs.

The pair don't get far, for it rains and the car breaks down. Back they go, and shatter all Coventry's theories, if he possesses any at all, and the minister discovers that familiarity is not a cause for divorce at all—rather does a lack of familiarity cause it.

George Le Guere as Coventry does the hardest work of anyone in the cast, but he is just a little too fanatical at times. James Lackaye makes a pleasing figure of the judge, while Frederick Sumner as the minister and Frederick Sittenham as the chauffeur do creditable work.

The locations and photography, conventionally enough, leave nothing to be desired. Edwin Carewe directed, working on an adaptation from Thomas Barry's play.

"IN THE NIGHT"

(Victor-Universal—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

MOST of the action of this drama, save for a few introductory scenes, occurs in one night. Much that is dramatic and sustaining can happen in just a few hours, as "In the Night" proves.

In fact there is more dramatic action in this three reeler than in many a five part release and the fact that everything takes place within such a short time adds much suspense and strength to the story.

"In the Night" was written by Helmar Bergman—as far as we know, a new author in the photoplay field. The plot presents nothing extraordinarily original, in fact much of the material incorporated in it is quite conventional, but the fact again arises that it all occurs in one night, and consequently it takes on a new appearance. The climax is also quite out of the ordinary.

Harry Myers and his company, headed by Rosemary Theby and himself have done capable work on the picture. Myers plays the third party, the smooth gentleman who aims at eloping with the wife of a hard working broker.

His performance we imagine is quite typical of such a person. Miss Theby is the weak willed wife and besides wearing two most startling gowns she acts ably. L. L. Hall as the husband does good work.

The direction of Myers is exceedingly good. There is a fine glimpse of a novel stage setting, a realistic cabaret performance, while the photography and lighting has been carefully attended to. In fact, the many merits of the picture bespeak well for the director.

The action concerns itself with the intention of the discontented wife to elope with her admirer. The man enters the house at night after the husband has departed on a business trip.

He misses his train, returns and discovers both a burglar and the other man in hiding. The wife has been trying to decide whether to leave her husband or remain with him and her child.

His appearance solves the problem and when he draws a comparison between the lover and the burglar, condemning the former and deciding to give the latter a chance to make good, she at last sees him in a justifying light.

"THE WHITE ROSETTE"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW.

REINCARNATION comes again to the fore as a motif in motion pictures. It has been used by the American studios to produce an interesting and really dramatic, though frequently unconvincing, effort, and it opens up great vistas of possibilities—possibilities which have not always been taken advantage of, but which are hinted at strongly enough to start many minds to thinking.

The use of two periods, a thousand years apart, has made possible unusual versatility in settings, costuming and character drawing. One could wish that something more poetic, or possibly mystic had been used to link the two ages than a mere subtitle. However, those who see the picture will have no difficulty in comprehending every feature of it.

In the Middle Ages, the bride of a great baron falls in love with a young knight, who in turn loves a lady-in-waiting. The great woman takes her vengeance on the girl, and sends her from the castle. Later the girl returns to warn the baron of a conspiracy against him, and in a fight which follows she is killed by a thrust from the sword of her own sweetheart.

Realizing what he has done the knight vows to repair the wrong if it takes a thousand years. As it develops, that's just how long its does take.

In the modern time, the various characters reappear; the baron is a financier, the great lady his wife, the lady-in-waiting the daughter of an employe. The knight is a young engineer. The wife again falls in love with him, and has the girl and her father sent to Bermuda for a vacation, in order to get her out of the way.

Then the woman, who has no love for her husband, becomes the tool of his business enemies and uses the engineer in an attempt to get control of stock which he holds, and crush him. She nearly succeeds. The girl, however, returns sooner than was expected, and the engineer realizes the trap set for them both.

He rushes into the room in time to save the financier, who has been attacked as soon as he discovered the conspiracy, and then the young couple are reunited. Thus the wrong of a thousand years before it is repaired.

The costuming and settings of the mediaeval period are convincing and carefully arranged. Eugenie Forde, Forrest Taylor, Helene Rosson, Harry von Meter, William Stowell and Richard La Reno are in the cast.

"SHOULD A BABY DIE"

(Hanover Film Company—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

DESPITE the title, there is nothing sensational about this picture. The question asked is not brought up for discussion until the last few hundred feet, and then only as a mere incident. To complete this line of comment about the production, we may remark that it has no connection, expressed or implied, with the recent controversy which sprang up around a Chicago surgeon.

The story is one of the simplest, one of the most obvious which has found its way to the screen. A young millionaire, tiring of idleness, gets a job in a steel mill. On his way to work one day he saves a young Jewess from death in an accident.

Their love affair develops quickly, but the girl's father objects to the young man because he is a Gentile. Finally, it develops that the girl is not a Jewess at all, but the foster child of the old Jew.

He bought her, a cripple at birth, after the death of her parents, because his wife insisted that, in spite of the child's physical deformities, love would bring her safely to young womanhood. It develops also that the child's mother was the daughter of a wealthy family.

A competent cast interprets the story. It is headed by Arthur Donaldson, who appears to advantage as the old Jew pawnbroker. J. W. Johnston makes a good hero, and Gazelle Marche a pleasing heroine. Florence Hackett does well in the thankless role of a cast-off fiancee. Camille Dalberg and Sonia Marcelle are among the other principals.

In direction, the production is above the average. The plot moves smoothly, is fully developed, and will interest those who are not over-critical. Close-ups and parallel action are the mainsprings of the action, and they are handled skillfully.

The sets are very good, also. Interiors furnish nearly all the backgrounds necessary to telling the story, and they are excellent. The photography is entirely adequate.

"THE CLIFF DWELLERS OF AMERICA"

(Burton Holmes-Paramount—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THERE are travel pictures and travel pictures, but these have an individuality all their own. The reel entitled "The Cliff Dwellers of America" is the first of a series which Burton Holmes, the well-known travel lecturer, will contribute to the Paramount Program.

Mr. Holmes works human interest into his travel pictures. He shows you the Cliff Dwellers in Chicago's canyons, and then, by way of contrast, takes you to New Mexico and shows you the ruins left by the ancient Cliff Dwellers, and some of the descendants of those old time folk.

En route he lets you know where you are going and how by flashing subtitles which combine information, humor and gentle satire in just the right proportion.

These subtitles are as carefully phrased as if they were to find a place in illumination of a screen drama. The views themselves are, of course, educational, but they are put in a sequence which makes them as interesting as a story.

The scenes shown in this first Travel Picture include glimpses of Chicago's skyscrapers and scurrying crowds, and incidental street scenes; a motor trip through New Mexico; a visit to the ancient city of Santa Fé, and to the surrounding ranches, mesas and pueblos, and a descent into the Grand Canyon.

The photography is excellent.

"THE FINAL CURTAIN"

(Kleine-Edison—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

CHANNING POLLOCK has written a story of the stage and business which covers considerable ground and has unusual elements of interest. The picture, however, considered as from the pen of Mr. Pollock, is in the order of a pot-boiler.

We doubt if Mr. Pollock took it very seriously, for he has contrived situations which are hardly convincing, or in the spirit of the piece. Yet they serve to advance the story and keep the action going. All in all, there is no doubt that "The Final Curtain" will please many picture-goers.

An actress in a rural stock company attracts the attention of a Broadway star, and he brings her to New York, where she makes a sensation. She meets John Lord, a wealthy woolen manufacturer, and marries him, leaving the stage.

Her husband's sister objects to her ways, and to the old theatrical associates she sometimes gathers around her, and there is considerable friction. This is aggravated by her husband's neglect of her for the sake of his business, and she returns to the stage.

On the opening night the leading man, who has been drinking, makes himself offensive, and attacks here in her dressing room. Her husband runs in, and, misunderstanding the situation, casts her off. She wanders away, and finally becomes a telephone operator.

There she overhears a plot on the part of representatives of the woolen trust to crush Lord. She sends him an anonymous note, which results in his saving himself, and in seeking his unknown benefactress, Lord finds his wife. They are happily reunited.

There is much excellent character work in the piece, especially that in the actors' boarding house, and behind the scenes in the theatre. Alma Hanlon is pretty and engaging as the young actress and wife, and Arthur Hoops does some real strong work as Lord, the woolen magnate.

Florence Coventry, Herbert Hayes, Frank Belcher, Beryl Mercer, W. C. Carlston, Frank Norcross, and Crimmins and Gore are in the cast.

"FATTY AND MABEL ADRIFT"

(Keystone-Triangle—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

RURAL rivalry which continues from the farm to the seashore is the subject of this excellent Keystone featuring Roscoe Arbuckle and Mabel Normand.

It is original in its climax while the story in which the rivals do battle for Mabel's hand and love does much more than affect its audience in a humorous way. It has suspense enough to do justice to a strong dramatic offering.

Laughter and tears are closely allied, and in "Fatty and Mabel Adrift" one is at times very apt to grow serious and wish that the villainous rival would disappear forever.

Fatty and Mabel appear so happy with one another that the third party's presence comes very near to being unwelcome. This situation, however, occurs infrequently, but just often enough to create a strong contrast with the hilarious parts of the story, emphasising the comical points to an unusual degree.

Contrast is a valuable element in comedy, and this subject is clear proof of that.

The fun starts on the farm, where Fatty, merely a working man, loves Mabel, his employer's daughter. His rival from the adjoining place is not to be consoled after the two lovers have been married.

They move to the seashore, and here the vallain pursues them, enlisting the aid of Brutus Bombastic to accomplish his wicked ends. Brutus chews dynamite, drinks gasoline and lights his cigar with a gun and is very much of a wretch.

He and his nasty hirelings shove Fatty's bungalow off into the stormy seas in the dead of night, and husband and wife wake up in the morning to find their beds floating about in water.

Luckily they are accompanied by a very clever dog, who goes for help, and this situation serves to introduce the Keystone police, who are funnier than ever before. Attempting to launch a rowboat through a heavy surf is the chief comedy scene of theirs.

On the farm much that is funny is introduced. Fatty blows up an automobile tire with his lungs, and the milking of the cow, an old-time trick, has been made hugely funny and not at all offensive.

Excellent direction is obvious in the latter scenes when Fatty and Mabel wake up to discover themselves floating about in the rooms of their house.

Fine photography and some of the best light effects seen in many a day mark the release. Scenes with the sun setting over the water, the figures silhouhetted against the sky, aid in creating those serious moments of the film.

Other pictures show the rough waves breaking over the rocks and sending up showers of spray. And ships pass by in the path of a searchlight. Director Arbuckle has made a formidable record with his effects in this picture.

Of the supporting cast, Al. St. John as the acrobatic villain deserves most praise. He has often been seen in smaller parts in Keystones, but this is his first big role.

He is really funny both in makeup and actions. Others are Frank Hayes, May Wells, Wayland Trask, James Bryant, Joe Bordeau and Glen Cavender.

"THE EMBODIED THOUGHT"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS three-reeler contains more than the average amount of interesting material, is well acted, and adequately mounted. The central incident is built around a quotation from Hudson's "Law of Psychic Phenomena."

A Jewish merchant, lured by an adventuress, wastes the firm's money, finally converting what remains into negotiable bonds which he hides in a secret panel in his home.

Injured in an elevator accident, he is carried into the room of the adventuress and her confederate, and just before he dies, hides the card containing the directions for finding the panel.

The two crooks accidentally discover the card some time later, and are just about to get away with the bonds when the merchant's ghost leads his sister to the scene.

This sort of thing is difficult to make convincing on the screen, but most of the difficulties have been overcome in "The Embodied Thought" largely by good management of suspense.

The cast, in which Edward Sloman, Melvin Mayo, George Routh, L. C. Shumway and Helen Wolcott are the principal players, does its work acceptably. Sloman directed.

Sets reveal a large department store with a style show in progress, domestic interiors, offices, etc. Trick photography is called into play when the ghost is shown rising from the dead merchant's body, while the body remains stretched on a couch.

NO "THIS AND THAT COMPANY" FOR RUTH ROLAND

Los Angeles, Jan. 29.

MANY rumors have been heard in this producing center during the past four or six weeks regarding the future of Ruth Roland, these being to the effect that this actress would appear in films for this or that company.

H. M. Horkheimer of the Balboa company, however, now makes the statement that Miss Roland has been contracted to remain with their organization for a long time.

"THE CRIME OF CIRCUMSTANCE"

(Knickerbocker—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE CRIME OF CIRCUMSTANCES," produced on the Pacific Coast by the Balboa company, deals with conviction by circumstantial evidence. This incident is very often employed as merely one feature of certain dramas, but the picture here presented enlarges upon the wrong of such conviction and preaches against it. It convinces in this case because it is known all along that the man is innocent.

The appeal of the three reels is directed toward the masses, and in particular that portion of the masses which is easily suited, as long as their entertainment arouses their sympathy and creates a little suspense.

The prosecuting attorney has a fickle wife and a brother without honor. The two carry on in a roadhouse and a mutual friend interferes. A fight ensues and the mutual friend is killed.

An old inebriate who had previously quarreled with the mutual friend is accused, tried and convicted. On the day of his death his wife in a rage comes to the attorney's house intent on killing him. Her shot finds its resting place in the brother, who, dying, confesses his crime, freeing the old man.

The story is constructed fairly well, but the settings fail in some instances to measure up to general standards. The room in the roadhouse resembles the back room of a common bar, while the rugs on the floor of the attorney's home are hardly suitable.

The acting of Daniel Gilfeather as the inebriate is the most polished of the lot. Lewis J. Cody as the attorney's brother and Madeline Pardee as the wife complete the cast. Bess Meredith prepared the scenario.

"SECRET LOVE"

(Blue Bird—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ROBERT LEONARD has made an appealing and spectacular production of Frances Hodgson's Burnett's book, "That Lass O' Lowrie's." It is appealing because of its central character, Joan Lowrie and the degrading environment in which she moves, but which she finally overcomes. It is spectacular because of the magnitude of the village settings and mining camp scenes which were erected especially for use in the picture.

Moreover, "Secret Love" has Helen Ware as its star. Miss Ware is a finished actress and the manner in which she has adapted herself to the role of Joan Lowrie is significant of that statement

THE RESCUE FROM THE MINE.

She uses a pick axe handily, dresses like a true "pit" girl and brings out the sympathetic traits of her role expressively.

Joan is the daughter of a brutal miner. She, herself, works in the coal pits all day and at all other times she is forced to bear the brutalities and curses of her father. Fergus Derrick, the new "master" of the mines, protects her on one occasion and thereafter she nurses a secret love for him, but she believes all the time that he will never have her because he is well bred and she is about as ignorant as they come.

But the time comes when Derrick descends in the mine to inspect the strength of its supports. A cavein severely hurts him. He is rescued by Joan, and afterwards with the aid of the minister's daughter she improves her education and is ready to welcome Fergus on his own ground when at length he recovers.

The picture, however, contains considerably more than this. Fergus through his heroism incurs the undying enmity of Lowrie and many a hot encounter takes place between the two men. One in particular waged in a tavern is strikingly fierce. Lowrie is finally killed by one of the men he has mistreated. There is besides another story concerning the betrayal of Joan's friend, Liz, the weakling, which though separated quite distinctly from the main theme serves to accentuate the miserable condition of the toilers.

As for the spectacular side, much praise can be said of it. The street scenes of the Lancashire town, peopled with folk garbed in the style of 1875, convey a realistic impression. A night scene with the windows of the little houses lighted is an excellent bit. There are also many scenes laid about the mines and in them and, to go back to the story, such scenes always serve to create added suspense, particularly when we are informed that the mines are in great need of repairing.

The other members of the cast render consistently good support to Miss Ware. Harry Carry as Derrick, Ella Hall as the minister's daughter, Jack Curtis as Lowrie, Dixey Carr as Liz, Harry Carter as the heavy and Harry Southard as the rector are the important members of a large and well balanced cast.

"HE DID AND HE DIDN'T"

(Keystone-Triangle—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

LOBSTERS taken promiscuously have dire results when the recipient retires for the night. That is their effect on two gentlemen in "He Did and He Didn't," and a most disastrous and precarious nightmare is the result.

Fatty is a physician, and he dreams of receiving a late call. His wife's friend dreams of a burglar in the house and of playing the hero. Fatty goes on dreaming of his friend as false and returning to discover the friend and his wife together, both of them, indicentally, in night clothes. Then Fatty dreams of a tragic finale to all three, and afterwards both men awake and remember the lobsters.

DID HE OR DID HE NOT?

Such is this most recent of Keystones—an average number, nothing wildly funny, but cleverly done, very cleverly done, for as a nightmare it is handled realistically and the awakenings of the two dreamers comes as surprises.

The subject, however, has much action that is threadbare, such as a considerable amount of chasing and shooting, while the scene in which the friend comes to protect the wife from the burglar waxes surprisingly risque for the moment.

But then Roscoe Arbuckle is present with his ludicrous actions, and Mabel Normand is always fascinating. Al. St. John and William Jefferson are others in the cast.

This is the first Triangle-Keystone made in the East, and Arbuckle, who directed, has paid particular attention to pretentious settings and good light effects as well as the element of comedy.

"He Did and He Didn't" does not approach the same high level as "Fatty and Mabel Adrift."

SCENES FROM "D'ARTAGNAN," TRIANGLE-KAY BEE PRODUCTION, WITH ORRIN JOHNSON AND LOUISE GLAUM

"D'ARTAGNAN"

(Triangle-Kay-Bee—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THERE are few who will not revel in this Thomas H. Ince production. Readers of Alexandre Dumas' "Three Musketeers" will see it as a pictured interpretation of one of the favorite episodes of the popular classic, while those who have never heard of Dumas or the Musketeers will undoubtedly appreciate it on account of its delightful air of adventure and romance.

The reasons for this are many. To begin with it is laid in Franee in the time of Louis XIII, a place and a period that was crowded with adventure.

And D'Artagnan, the dauntless Musketeer in the Queen's service, is a chaarcter molded along lines that look unusually well on the screen. Quick with his sword and his brain his appearance is a constant cause for excitement and thrills.

The three Musketeers are, too, objects of steady admiration, and, lastly, the simplicity of the story, so rich in sustaining powers, stamps "D'Artagnan" as an excellent picture.

The scenario was written by J. G. Hawkes. He has furnished an exciting and swiftly moving story, that embodies the fine points of the original work, though it follows merely one set of characters.

It is most satisfactory to be able to state that the introduction of these characters is accomplished clearly. Costume productions usually make this fact impossible, or else the writers have not been able to meet the situation.

Mr. Hawkes has, for confusion in the relationship of the characters and in the players themselves is an unknown quantity in the offering.

Mr. Hawkes has also paid evident attention to the sustaining property of suspense. To furnish it he has resorted to a very successful measure—he develops a strong and exciting situation to its climax, which is pictured in all its force, and then the scene cuts to another phase of the story, leaving the last details of the previous episode to the imagination. The effect produced is admirable.

Perhaps credit for the above plan of continuity should rest with Charles Swickard, the director. But at any rate Swickard has carried out this idea, whoever the originator, to a degree of perfection.

Aside from this he has furnished some convincing settings. His street scenes of Paris, and the many interiors of old taverns are realistie pieces of construction, while the costuming is correct and void of modernism.

The story centers on D'Artagnan, who is pressed into Queen Anne's service on a precarious errand. Queen Anne has been indiscreet and has given some rare jewels to the Duke of Buckingham, her lover, as a remembrance.

King Louis at the instigation of the plotting Cardinal requests that she wear them at the coming ball. The Cardinal, of eourse, desires to expose the Queen's relations with the English duke.

D'Artagnan, accompanied by three Musketeers, is commissioned to procure the jewels, and his adventures form the most exciting portions of the picture.

He is continually combating the forces of the cardinal and his spy, Miladi, but he is victorious at last and returns to Paris in time to save the honor of his foolish Queen.

Orrin Johnson, obviously an expert swordsman, plays the title role, interpreting its dashing and fearless qualities in an inspiring way. Dorothy Dalton is the Queen, and makes the character notable for its regal air. Rhea Mitchell as Madame Bonacieux, George Fisher as Louis, Arthur Maude as de Rochfort, Harvey Clark as the Duke of Buckingham and Walt Whitman as the cardinal complete the named cast.

The photography merits the usual praise that the Ince-Triangle offerings receive, while the artistically decorated subtitles are most pleasing.

"A CHIP OFF THE OLD BLOCK"

(Juvenile Film—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS is a clever little juvenile burlesque, intended primarily for children, and well adapted to presentation at children's matinees. With the exception of James A. Fitzpatrick, who appears as a tramp, all the principal actors are children.

The central character in the story is Chip, a newsboy, who lies down to sleep in front of a theatre, after meeting a little lady of wealth, who becomes the heroine in his dream.

Chip dreams that he is Charlie Chaplin in the role of a hero, and his business is to rescue the lady fair from the villain—which he does in a fashion that will delight children.

The usual number of kicks, falls, and chases do their parts toward making the plot. Finally, after Chip has vanquished the villain, he is rudely awakened from his dream by the theatre manager, and sent on his way.

Janethel Monahan, Joseph Monahan, Margerete Costello, and Donald Costello have the four chief roles, and are excellent child actors.

The production was staged and directed by Mr. Fitzpatrick, who also wrote the story. The subtitles are in rhyme, and can be easily understood by children. Exteriors alone are used. Some pretty park scenes are disclosed. The photography is very good.

"ROBERT C. BRUCE AND HIS NATURE PICTURES"

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS is the third of a series of travelogues that S. L. Rothapfel is offering in conjunction with the Triangle plays at the Knickerbocker theatre, New York.

It pictures the partial trip of Mr. Bruce and his party through the Columbia National Forest in the Yakima Indian Reservation, State of Washington; bits of their cruise on Lake Chelan, a beautiful body of water, and lastly their climb to the foot of Isella Glacier, to reach which miles of snow-covered ground was traversed and photographed.

The camera work is good throughout, save for a scene or two where the sun's reflection on the snow resulted in photographic trouble.

The scenes picturing nature in all its wildness are indeed fascinating, while there are various points of educational interest shown, particularly those in connection with Isella Glacier, a huge ice pact that abound in beauty and interest.

At the Knickerbocker Mr. Bruce personally appears and gives an interesting talk while the films are in progress. The entertaining anecdotes that he has to tell of his trip are many, and without his speech the views would be void of much of their present interest.

"HIS PICTURE IN THE PAPERS"

(Fine Arts-Triangle—Five Parts)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS has risen to the ranks of undisputed film favorites that is clearly evident from the applause which heralds his appearance in a picture.

At any rate, such is the case at the Knickerbocker Theatre, which can be taken as containing a real picture audience, now that it has reverted to a modest scale of prices.

Picture-goers have accepted Mr. Fairbanks as "Doug," the familiar nom de plume by which he is known to stage first nighters, and Doug as a screen comedian induces the feeling of familiarity that such a nickname embodies.

He reaches his audience at the start, and before he is through

he is on intimate terms, so it seems, with every member of it. Such is the mark of a good player, and Doug's personality is consequently one of his most valuable possessions.

"His Picture in the Papers" was obviously molded specially for its star. It gives him a likable role, for he is the only normal member of the family of Proteus Prindle, a manufacturer of meatless foods, such as Predigested Prunes and Dessicated Doughnuts or some other alliterate combination.

Pete, the name which Doug carries, is to have a share in his father's business which will enable him to marry one Christine Cadwalader. To procure the share he must get his name and picture in the papers, and his various attempts to do so furnish the body and the fun of the subject.

He is unsuccessful in many, many ways, and each one is in itself a hearty and clean series of laughs. To enumerate them would be folly, but we are willing to stake our job against the President's that neither exhibitor nor public will be disappointed in "His Picture in the Papers."

Pete, be it known, gets his countenance in the public prints, by signing a Peruna testimonial, but that doesn't please old Proteus, so his crowning and triumphant act is to avert a railroad wreck. Then he gets his picture on the front page, and also the promised business share and the pretty girl.

Loretta Blake is Doug's opposite, while Clarence Handyside, Charles Butler, Homer Hunt and others appear in roles of some importance. John Emerson directed.

"POWDER"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

THIS picture was inspired by the controversy that has been carried on anent the exportation of American munitions to England. This delicate question is treated in a strictly neutral manner, so neither hyphenates, jingoists, or pacifists can take any offence. The countries involved have been given fictitious names, and so the argument presented is more academic than real.

The few war scenes introduced are not panoramic views of far-flung battle-lines, but more intimate pictures of isolated incidents. These glimpses serve to furnish the required atmosphere.

Arthur Maude, the star, is none of your tailor-made Adonises, but a very human, likable sort. There are fewer chances given him for exceptional acting than in many of his previous pictures. Constance Crawley and the remainder of the cast give good support.

Some of the scenes are over-prolonged, and a few of them contribute nothing toward advancing the story. The comparative novelty of the plot, however, will undoubtedly efface the impression of these defects.

A young reformer is trying to get a bill through Congress that will prohibit the exportation of arms. In this purpose he is opposed by a powerful powder manufacturer, by the secret agent of the country to which the munitions are being sent, and by an adventuress in the employ of this agent.

A secret agent of the country not receiving American arms plans to blow up all the plants turning out war material. The reformer hears of this scheme, and hurries to the mills belonging to his prospective father-in-law, these having been slated for destruction. He arrives just in time to extinguish the bombs, but is seen handling them, and is suspected of vandalism.

The Congressional committee hears of this, and kills the bill. But the owner of the mills receives a cablegram informing him of his son's death on the battlefield, so he decides not to manufacture more war material.

"THE DRAGNET"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

WILLARD MACK is a master-teller of stories involving crooks and the relentless persecution of them by the police. This tale is one of that kind, but the pathos is never relieved by the author's usual whimsical humor. The ending is a happy one, and comes as a relief after the harrowing experiences of the hero and heroine.

Harry Mestayer, in a simple and unaffected way, portrays the struggles of an ex-convict to stay straight. Vivian Reed will win the instant sympathy of the audience by her graphic presentation of a girl who has loved not wisely, but too well. Wheeler Oakman and Al Filson are almost always convincing.

The photography is not of a high order, but will doubtless be touched up before the regular prints are released. The directing is fair, and the locations are well selected.

Walton, an ex-crook, is doing his best to lead an honest life. A detective who knows his record is constantly shadowing him, and causes him to lose one job after another.

Walton meets a girl who is also a social outcast, and together they fight their temptations. The detective tries to "plant" evidence against Walton, but the victim always manages to prove his innocence. Finally he realizes that he will be jailed if he does not leave the country.

He marries the girl, and takes her to South America. After the lapse of a year the detective hears of their whereabouts and goes to South America. He is loath to do this, since he is about to become a father. When he finds that Walton and his wife are also prospective parents, his better nature prompts him to leave them in peace.

"UNDINE"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

NONE of the charm of the fairy tale has been lost in this screen version of Pierre De La Motte Fouquet's famous story of the nymphs of sea and wood. In picturizing it, Henry Otto has managed to retain the poetry and imagery of the original, and it is altogether a charming object.

Infinite pains must have been expended on the locations. There are scenes of water, crags, caverns and grottoes, angry blasts of surf directed against stony cliffs, and stretches of shore "where the cold sea maids rise to sun their streaming hair"; there are glimpses of woodland and waterfall, and the whole united by clever and mystifying double-photography, dissolves and tricks of the camera which make the fairy spirit real and present.

Moreover, in the manner of presentation also, has the note of poetic beauty been emphasized. The story is given as a fairy story read by a father to his child, and the action dissolves in as the pages of the book are turned.

enchanted shores of Unda, where countless maids, in scanty clothes disport themselves and do all manner of aquatic stunts.

Although their clothing is scanty (and in some cases entirely absent) there is nothing about the scenes which can give offense to anyone. Censors will look in vain for something to cut out. (Which does not mean that they will cut nothing.)

Excellent photography and unusual lighting, with an adequately artistic conception of what constitutes art, have come to the aid of the director, and are responsible for some of the most striking effects.

The story is of a nymph of the water who sinned and died, and in further expiation her little daughter is sentenced to existence with the mortals. She is left on the shore, where she is found by a fisherman and his wife, whose own daughter had been stolen by the mermaids.

The girl grows up to be Undine, and is found by a bold knight who has been sent into the enchanted forest as a test of love. He is sentenced by the king of the forest to be Undine's deliverer, and the two immediately fall in love and are married. Thus Undine's mission with the mortals is fulfilled, and she is carried back to her own people of the sea.

Ida Schnall, as Undine, does some remarkable things in the water. One of them is a dive of 150 feet from the side of a cliff —the cliff in fact which forms one wall of the famous arch on Santa Cataline Island.

The supporting company, which is numerous, appears to have been selected for beauty of figure, grace of action, and expertness in the water. Edna Maison, Douglas Gerrard, Carol Stellson, Caroline Fowler, O. C. Jackson, Josephine Rice, Grace Astor, Elijah Kerr and Jack Nelson head the cast.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR THE BUSY EXHIBITOR

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"A Chance Deception." (Biograph. Mon., Feb. 7.)—This is a reissue, in which several dramatic situations are provided. A young wife is accused by her husband of flirting with a man in a restaurant.

The man in question, a burglar, follows the couple home, and breaks into the house. The husband, returning from a trip outside, sees the intruder and accuses his wife. When the man is found in a closet, he saves himself by claiming to be the wife's lover.

She is turned out of the house, and wanders helpless and hopeless, until the burglar's wife hears of the affair. She compels her husband to confess, and the wife is taken back to her husband.

"The Iron Will." (Biograph. Three reels. Wed., Feb. 9.)—This is a dramatic romance of bandits in eastern Austria. Negra, masked leader of the band, has always kept his face concealed even from his followers. His fancy falls on the young daughter of one of the band, but she flees, and later marries a young shepherd.

Then he is attracted to Henrietta, daughter of a nobleman; she is in love with Lieutenant Szilard, but her father compels her to marry the wealthy Baron who comes a wooing.

Negra discovers the abode of the girl he first fancied, and goes after her. She locks herself in the hut, with Henrietta, who happens to be in the neighborhood, and Negra has a battle with the young husband; they fall over a cliff. Negra limps away, and Henrietta follows him to a lonely shack; looking through the window she sees him remove the mask, and recognizes him as the Baron, her husband.

Negra later attacks a party, headed by Lieutenant Szilard, which is convoying a collection of gold. In the battle which follows Negra is killed, and Henrietta finds herself free to wed Szilard.

"Destiny." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Jan. 29.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Man in Him." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Feb. 8.)—Not shown for review.

"The Fable of the Grass Widow, and the Mesmeree, and the Six Dollars." (Essanay. Wed., Feb. 9.)—A George Ade Fable not shown for review.

The story follows: One day a keen Business Man was approached by a Grass Widow who was a Book Agent and a Good Looker. He got so Dizzy lamping her that he had to lock his Legs under the Chair to keep from Turning Turtle.

She pushed a Jewelled Pen in his Mitt and showed him where to Sign. Later he Ponied Out six Shekels, and took the Set home to Wife. His Better Half remarked that all her women Acquaintances were receiving those same Volumes, and that a crowd of Married Men must have received a Club Rate. MORAL: Those who are entitled to it, get it sooner or later.

"Golden Lies." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Feb. 12.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Tom Devlan, a ne'er-do-well, is engaged to Vera Walton.

His brother Edward, a far better character, is also in love with her. In a fire, Edward rescues Vera, but not before she is blinded for life. Tom will not marry a blind girl, and so deserts her.

Edward writes letters to her, purporting to come from Tom, so that she will think him still true. Later he marries her, claiming that he is Tom.

Some time later Tom returns and tells Vera of Edward's artifice, but she says that she has known for some time who he is, but has fallen in love with him.

In the cast are Bryant Washburn, Elizabeth Burbridge, and Patrick Calhoun.

"Wurra Wurra." (Kalem. Tues., Feb. 8.)—This comedy finds Bud and a pal of his, Mac, on a cannibal island and their adventures with the inhabitants and in particular with the queen (Ethel Teare), smack of sameness throughout.

Director William Beaudine has hardly taken full advantage of his plot and while the reel begins and ends with a hearty laugh, the intermediate spasms are widely separated.

"The Darkest Hour." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., Feb. 9.)—This, the last of the "Stingaree" series, permits the outlaw to again escape from jail in a clever manner.

Through Ethel he secures a position as her fiance's valet and leaves for England in his employ. He learns from them that he has been freed from the murder charges brought against him in his native country.

Ethel's fiance finally resigns in Stingaree's favor as he sees that she has always loved him. True Boardman, Marin Sais, Paul Hurst and Edward Clisbee keep their work up to previous performances, the last named performer in particular giving a most pleasing characterization of the self-rejected suitor.

"The Trail's End." (Kalem. Fri., Feb. 11.)—The sixteenth and last of the "Ventures of Marguerite" finds the dainty heiress at last victorious in her battle against "The Wolf" and free to marry the man she loves.

This concluding instalment is full of trick mechanical devices which the villain brings to his command and their effect is as usual astonishing.

"The Peril of the Rails." (Kalem. Sat., Feb. 12.)—This episode of the "Hazards of Helen" series relies for the greater part of its interest and excitement on its involved plot rather than on any individual thrilling bit performed by Helen Gibson, although the fearless star has her nerve with her as usual.

"Cured." (Lubin. One reel. Sat., Jan. 29.)—Another Billie Reeves comedy, centering about the comedian's attempt to carry on a physician's practice while the latter is away from his office. It is fairly funny. Reeves, Arthur Matthews, and Carrie Reynolds, the principals, were directed by Earle Metcalfe.

"A Reformation Delayed." (Lubin. One reel. Mon., Jan. 31.)—An interesting little crook drama, written by Julian Lamothe and produced by Melvin Mayo. The story is slightly unconvincing in spots, but there is enough human interest in it to carry it.

Francelia Billington, Ronald Bradbury, Helen Wolcott, and William J. Spencer are the principals. The most pretentious scene, a masked ball, is well staged.

"The Dragnet." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., Feb. 7.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"A Mix-Up in Movies." (Selig. Sat., Feb. 12.)—Tom Mix and his cohorts have an excellent comedy vehicle in this play, and while they do not utilize every opportunity for laughs, they still create a lot of amusement.

A moving picture company uses a Western town for a "location," and three cowpunchers are much interested in their doings. One night they steal the camera, and early the next day they set it up outside a bank.

While one of them turns the crank, the other two enter the bank and rob it. Everyone thinks it is just a part of the photodrama, so the ingenious thieves make their get-away to the hills. Some of the movie actors witness the crime, and give chase to the bandits.

These actors overtake the thieves, and after complimenting them on their good acting, suggest that there is more money in movies than in crime.

The robbers then decide to return the money to the bank, and become screen heroes. Others in the cast are Babe Chrisman, Pat Chrisman, and Sid Jordan.

"Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial," No. 7.—Ice jam in creek floods streets of Joliet, Ill.; floods in streets of Chicago; Austrian Chargé poses with Count von Bernstorff at Washington; Harvard Hockey Club at practice at Cambridge; historic Hotel St. Louis at New Orleans condemned as unsafe; spring fashions; P. H. Chadbourn, of Belgian Relief Commission delivers trunkful of toys from Belgian children to President Wilson; Harvard students enlist in new preparedness regiment; ice yachts out at Red Bank, N. J.; with German civilian recruits on the western front; Hong Kong recruits march through London to join colors; Americans murdered by Mexicans buried at El Paso; cartoon by T. E. Powers.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Lillo of the Sulu Seas." (American. Three reels. Tues., Feb. 8.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Won by One." (Beauty. Wed., Feb. 9.)—This typical "Beauty" comedy is well played by Wallace McDonald, Dick Rosson, and Neva Gerber. The plot has some clever twists, and is a farce of situations rather than characters.

Connie and Louie, salesmen for rival "fake jewelry" concerns, both fall in love with Fanny, the belle of the town. They lavish paste jewels on the girl, and she finally decides to marry Louie.

There is a sensational jewelry robbery in New York, and Connie sees a way to get rid of his rival. He tells the local constable that Louie is the thief, and the officer arrests him, and takes him in triumph to the city.

There the jewels in his possession are found to be false, so he is released. The attendant publicity for Louie's company causes his employers to raise his salary. He returns to Fanny's home burg, and finds her about to be married to Connie. He causes Connie's arrest, and triumphantly marries the girl.

"Paddy's Political Dream." (Vogue. Thurs., Feb. 10.)—The action is fast and furious in this orgy of slapstick comedy, and the utter wildness of the plot and the grotesqueness of the characters will cause bewildered laughs.

A humble henchman in a grafting political ring dreams that he is put at the head of it. His experiences as the "man higher up" defy description.

"Powder." (American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe. Five reels. Thurs., Feb. 10.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"According to St. John." (Mustang. Three reels. Fri., Feb. 11.)—The theme of this picture is a bit old, but the cast puts it over most effectively. The sentiment is never maudlin, and the familiar Western characters take on new significance. In the cast are Anna Little, Jack Richardson, Tom Chatterton, and Ward McAllister.

Ben Wolf, a desperado, falls in love with the sister of the sheriff, a girl who is engaged to another man. Under the influence of this new emotion, he reforms. Hard-pressed for money, the girl's fiancee robs a stage-coach.

Ben has read in the Bible, "Greater love hath no man than this, that he lay down his life for a friend," and he decides to make the supreme sacrifice for the girl he loves. He admits that he was the bandit, and is led off to the gallows, in order to protect the man the girl loves.

"Billy Van Deusen and the Vampire." (Beauty. Sun., Feb. 13.)—This burlesque on the "vampire" films ought to be well received. Part of the fun is contributed by the plot, and much is due to the work of John Steppling, John Sheehan, and Carol Halloway.

Billy and Johnny see a regal beauty on the street, and both resolve to win her. They vie with each other in making her home a conservatory of costly hot-house flowers, but Billy decides that sterner measures are necessary.

He engages a professional "vampire" to lure Johnny to her apartment, and then sends a note to the girl he is pursuing, telling her of Johnny's unfaithfulness. The girl goes to the apartment, and there sees Johnny in an embarrassing position.

Thinking the little drama is finished, Billy comes into the room, and is also seen by the enraged girl. She decides to wed neither of them.

"Igorrotes, Crocodiles, and a Hat Box." (Vogue. Sun., Feb. 13.)—Not shown for review.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Graft." (Universal Special Feature. Ninth episode. Two reels. Week of Feb. 7.)—The separate title of this instalment, "The Insurance Swindlers" is key enough to the identity of the individual trust that Tom Larnigan measures his cunning against throughout two reels. However, there is much that is disagreeable in this chapter. Dauntless Tom is for a time thought dead as a result of being locked in a vault. Preparations for his funeral are made.

Friends come to see the remains deposited in a room, bare save for the presence of the coffin and a few gloomy candles. And to gruesomcly cap all this the face of the supposedly-deceased is shown, chalky white in several close-ups.

This of course will not do. Death is common and so is mourning. The first is allowed in pictures, the mourning ought not to be pictured, particularly mourning about an open coffin.

To go on with the story, Tom comes to life again, and the conspirators are once more defeated. If Universal sees fit to extensively edit this number, it will be quite acceptable.

"A Knight of the Range." (Red Feather. Five reels. Mon., Feb. 7.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of Feb. 5.

"Mixed Kids." (Nestor. Mon., Feb. 7.)—Two babies, one white and the other black hold the center of this picture. They carry a scene together in which they discover that they are in bed together and the white chap doesn't like the idea at all.

It's one of the funniest scenes seen in many a day. Outside of this the picture is somewhat slow. Ray Gallagher, Billie Rhodes, Stella Adams and Neal Burns are the principals. Al Christie had the idea and Horace Davey screened it.

"Yust from Sweden." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., Feb. 8.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of Dec. 29.

"Artistic Interference." (Imp. Tues., Feb. 8.)—Not yet shown for review.

"The High Fliers." (Victor. Two reels. Wed., Feb. 9.)—One of the best comedies Harry Myers has done. In fable form it tells of the marriage of Miss High Life and Mr. Dude. Miss High Life can drink ten cocktails without slipping an eyelid and Mr. Dude wears no shirt, unattached cuffs and corsets.

They marry and come to a doleful ending as the Dude's discover they can't live in a two hundred dollar apartment on a twenty dollar salary.

On the other hand Miss Plain Life and Mr. Honest Strike a match and the wedded life is happy.

Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby as the Dude's do excellent work, Myers playing the simpering poseur with ladylike grace and other effeminate affectations, and Miss Theby carrying the part of the swaggering girl to a fine burlesqued degree. The subtitles aid in making "The High Fliers" a very good comedy.

"Her Naughty Eyes." (L-Ko. Wed., Feb. 9.)—Alice Howell gets the wink habit and the 'come over here' look in her eyes in this production which is fairly amusing, despite the fact that it is an old idea.

"The Living Lie." (Laemmle. Three reels. Thurs., Feb. 10.)—A story of Paris' Latin quarter by F. McGrew Willis, directed by Leon Kent, which, when viewed, contained a number of scenes displaying the female form in stages of nudity, once quite nude.

The atmosphere striven for is attained by showing a cafe or a studio in which the people make very free with one another. The story is centered on an artist's model, who marries and her past consequently arises to cause a separation.

The child does the reuniting. In its first phases the continuity is uneven, while the subtitles are written in involved fashion. It is not a good picture.

"The Trail of Wild Wolf." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., Feb. 11.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of Dec. 29.

"The Missing Locket." (Rex. Fri., Feb. 11.)—Featuring Baby Early in a picture intended for children, but why not direct Baby Early to act like a child? She is very grown up indeed in this offering of H. C. Matthews and mature actions don't fit her neatly. The story is entertaining, based on an old plot, and will perhaps furnish enjoyment despite its lack of childish simplicity.

"A Quiet Supper For Four." (Nestor. Fri., Feb. 11.)—L. V. Jefferson to Al Christie to Horace Davey, is the course of the idea of this comedy which features Billie Rhodes and Ray Gallagher. It has good comedy in it, the young wife, trying her best to cook and failing. It is very funny all the way through and will be appreciated, we believe, to its fullest extent.

"His Majesty—Dick Turpin." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Feb. 12.)—This weird story is laid in an imaginary foreign principality and has as its central figure a gay young prince who much enjoys turning bandit for a few hours each day to rob the rich and give to the poor.

The death of his father, which automatically places him on the throne, prevents him from being arrested. The picture is much too full of a lot of wild riding, chasing through underground passages, etc. This also makes the story, which is virtually a one-reeler, hard to follow. Francis Ford, Grace Cunard and Jack Holt are the leads.

"Uncle Sam at Work," No. 8. (Powers. Sat., Feb. 12.)—Showing the United States seal reserves, the whale industry, the intricacies of the Postal Service and the Public Health Service. The last mentioned have hardly ever found their way into films and consequently their power to entertain is unusual. The first scenes are equally as interesting.

"Leap and Look Thereafter." (Joker. Sat., Feb. 12.)—A very good comedy due to its tremendously exaggerated incident and the entertaining plot that runs through it. It concerns a tobacco fiend who is finally cured of his habit by an antidote that he avoids taking for a time because he believes it is poison, and that his wife wants to put him out of the way. William Franey, Gale Henry, Milburn Moranti and Lillian Peacock are the leads.

"Firing the Butler or the Butler's Fire." (L.-Ko. Two reels. Sun., Feb. 13.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of Dec. 29.

"Arthur's Last Fling." (Laemmle. Sun., Feb. 13.)—One of Rupert Julian's distinctly novel pictures, so distinct and so novel, so good and so surprising in its conclusion that it makes one wonder why Rupert Julian doesn't set up as a scenario writer. Julian also directed and his work in the leading role is very good. Bertram Grassby, Abe Mundon and Elsie Jane Wilson fill the remaining stellar roles.

"THE SPIDER"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE SPIDER," by William H. Clifford, casts Pauline Frederick in two roles, one by which picture-goers generally know her, the worldly woman; but the other is quite a new venture for Miss Frederick.

In this part of Joan, she is a young girl in short dresses, unsophisticated and lovable, and by interpreting the character the star meets with most pleasing success.

The picture is notable in another respect other than the fact that it is Miss Frederick's first medium for dual impersonation, for despite this there are no double exposure scenes, and much artificiality is consequently done away with.

This meritorious omission and the fact that Miss Frederick gives such contrasting performances in her two roles, puts confusion to rout and almost convinces one that Valerie St. Cyr and Joan Marche are played by different actresses.

The only other important members of the cast are Thomas Holding and Frank Losee. The former in rendering his part of Julian St. Saens at times waxes quite theatrical by overacting in his big scenes. Losee gives a popular interpretation of Count Du Poissy, the villain.

Valerie St. Cyr is the mistress of the Count. When brought to light, her past reveals a deserted husband and an unknown daughter, Joan, who lives somewhere in Paris.

Valerie desires the artist Julian to paint her picture, but Julian informs her that he does work for only honorable women.

Hurt by this insult, Valerie poses as a destitute woman and obtains a position as model for Julian.

In the meantime the Count, looking for new fields to conquer, discovers Joan, the sweetheart of Julian, and unknown to all the daughters of Valerie. With the completion of the portrait, Valerie is wildly in love with Julian, but again he turns her down.

Infuriated, Valerie commissions the Count to kidnap Joan, so that she may have Julian to herself. The Count is only too willing, but once Joan is made a prisoner in his rooms, she attacks the Count and kills him with a knife.

At the same time Valerie learns through her detectives her real relationship to the girl, and going to the Count's rooms she assumes blame for the murder. Later she pays the penalty on the guillotine.

Director Robert Vignola has done good work in every point but the closing scenes. In picturing the guillotine setting, he has shown every detail, from the erection of the scaffold to the knife descending, as the scene fades out.

The end of Valerie might be plainly suggested by a few flashes of this, but sensitive people don't like and will not stand for the detailed episode.

"THE YELLOW PASSPORT"

(Shubert-World Films—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE YELLOW PASSPORT" pictures with a great deal of suspense and thrilling action, the flight of a Jewess from Russia after harrowing trouble with police officials, and subsequently the trouble she encounters living down a suspected though stainless past. The Yellow Passport, uncovered a season or so ago in theatrical circles as The Yellow Ticket, is the woman's hoodoo, for it stamps her according to Russian police law as a fallen woman.

Necessity, however, was the cause for the possession of the passport and not immoral desires, for in order to live otuside the Jewish pale and study voice culture, a yellow passport was necessary. Consequently, though remaining a self-respecting woman, Sonia was branded as impure.

Finally unable to stand unjustified persecution and taunts, she left Russia and came to America.

Here she becomes a noted prima donna and enters into a romance with Adolph Rosenheimer. But a Russian police officer appears and lays bare her supposed past. How she proves her innocence is not made very clear on the screen, but the fact remains that she does and the police officer meets a horrible death at the hands of the nihilists.

Such is the part that Clara Kimball Young carries, and she carries it well as expected. She makes the part an appealing one and acts with accustomed skill. Her support in the shape of John Sainpolis, Alec B. Francis, Edwin August and others is sincere and competent. For the minor roles very good types have been chosen, and good casting is also noticeable in the majority of the principal parts.

Edwin August has directed his subject most ably. The massacre of the Jews by the "Black Hundred," a series of scenes comprising about five hundred feet of film, is a realistic spectacle. The scenes were taken at night, and views of the players running about with torches, setting fire to every house on the streets, are exhibited.

The appeal that such a picture is bound to create through its widely sympathetic story and its star, who appreciates the many possibilities of her part, will undoubtedly cause "The Yellow Passport" to become very popular. Edwin August and Frances Marion collaborated on the scenario.

"DESTINY"

(Essanay—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

IF the title refers to the destiny "that shapes our ends, rough-hew them as we may," it is well chosen, for in spite of the rough-hewing done by the heavy, his efforts are finally frustrated.

In the hands of players less capable, the improbabilities of the drama would certainly prevent it from carrying conviction. As it is, the players are admirably cast, and perform with a studied smoothness all too rare in program releases.

Bryant Washburn's experience in heavy roles serves him in good stead when he is Jekyll, but when he is Hyde he has all the attractiveness demanded of a hero.

Ruth Stonehouse is equally good in the character of a care-free girl in her 'teens, and as a grief-stricken matron. Charles J. Stine is most effective in a character part, while Sydney Drew is not an "also-ran" in this fast field.

Robert Gray and Richard Waldron are rivals for the hand of Ethel Dixon. She accepts Waldron, but Gray gets him drunk, and contrives to have Ethel see him in that condition.

She breaks the engagement, and when Waldron discovers Gray's perfidy, he knocks him out, and thinks he has murdered him. Waldron flees, and through despondency and drink, becomes a derelict.

An ex-convict, whom he had once befriended, discovers his condition, and tells him that Gray was only stunned by the blow. Waldron returns home, and finds that he is forgiven by his sweetheart.

"FARMER AL FALFA'S CATASTROPHE"

(Bray-Paramount—Split Reel)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS animated cartoon from the Bray Studios is the work of Paul Terry, and is accompanied by a split reel nature drama contributed by Raymond L. Ditmars.

The Bray offering concerns the efforts of Farmer Al Falfa to get rid of "Glue," a pestiferous cat. Al Falfa tries various means of bringing about Glue's death, but all his efforts are of no avail.

He ties her to a rock and hurls her to the bottom of the lake. But she comes back. He throws her into a well, but she returns via the waterspout. He tries dynamite, but that also fails. Finally he faints, and Glue appears with a family of kittens.

All of which is done in the eccentric manner which characterized previous Bray offerings. The drawings are, as usual, excellent from an artistic standpoint. The cartoon, as a whole, is an entertaining novelty.

The other half of the reel entitled, "The Gathering of the Clans," is the most interesting of the sort we have seen. Various kinds of animals are the sole actors, and their work is surprising when you consider that it actually contributes to the telling of a story.

An eating contest between a monkey, caterpillar and a grasshopper brings out the various emotions of these animals, and is a real nature study.

Audiences will find many things to be amused over in "The Gathering of the Clans," and they will be interested in every foot of it.

Second Triangle Night Better Than First

Now comes the report from Florida that the receipts for the second night on which TRIANGLE PLAYS are shown are even better than those for the first. Probably it is because the first nighters are so impressed that enthusiastically they recommend TRIANGLE PLAYS to their friends.

Tallahassee, Fla., Jan. 22nd, 1916.

Mr. A. C. Bromberg, Mgr.,
Triangle Film Corporation,
Atlanta, Ga.

It seems impossible that my second night of TRIANGLE PLAYS should do even greater business than the first night. My patrons have nothing but praise. After checking up my receipts it occurred to me how nice it would be to show TRIANGLE PLAYS every night.

C. E. Daffin.

To the Exhibitor who is skeptical about the advisability of running TRIANGLE PLAYS more than one night this kind of evidence should make a decided impression. Many exhibitors have started with TRIANGLE one night showings and found it necessary to keep the pictures two or three nights in order to meet the demands of their patrons.

Triangle Releases of February 6th

For real forceful pictures—photo plays that impress the public to the extent of producing the highest praise, the TRIANGLE PLAYS this week are supreme.

Orrin Johnson, the popular actor who already has so many successes to his credit, will star in "D'Artagnan"—a thrilling and exciting filmization of that well-known story, "The Three Musketeers." For real adventure, quick action and tense moments there are few pictures that will equal this one. Exhibitors and public alike will appreciate and applaud.

"Acquitted" is the title of the play in which Wilfred Lucas has the principal role. The terrors of the terrible third degree which is imposed upon suspected criminals is one of the many absorbing scenes that make you hold your breath. Your warm sympathy is aroused for the kindly old man in his troubles and you boil with anger at the injustice of his plight.

For the Keystones, the two this week are great. "His Hereafter" and "His Pride and Shame." Both keep the audience doubled up with laughter and furnish more than their share of merriment. Real laughs—Big laughs predominate throughout.

WHY?

IT'S THE SAME OLD STORY — — PERMIT US TO REPEAT.

Nothing that we have said about the MOTIOGRAPH Projector has had as much influence on MOTIOGRAPH sales as the things which MOTIOGRAPH OWNERS SAY about them every day. There are thousands of exhibitors in this country today from whom you will hear higher praise of MOTIOGRAPHS than we would ever put in this advertisement.

Motion Picture Projection Simplified

By J. H. Hallberg

52—Can any other test be made with the coil illustrated in Fig. 36 to prove that it has an effect on the electric arc?

Ans.—The electric arc is subject to magnetic influence and is just as sensitive to it as is the magnetic needle of a compass and you may prove this fact by applying your test coil as illustrated in Fig. 36 in different positions near the burning arc within the lamp house, as illustrated in Fig. 37.

You will find that if you mount your coil on a stiff piece of copper wire and then have flexible leads connecting the terminals of the coil so that you can move the coil while the arc is burning around the arc in different positions the arc will bend in different directions, depending upon the position of your coil. By turning the coil around, the arc can be pulled towards it so that a solenoid or coil like the one described can be made to either pull the arc towards or blow it away from it.

This effect always present in a coil has been taken advantage of, in the design and construction of many kinds of switches, controllers and circuit breakers to actually blow out the arc by the magnetic lines of force when the switch is opened.

Every street car controller constructed during the past ten or fifteen years is equipped with a magnetic blow out across the contacts within the cylindrical controller enclosure.

In the early days, one company patented a street car controller with coils having magnet cores within them allowing the effect of the magnetic lines of force to blow out the arc within the controller. Another company conceived the idea of using a magnet coil only, without the core in close proximity to the separating contacts within the controller and it was so connected that it would pull or suck the arc within the insulated magnetic coil, thus rupturing the arc without burning the contacts when they were separated.

This influence of the magnetic effect on the arc in a projector has not been thoroughly understood by but a very few interested in the art and as a result much difficulty has been experienced by many, in maintaining arcs in projector lamps where the amperage maintained across the arc has been over what was usually employed three or four years ago which was generally a maximum of 35 amperes for direct and 45 amperes for alternating current.

53—Does the increased strength of the magnetic blow out effect with a 60 ampere arc materially change the burning conditions of the arc as compared with 30 amperes flowing?

Ans.—Most assuredly. With a 30 ampere arc you would have 30 ampere turns, tending to push the arc forward, whereas with a 60 ampere arc you would have double the strength or 60 ampere turns, forcing the arc forward towards the condensing lenses.

Making of Perfect Positive Prints No Easy Task

Control of the Film Can Only Be Secured Through the Engaging of the Perforations with the Film Mechanism of the Printer—The Day Must Soon Be at Hand When There Is Standardization

By FRANK M. BYAM, Sales Manager, the Bell and Howell Company

"ALL is grist that comes to my mill." Thus the miller, who, with beaming countenance, welcomes his customer at the door, while the pleasant sound of falling water comes to them from the direction of the old mill wheel. A brave proverb truly and suited to the time of its coining. Time without number has it been applied with aptness to divers doings of men.

Like most proverbs, this saying lives by virtue of its aptness. But it is not of universal application. The head of the printing and developing department of any film company will agree that it must neither be taken as a statement of fact nor as a suggested policy so far as his "grist" is concerned.

It is probably true that no one thing has troubled the motion picture producer more than has the problem of how to make satisfactorily prints. And, indeed, there are reasons in plenty why the task should be hard.

Some of the difficulties are inherent in the task itself. There is always the question of the condition of the film. It is conceded that the most pains-taking care is employed in the manufacture of motion picture film, but the material is extraordinarily sensitive to atmospheric changes, as well as to light.

It may turn out to have shrunken more—or less—than it might have been expected to, thus complicating the printing problem. And it is reasonably sure in shrinking to become convex in shape, and this whether the film has been developed or not.

Since good printing depends upon perfect contact between the positive and negative films, it becomes necessary to provide for the flattening of these shrunken films at the printing aperture if satisfactory prints are to be secured.

Cleanliness in Film Printing Necessary

Cleanliness is not only next to godliness, but in film printing it is "next to"—and a necessary element in success. Again there is the need of pure chemicals; of pure water; of proper temperatures whether of rooms, of films or of solutions, and a hundred other "needs," which must be met if the developing and printing department is to justify itself by its works.

Other difficulties there are, but the mention of these will warrant the contention that the work of this department should not be further complicated by the introduction of machines or equipmen of faulty design or construction, or that are lacking in what should be the prime essential—standardization.

The making of perfect positive prints from motion picture negatives is no easy task. Success depends not alone upon the exercising of great care and sound judgment, but also upon the use of machines of suitable design and dependable construction.

Since the exposure of the film to the printing light must be suited to the density of the negative, both strips of film must at all times be under the control of the operator.

So, too, the securing of perfect contact between the positive and negative films at the printing aperture, and the prevention of the lateral or transverse shifting of the films, thus keeping them relatively true to the margins of the negative, are conditioned upon complete control of the film.

Control of the film—complete and satisfactory control—can only be secured through the engaging of the perforations with the film movement mechanism of the printer.

Control Over the Film

The character of the control exercised over the film will depend upon the accuracy with which the mechanism is suited to the perforations. That is another way of saying that the film movement mechanism must be built to the same gauge as that which controlled the performation of the film—that the shape and size of the perforations and the distances between them—whether of width or of length—must be taken into account in establishing the specifications governing the making of the shuttle mechanism, the feed and take-up sprockets, or of any other parts which engage with the perforations.

If the statements made in the last paragraph may be accepted as accurate, a reel of negative film, composed of strips perforated on two or more machines of different gauge-construction, cannot possibly be made to yield first-class positive prints for the reason that no one film movement mechanism can be expected to engage perfectly with perforations made to several different gauges.

The remedy for this difficulty lies in standardization. It can be overcome in no other way. So long as manufacturers of perforators—whether for sale to the trade or for use by the manufacturer—are permitted to vary the size and shape of the perforations, or any of the other specifications governing the perforation gauge, just so long will annoyance, confusion and loss hamper the activities of producer and exhibitor alike.

The remedy is so obvious that one wonders why it was not applied long ago. No doubt the rapid growth of the motion picture business accounts for many of its defects and inefficiencies, and—among these—for the absence of a fixed standard of film perforation.

But the business has now reached a point where competition is felt, and where over-production is at least a possibility. If, as many believe, readjustments must come, they will be based upon "the survival of the fittest."

Thoughtful men realize that the defects must be removed and the weak points strengthened if the business is actually to become what it already is potentially—one of the most important of modern industries.

Standardization Is Necessary

And those who have studied the question agree that standardization in general, and the standardization of film perforation in particular, is a task of first importance. The initiative in its performance should be taken by the manufacturers themselves.

If they do not act voluntarily a standard of film perforation should be established by others and accepted by the trade, and the use of perforating machines or of film processed by them, should be conditioned upon full compliance with that standard.

All who have studied the motion picture business with a view to analyzing its processes have been struck by the inter-dependence of its various departments.

We have seen how vitally the work done by the film perforator may affect that of the camera, printer and projector. It remains only to consider the performance of the camera in its relation to the printing and developing of film pictures.

The design and construction of the motion picture camera should be such as to make it an instrument of the highest possible efficiency in the hands of a competent operator. It should be equipped with the best lenses it is possible to procure.

Such an instrument when properly used can be depended on to produce good negatives, subject, of course, to the limitations imposed by lighting conditions and the skill, or lack of it, of the cameraman.

But even if all cameras measured up to this standard, and uniformly good negatives were made, the product would still fall short of being "good" from the standpoint of the printing department. This brings us to a consideration of the question of establishing a uniform point on the film at which the picture should start.

The subject was discussed under "Standardization and the Taking of the Motion Picture," but since the failure to establish such a point interferes more seriously with printing than with photography, it may properly be referred to here.

Disadvantage of Cameras Not Standardized

The seriousness of the disadvantage which arises because cameras are not standardized in respect to the starting of the picture is well illustrated by a practice common in many printing rooms. When negative films reach these printing rooms and inspection shows that they are the work of several cameras of different design, no attempt is made to splice them and run off the positive prints as a continuous strip.

On the contrary, the positive stock is cut up in lengths to match the negative, and each piece is run separately. In this way the defects in printing which are peculiar to imperfect framing on account of the shifting of the starting-line of the pictures are avoided—but at considerable cost.

Operating Electricity — Questions Answered — Repairing Equipment

Edited by J. H. Hallberg

Who Will Answer All Questions You Send in, No Matter How Simple or How Difficult

FIVE QUESTIONS AND THEIR ANSWERS THAT EVERY OPERATOR SHOULD KNOW

C. W. R., Cincinnati, O.—Please give me answers to the following questions: First—When you close switch it arcs, although carbons are apart. Second—When you close switch fuse blows although carbons are apart. Third—When you bring carbons together fuse blows. Fourth—What is a short in rheostat? Cause and results? Fifth—When rheostat gets hot and you can't strike an arc.

ANSWER.—I beg to answer the questions as follows:

First Question—When you close switch it arcs, although carbons are apart.

Ans.—The arcing at the line switch with carbons apart in the lamp house may be due to the following:

First—If you use a transformer on A. C., the primary winding will be connected across the line when you close the switch, which will show sparking, due to the flow of current through the primary. Fig. 1.

Second—If you use a rheostat or choke coil in series with the arc, and you close the line switch with carbons apart, there should be no sparking at the switch if there is not a ground or short circuit on the inside of the switch. If there is sparking at the switch contacts it indicates a flow of current, and you must immediately look for a ground, other unexpected overload or short circuit at some point between your line switch and the carbon clamps.

Second Question—When you close switch fuse blows although the carbons are apart.

Ans.—This may happen with a transformer on A. C., if there is a partial short circuit in the primary winding, due to overheating or mechanical injury of some sort which should make two or more of the turns in the primary windings come into contact with each other. With a rheostat or choke coil on direct or alternating current a fuse will blow if there is a short circuit or other unexpected load at some point between the switch and the carbon holders.

Third—What causes the fuses to blow when you bring the carbons together?

Ans.—The simpliest answer to this question wil be that the fuses are too small for the load. If the fuses are correct, to protest the line feeding the service, then the transformer, if one is used, passes too much current, or if a rheostat or choke coil is used it is not correctly adjusted to limit the current flow to the proper requirement, or it may be that a part of the coils have become short circuited, allowing the current to pass over only a part of the rheostat, which, of course, decreases its resistance and increases the current above normal, and the fuses must blow under those conditions.

Fourth—What is a short circuit in a rheostat, and what is the cause and the result?

Ans.—A short circuit means exactly what it states, namely, that there is provided when a short circuit occurs a shorter path of lower resistance than there ought to be under normal conditions.

A short circuit on a line means that the two feeders or wires make contact with each other, and this is the most severe kind of a short circuit.

A short circuit in a rheostat may be represented by the sagging of the resistance coils for instance, if they are of the spiral kind, which can happen due to over-heating, which follows the use of a rheostat on excessive voltage which forces more current through it than it is built for, or a short circuit within a rheostat can happen if two or more coils or grids touch each other, due to a mechanical disarrangement of the supports for the resistance units within the rheostat, or a short circuit in a rheostat can happen due to the breaking down of the mica or other insulation used to insulate the various resistance units from each other.

The cause of a short circuit in a rheostat is enumerated above. The result is (due to a part of the resistance being shunted or cut out, or shorted) the current will flow through a smaller portion of the rheostat than intended which lowers its resistance, which increases the current flow, providing the line voltage is kept the same.

Fifth—What is the trouble when rheostat gets hot and you cannot strike an arc?

Ans.—If the rheostat should heat when you close the line switch, and you cannot strike an arc between the carbons, then you must look for a ground at the carbon holders or a short circuit between the rheostat on your carbons. You are sure the current goes through the rheostat because it gets hot.

You are also sure that the current passes from the rheostat to the return wire before it gets to the carbons, so that you must look for a ground or short circuit between the rheostat and the carbons.

PERFECT FOCUS IMPOSSIBLE ON A WAVY SURFACE

H. M. J., Athens, Ga.—I want to ask why our picture seems to be slightly out of focus on the sides, and sometimes at the bottom? This happens on both machines. We have a plaster curtain. The two last coats were white paint, and the curtain is very wavy, not smooth at all. We use between forty and fifty amperes D. C. Our throw is 78 feet, with 4¾ E. F. lenses. Is our amperage sufficient for the size picture we have?

We have a General Electric A. C. to D. C. Fort Wayne Compensarc, 2¾ K. W. Will it hurt this machine to pull 50 amperes regular? My light gives lots of trouble. I can't get any results at all with the solid carbon below, so I use a ¾ cored above and ½ inch cored below, but they needle so bad, and at times the light will run out of the crater on the bottom carbon and run back on the tip which gives bad results on the screen.

We are using Electra carbons. Any help you could give me will be very much appreciated.

Power, Simplex and Baird Machines and Minusa Gold Fibre Screens

LEWIS M. SWAAB
1329 VINE STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

ANSWER.—If your curtain, or rather the wall, upon which you project your picture is not perfectly flat, but wavy, it is impossible to secure perfect focus over the entire picture.

I would suggest and recommend first of all that you install a good new screen of any standard and approved make. The cheaper screens can be had at thirty-five cents per square foot, and another style at 50 cents per square foot, and the most expensive at the present writing is the seventy-five cent quality. The finish on the screen can be had in either silver or gold tint. Claims are made for both, and either one gives excellent service. The silver tint is cheaper than the gold tint.

It is somewhat difficult for me to state the exact cause for the picture being out of focus at different times on the sides and at the bottom unles the trouble is due to your screen. It is natural that the operator should try to focus the principal part of the picture, and therefore if your screen is not flat, other parts may, on that account, be out of focus.

There are, however, many instances where the film itself is buckled, due to being too dry or having been injured in some way, or may be the stock of the film itself is not perfectly smooth and uniform over the entire length of the reel.

I have seen cases on certain makes of machines where the top roller over the film gate would be held under excessive spring tension, causing the film to buckle. I have seen cases where faulty intermittent sprockets were used which would also have a tendency to allow the film to buckle.

Again there are cases where the film tension springs are improperly adjusted for faulty, and you must not forget that if your aperture plate is badly worn, this would also have a tendency, if the wear is not uniform over the entire length of the runners, to throw part of the film out of focus.

As you have not stated what make machine you have, it is difficult to say which one of the above faults might be present in your case, but I believe if you look into the matter along the lines set forth you can overcome your trouble.

Fifty amperes of D. C. should give you splendid satisfaction for the distance and size picture your lens will give.

The General Electric Company's Fort Wayne A. C.-D. C. Compensarc of 2¾ K. W. capacity should easily take care of a load of 50 amperes at the arc, providing you operate only one arc on the machine at 50 to a maximum of 55 volts, and there should be no danger in running this arc continuously, providing the machine is in good order and properly installed.

Your complaint about unsteady light is one which often confronts operators when using motor generators, or when using D. C. with high amperages.

If you use ¾ inch cored carbon in the upper holder, and if this carbon is large enough, which it should be for a maximum of 50 amperes, I recommend that you use a 9/16 inch cored carbon in the bottom holder, preferably of the Electra or Bio make.

There is a considerable difference in the capacity of a 9/16 inch diameter carbon as compared with the ½ inch, and it may be that this will avoid the needling of your lower carbon.

If both carbons needle, then I am quite sure for some reason or other that your motor generator delivers more than 50 amperes, and under that condition it would be well to have the generator examined and tested. If you are sure that the amperage is not over 50, and the carbons still needle, then I would recommend the use of ⅞-inch cored carbon in top for the positive, and a 9/16 to ⅝-inch cored carbon in the bottom for the negative. The Electra carbons should be entirely satisfactory, but the ½-inch carbon is too small.

I will be pleased to give you further advice upon reply from you.

ARTHUR F. SASS has resigned his position as office manager for the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company and his place has been taken by C. H. Hahn, who has been promoted to this position.

PORT ARTHUR, TEXAS, MAKES STRINGENT PROJECTION LAWS

PORT ARTHUR, Texas, has passed a more or less stringent ordinance regulating the operation of motion picture machines and the construction and arrangement of screen houses in that city.

The ordinance provides that booths shall be constructed entirely of fireproof material. It is provided that the booth must not be placed directly over an exit, and at the end of the building opposite the street entrance. Provisions are made for the height of booths, which varies according to the size and kind of projector.

The main entrance hall shall be hung on at least three heavy hinges and made to close against a substantial metal rabbet.

Portable booths will not be allowed except for private entertainments. Projectors must be enclosed in feed reels enclosed in a metal magazine constructed of 20 U. S. guage metal. The National Electric Code must be followed in all electrical work.

No film will be allowed to be exposed in the booth at the same time other than the one film in process of transfer. Two easily accessible fire extinguishers shall be placed within reach of the operator.

To further safeguard from congestion in case of fire, it is provided that the main auditorium of a theatre shall have no perpendicular rises and the grade shall not be more than one foot in ten.

Attention has been given to exits, and it is provided that there shall be at least two exits, one at the front and one in the rear, not less than five feet in width.

Seats shall be not less than thirty-two inches from back to back, not more than ten seats in a line between aisles, nor more than four between any seat and an aisle.

Operators and assistant operators are required to appear before the city electrical inspector for examination and pay a fee of five dollars.

Before running a film, the operator is required, under the terms of the ordinance, to first show on the screen a plate reading as follows:

"This machine is now being operated by operator (or assistant operator) Under Permit Number ...., City of Port Arthur, Texas."

It is further provided that the city electrical inspector and the city fire marshal make weekly inspections of each and every motion picture machine, its enclosure and the building in which it is operated. Violators of any of these provisions are liable to have their current turned off, authority for such an act being placed in the hands of the city inspectors.

Penalties are provided. Ten dollars is the lowest fine; one hundred dollars the maximum, and each day's violation constitutes a separate offense.

Due to the fact that there was no adequate law in force prior to December 18, the mayor and city commissioners, deeming it necessary to immediately pass the public safety measure, ordered that the ordinance take effect at once without the usual preliminaries.

VANCOUVER LOCAL NO. 348 ELECT W. E. McCARTNEY PRESIDENT AND J. O. THOMAS VICE-PRESIDENT

AN election of officers for the current year was held late in January by the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union, Vancouver Local No. 348, I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M. O., when the following were installed:

President, W. E. McCartney; vice-president, J. O. Thomas; secretary-treasurer, A. O. Hansen; recording secretary, William Tenny; sergeant-at-arms, William Woolridge; business agent, E. Huttlemayer; executive at large, William Worby; examining board, W. E. McCartney, J. O. Thomas, Jos. LaChance; trustees, P. Pitner, J. H. Leslie, E. S. Holdsworth; delegates to Trades and Labor Council, P. Pitner, J. O. Thomas; delegate to B. C. Federation of Labor, A. O. Hansen.

The twenty-five members present at the meeting later went to the home of P. Pitner, where the evening was spent with music and refreshments prepared by the social committee.

Harry Lester, of Atlantic City, N. J., Local No. 310, and E. Fortune, of Denver, Colo., Local No. 260, who happened to be in town with "The Birth of a Nation," were guests of the local boys.

BUSINESS CONDITIONS BRING LARGE PROFITS TO EXHIBITORS

O. F. SPAHR, general manager of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, states that he is more than satisfied with the business in the motion picture industry in 1915, and prophesies that there will be far greater prosperity in 1916.

He feels that the exhibitor field throughout the country is at last on a sound business basis. The theatre managers have begun to depend upon steady patronage for their shows rather than on the unstable transient trade.

This makes it necessary for them to install better equipment and to run better shows, which makes for improvement in the conditions of the whole industry. The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company since last July has been working overtime continuously to fill the orders, and this January, which is usually a slack month, has been one of the biggest ones in their history.

Mr. Spahr also states that during the last six months of 1915 the sales to churches and schools has increased five hundred per cent. This is opening up a field to the manufacturers of first-class machines which is bound to prove a profitable one.

DANCE CRAZE GRIPS BALTIMORE EXHIBITORS AND KEEPS THEM TANGOING INTO THE SMALL HOURS

THE dance craze seems to have gotten a firm grip upon the various motion picture interests of Baltimore. On Monday, January 24, the Baltimore Motion Picture Operators' Organization held its annual ball. On Thursday, January 20, the National Film Corporation, the only picture producing company in Baltimore, held a dance. In a few weeks, the Maryland Movie Club, an organization composed of the employees of the various theatres and film exchanges, will hold a dance.

One of the interesting incidents of the National Film Corporation entertainment was the introduction of the new director to the players. The concern had just secured the services of Charles Lester, formerly connected with the film department of the World Film Corporation, and before that with the William Fox Company.

He arrived in Baltimore late in the evening of the same date as the dance. Margaret Cahill, president of the corporation, got in touch with him and had him go to the dance. Another interesting incident of the dance was a surprise sprung on Miss Cahill, when she was presented with a handsome silver loving cup by the players.

The dance of the operators last Monday night was attended by over one thousand persons. The exhibitors took a lively interest in the affair and the event attracted nearly all of the exhibitors as well as exchangemen in this city.

Representatives of the motion picture operators' organizations of Boston, New York and Washington were also present. The wonderful electrical effects in the ball room were the feature of the evening.

New Edison Super-Kinetoscope Marks a Great Advance

This "Superdreadnaught" Among Motion Picture Projectors, Now Completed and Ready for the Market, Produces an Absolutely Flickerless Picture, Utilizing in Its Construction a Secret Discovered by the Inventor—Advantages Over Any Machine of the Sort Previously Made, and Details of Operation Fully Explained.

By J. H. HALLBERG.

REPRINTED FROM "MOTION PICTURE NEWS," OF DECEMBER 18, 1915.

THE rapid development in the character of the modern photoplay and the production of perfect motion picture films has created a demand for a motion picture projector different from the ordinary machines used during the past. Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor, has in consequence thereof devoted a great deal of time during the past few years to the development of a motion picture projector which will fill the most exacting conditions and requirements.

The development of this machine was put into the hands of Adolph F. Gall, technical director of the Motion Picture Division of the laboratories of Thomas A. Edison, Orange, N. J. Under the direction of Mr. Edison, Mr. Gall has produced a projector which is novel in many respects and which has advantages not possessed by any other projector on the market at the present time.

In designing this machine the instructions were to produce the best at any price, and judging by the exhibition which the writer saw at Orange, Thomas A. Edison has certainly produced what he has set out to do.

The name "Super," as taken from the term "Superdreadnaught," as used in connection with the largest and most modern battleships, is well chosen, because the new Edison Super-Kinetoscope certainly is a superdreadnaught among motion picture projectors. Fig. 1 illustrates the solidity, simplicity and beauty of its design.

The Table or Stand

The stand itself in Figure 1 is not of the pedestal type. That type would not be in keeping with the massiveness and rigidity —staunch dependability—found in every other part of the Super-Kinetoscope. The stand of the Super-Kinetoscope is of the design used in machinery where rigidity and stability are of vital importance, and is a distinct advance over other makes, and a radical departure.

The table or stand may be elevated or lowered to any required height or position, and may be instantly tilted to any desired angle. The legs of this machine are located so that they help rather than hinder all movements of the operator.

Simply loosening two nuts and operating a hand wheel adjusts the table quickly and surely to an almost micrometer nicety or accuracy. Although provision is made for it, it is not necessary to bolt the Super-Kinetoscope to the floor, because of its own weight and rigidity.

The drive from the motor to the machine is accomplished through a countershaft provided with an adjustment to take care of varying lengths of drive belts. It is also provided with a roller clutch which disengages the motor drive from the machine should the machine at any time be hand driven. This is an excellent feature, as on all other machines the operator has to drag the motor when he is hand cranking. This is only another indication of the superdreadnaught nature of the Super-Kinetoscope—adaptable, immediately and efficiently, to all conditions, ready, responsive and trouble proof.

Also, while the machine is motor driven, the hand crank is pendant, and cannot be run backwards as it automatically disengages itself. But unlike many machines which must take off the handle when it is electrically driven, the hand crank on the Super-Kinetoscope may always be left on without being in the way of the operator and making it a friend, indeed, in its instant availability should anything go amiss with the current or motor.

The Lamphouse

The lamphouse (Fig. 2) is unusually large, substantial and built on scientific principles for the radiation of heat from the arc. The lower part—that part nearest the operator—never becomes uncomfortably warm, as the inside of the lamphouse is lined with transite board. Transite board is especially adapted to this use, as while it radiates heat, it is a non-conductor of electricity. Between the heat-radiating board—which is on three sides—and the outside of the lamphouse there is ample air space.

This causes a current of air, when in operation, to pass steadily up along the sides of the lamphouse and out of the well ventilated top.

The entire lamphouse is in a sheet iron casing which serves to minimize the condenser breakage when heavy currents are used—a thing quite likely to happen on most other machines.

The lamphouse top is perforated and gabled to obviate any possibility of there being accidentally placed on top of the lamphouse any reel of film. This is in accordance with the most exacting boards of fire underwriters, not to speak of the protection it affords the exhibitor.

The lamphouse is mounted on rollers so that with a very slight effort it can be shifted from the motion picture objective to the stereopticon lens.

The New Lamp

In the lamp of the Super-Kinetoscope (Fig. 3) are found a number of efficient and convenient improvements and innovations. The lamp may be adjusted to any desired position from the vertical to an angular position of 30 degrees.

The carbon jaws are unique in design and are made of phosphor bronze and accurately machined to make absolutely sure perfect alignment and contact with the carbon. The jaws design is somewhat similar to the claws of a lobster. They will accommodate any size of carbon from one-half inch to one inch. Extended, the lower jaw will take an 8-inch long carbon and a 12-inch carbon in the upper jaw.

The jaws are also provided with extra long conductors which eliminate the possibility of the lead wires burning off at the terminals.

The arc, which is of unusually sturdy construction, is of the rack and pinion type, and has a maximum current carrying capacity of 125 amperes.

The carbon gripping feature of the Super-Kinetoscope will appeal to every operator in its time and trouble saving features. While the jaws will grip the carbon with a tight and permanent grip, they will practically never break the carbon through this pressure, as the contact with the carbon is distributed over a large area instead of having the contact pressure all at one point, as in screw clamping devices on other machines.

The jaws are independently adjustable so that the carbons may be "jack knifed" if such an arrangement appeals to the operator. The lower carbon jaw has a "right and left" adjustment and the upper carbon jaw a backward and forward adjustment. The convenience of the Super-Kinetoscope here is again shown in the fact that all of these adjustments are made from the outside of the lamphouse at the rear, and may be made while the arc is burning.

The forward and backward adjustments of the entire lamp can be accurately and quickly done by the rack and pinion adjustment.

The simplicity of good machine design is again evidenced in the fact that in the changing from or to any position, the position of the arc, with respect to the center of the condenser, remains unchanged.

In the condenser mechanical provision is also made for that perfect and permanent alignment which makes for perfect projection in the Super-Kinetoscope. The lens mount is part of the casting which supports the lamphouse and is in no way fastened to the lamphouse itself. Quite the contrary, the lamphouse is supported by this lens mount. Therefore, as is plainly seen, the optical axis or centre of the lens mount can never be disturbed or thrown out, through the warping of the lamphouse from heat.

The lens mount will accommodate different lens systems—a combination of meniscus and bi-convex lens; a combination of meniscus and two plano-convex; or the conventional double plano-convex systems. Either may be as readily used in the adaptable and highly efficient Super-Kinetoscope. In no other machine are these features embodied. Other makes require the use of auxiliary devices—more parts and more trouble—to meet these conditions.

The lens mount on the Super-Kinetoscope is also provided with a simple but effective arrangement to accommodate and facilitate the spacing between the convex surfaces of lenses of different focal lengths. The lamphouse is also adjustable to meet any optical system.

The Mechanism

The secret of the flickerless picture which the Edison Super-Kinetoscope projects is due mainly to the one big truth which Mr. Edison's genius discovered—the machine must be "built around" the flickerless shutter. All previous designers of machines had gone at it the other way—the illogical way—of building the shutter into the machine, of making the shutter fit, or be adapted to the rest of the machine instead of, as in the Super-Kinetoscope, adapting or designing the entire machine to the requirements of a theoretically and optically perfect shutter.

The Kinetoscope (mechanism in Fig. 4) is so designed that the picture is shifted in one-sixth of a revolution instead of the longer one-fourth of a revolution as in other makes. This means fifty per cent faster and with a 3-bladed shutter three periods of darkness which are exactly equal to the three periods of light, and the movement so rapid that the shift takes place in one of the periods of darkness. This is the reason why, even with the mechanism running at sixty a minute and without any film, there is absolutely not a trace of quiver in the light.

New Method of Threading

One of the most marked features of the Super-Kinetoscope is its "straight line" threading. In it, threading is no more the slow, inaccurate job it has been. The film follows no tortuous, roundabout path in the Super-Kinetoscope, to exhaust the patience of the operator—and the audience—when he "loses his loop," jams up the mechanism with crumpled film and ruins the films. The film in the Super-Kinetoscope follows one straight line, direct from the upper magazine to the lower magazine. You do not have to fuss and guess, as with other machines, in making allowance for when threading the loops the hands are not used to form the loops.

The upper and lower sprockets on the mechanism (Fig. 4) are provided with a device to rotate them in either direction. Thus the loops may be quickly and accurately adjusted to any desired length without removing the film from the mechanism. These sprockets, too, are reversible; that is, when the sprocket teeth, from long use, wear perhaps more on one side than another, by simply removing one screw the sprocket may be turned end for end, thereby utilizing the other—the unworn—side. This means double life for the sprocket.

In threading the film is pulled straight down from the upper to lower magazine and all sprocket rollers closed. Simply a half turn of a knob on the upper or lower sprocket sets the loop to the exact length required. The operation is most simple. By pulling outward on the knob the sprocket is released from its shaft and it turns backward or forward, increasing or decreasing the loop. Let it go and the sprocket instantly re-engages with the shaft.

The Magazine

The winding hubs in their greater diameter mean a distinct advantage to all exhibitors in that they will save the film much wear and thereby make better pictures for all. The hubs of the Super-Kinetoscope are three times the diameter of the regular hub in general use. They are 4½ inches in diameter. To get the proper initial speed on the smaller—the regular—hub, the film must travel around the hub three times as fast and be subjected to three times as much abrasion as on the Super-Kinetoscope, the regular hubs being but one-third as large as those on the Super-Kinetoscope. This, of course, scratches the film badly, particularly the first and last of the film. These larger hubs, too, means less wear on the mechanism as well as less wear on the film.

The upper and lower magazines are uncommonly substantial and enduring. Made of heavy pressed steel and seamless, the magazines and doors cannot possibly become bent or warped. They measure full sixteen inches in diameter and will accomodate 2,000 feet of film. The magazines' hinges are richly nickeled and to be had with or without springs, complying with the requirements of the various boards.

Absolute Permanent Focus

Another striking feature of the Super-Kinetoscope is the positively permanent focus which it maintains, once adjusted. The focusing device is part of the mechanism, the lens tube being mounted in the mechanism casting. There is an adapter ring so that the lens may be adjusted to any position and then clamped rigidly in place by a tightening thumb screw. The lens is focused by a thumb screw which moves the casting forward and backward. The lens is therefore left in absolute, unchanging alignment with the aperture. No amount of vibration—if there was such vibration in the Super-Kinetoscope—can jar loose the lens and throw it out of focus. This remarkably simple arrangement eliminates the necessity of the rack and pinion jacket, as only the lens tubes are used. Whatever wear there might be in the lens focusing is automatically taken up on both screws, assuring always that same rigidity and permanency of alignment.

Here, as everywhere else in the machine, the design is also more convenient to the operator. He can, with this arrangement, focus from the rear instead of the common and awkward front focusing. This feature is especially convenient when the operator cranks with the right hand. His left hand is free to focus readily and quickly.

A New Kind of Film Gate

The film "gate" (Fig. 5) on the Super-Kinetoscope is really not a gate at all, as it is not hinged. It is ingeniously devised to slide along on two rods and is quickly opened or closed by the single downward or upward movement, respectively, of a lever or handle. The "gate" has two hardened, highly polished solid steel runners which are pressed against the edges of the film by two equalizing springs. These instantly grip the film and insure, at all times, a perfect equal tension on both sides of the film which gates on other machines, because of their mechanical principles, cannot have. The tension on the Super-Kinetoscope steel runners or shoes is controlled by convenient thumb screws. The eliminating of hinges, with their consequent wear and lack of constant perfect adjustment, substituting for them the positive action of this new Super-Kinetoscope film "gate" is in keeping with the admirable mechanical perfection attained in this superdreadnaught model.

The aperture plate is easily removable and readily cleanable. It is so designed that it will practically never wear out, as it is protected on either side of the plate by two thin strips of highly tempered steel which, however, are replaceable in less than five minutes and at a trifling cost, insuring practically a new plate each time. Four small screws on each side hold this strip of steel in place, under which is clamped a very thin wide strip of spring steel which furnishes the actual track for the film. This type of plate does away with the commonly seen scratching of film from passing the aperture plate. The lens, aperture plate and revolving shutter are always in a fixed relative position.

One of the most radical departures in the Super-Kinetoscope is its method of framing the picture. Where in other makes the mechanism is moved up and down to effect the framing, on the Super-Kinetoscope it is remarkably simplified by moving the film instead. Any such method of framing that involves this shifting of the mechanism itself is bound, as has been proved so often in daily experience, to be a constant source of trouble in, for instance, throwing the shutter out of synchronism or the correct relative position. With the Super-Kinetoscope innovation in framing, the shutter and the framing device always remain in a permanent correct position, and there is never any need of a device for resetting the shutter. This insures perfect alignment, absolute and unchanged, for the lens, the aperture plate and revolving shutter.

The gears are not concerned or do not enter into the framing movement, with the result that the shutter, once adjusted, is always adjusted.

Framing is effected by simply raising a lever or handle which connects with a roller. This roller presses the film against another roller—just below the aperture plate (see Fig. 4) and against the intermittent sprocket, thus forming the loop. This looping action pulls the film further down over the aperture plate and frames the pictures, quickly and accurately.

The Flickerless Feature

The very heart of the secret of the flickerless picture which the Super-Kinetoscope projects is found in a most ingenious adaptation of the Star and Geneva movement. The innovation is this: The movement of the cam is accelerated by an "accelerator" during its engagement with the star wheel accelerating the cam so that the picture is shifted in one-sixth of a revolution instead of in the one-fourth of a revolution found in other machines. The result is the long-sought movement of a true 6 to 1 —the ideal in projection. This 6 to 1 movement gives the ideal 3-wing shutter possibility of fifty per cent light and fifty per cent darkness—the scientific and optical reason and secret of an absolutely flickerless picture—a picture without "travel ghosts" or even a trace of projection imperfections. The star wheel and cam are of the enclosed type and run in oil, and are hardened and ground.

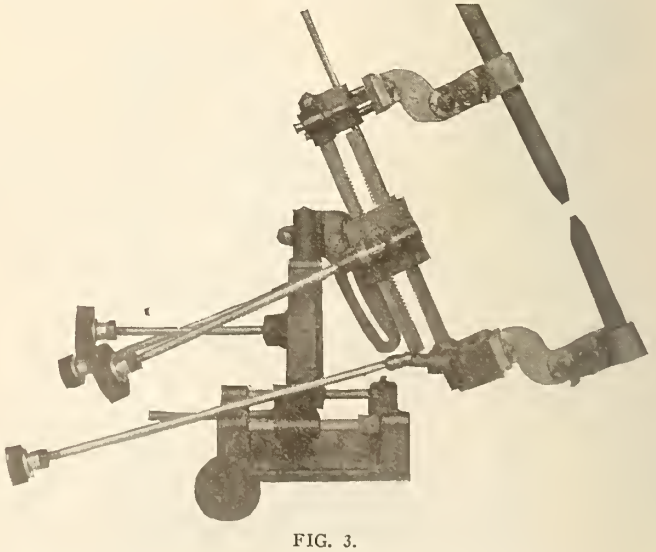

FIG. 3.

The cooling arrangement is as much improved as other parts of the mechanism. The fire shutter (see Fig. 4) is so devised that it never fails to work. It is over two inches removed from the film. In front of the fire shutter is also an auxiliary cooling plate and in front of that is another radiating plate. These ingenious precautions allow plenty of air to pass through, cooling quickly and steadily, so that fire could not possibly start at this source while the fire shutter is down, even if the light were long standing.

The Rest of the Mechanism

The bearings are all made of finely tempered tool steel, accurately ground and lapped to a fine finish. All bearings are provided with oil cups.

The gears are large and substantial, and are of the helical type —the type erroneously called "spiral"—are accurately generated, not cast.

The take-up is all gear driven, thus eliminating trouble-making belts and chains. The tension of the take-up is adjustable. There are but two parts in the entire machine which require pins. This feature makes the disassembling of the machine an astonishingly simple task, as each part is held in place by a screw in the end of its shaft.

This is just typical of the simplicity attained in this super-dreadnaught machine.

The projecting mechanism, which is cast as one solid piece insuring the greatest rigidity and permanent alignment of all parts, is entirely enclosed in a fireproof casing. The front or right hand door has a long window of wired glass, the full length of the door, which on account of the straight line threading feature of the Super-Kinetoscope, makes the entire film track visible all the time the machine is in operation. The right and left doors can be opened without interfering in the least with the crank handle, making all parts of the mechanism immediately accessible for oiling or for any other purpose.

The crank is of the clutch type, and when not in use disengages itself automatically, hanging straight down and never being in the way when opening or closing doors.

The Motor

The motor drive is entirely closed and is provided with a mechanical speed-changing device which is simple, efficient and "fool proof."

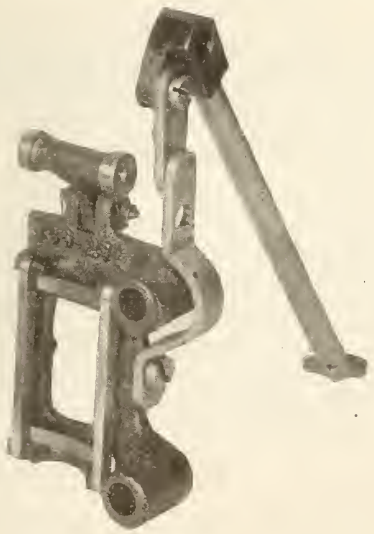

FIG. 5.

The operation of the motor is not affected in the least no matter at what angle the machine is set.

The torque of the motor is greatly in excess of the power required to drive the machine. This generous provision insures certain steady running and freedom from heat in the motor which so often results in many machines where there is not abundance of power provided for.

The speed-changing device (see handwheel next to switch, Fig. 1) is one that has stood the test of time—the best and only test of mechanical design. It never wears out and there is nothing about it to get out of order. As would be expected from this, it is also simple in adjustment.

The finish of the Super-Kinetoscope is in accord with its substantial design. The entire machine is black enameled and highly polished nickel trimmed, giving it a beautiful appearance. The magazines and mechanism head for projection and optical reasons are finished with optical black.

Editor's Special Comment

During the test in the laboratories at Orange, the Edison Super-Kinetoscope produced an absolutely flickerless, steady picture at normal speed. The construction of the machine permits it being installed in almost any existing booth, without special foundations.

Outside of the points referred to above concerning the design and construction of this machine the application of an automatic device which will instantly stop the machine in case the film should break, is herewith for the first time applied by a manufacturer of motion picture projectors. The Edison Super has a roller bearing against the film just below the lower sprocket. When the film is slack, as might be the case with a defective take-up or broken film, the roller of its own tension and weight automatically opens an electric circuit which controls the driving motor which then becomes inoperative, putting the machine at rest. If the film is in proper position the roller with its jointed support and contact arrangement as illustrated in the lower left hand corner of Fig. 4, is supported by the film, causing contact to be made for the motor circuit which then operates and drives the machine in the regular way. The contact, which is enclosed in the base, can also be operated by the small hand button illustrated on the base of Fig. 4. The contacts within the base do not make and break the main motor current. The make and break is what you might call an auxiliary arrangement which carries a very small amount of current and is therefore thoroughly practical and not likely to get out of order as has been the case with many inferior devices put on the market as auxiliary attachments to various makes of machines which have proven unreliable.

The editor considers this new automatic stop, which may be operated by hand as well as by the film in case of failure, of great importance in that it protects the film from injury and also protects it against fire, due to the accumulation of a broken film within the machine which would untimately clog the mechanism and become ignited.

The straight threading of the film and the disengagement of the upper and lower sprocket in making the loop at top and bottom after the machine has been threaded are important features. They contribute to the longer life of the film and obviate guess work as to the length of the loop. As a matter of fact, the loop can be increased or decreased in length almost instantly, as it is unnecessary to disengage the idlers and to actually lift the film off the sprockets.

The machine looks and operates right. The price is $600.

Facts Every Exhibitor Should Know About Seating

Comfort and Unobstructed Light Are Requisites—Chairs Must Be Wider Than in a "Legitimate" Theatre—They Should Not Be Moved Into the House Too Soon After Completion of the Structure—Upholstering Should Be Used Sparingly, For it Is Expensive to Replace

MANY a theatre has had its usefulness spoilt because the seating was not given the fullest study that it needed. Too many problems are left solely to the seating contractors to lay out.

Seating a theatre in its fullest sense must be given consideration from the very beginning of the designing of the building.

In the theatre for the speaking stage, and in the opera house, the arrangement has a great mental effect upon those on the stage. The actor is adversely affected by an empty house, and likewise a long, empty aisle is annoying to him.

Therefore for this purpose of theatre, aisles should be curved or so arranged to present as little as possible of an open or bare aspect.

In motion picture theatres the aforesaid needs no consideration. Comfort and unobstructed line of sight are the requisites.

Under the term comfort we might happily say at this time that the old style eighteen-inch and nineteen-inch wide seat, placed twenty-eight to thirty inches from back to back, is wisely and very necessarily disappearing.

Picture Theatres Need More Seat Space

The motion picture theatre, with its constant moving patrons, has required a greater space between seats. People do not rise and turn back their seats to allow others to pass, and consequently there is a growing need of a liberal allowance between seats.

Thirty-two inches should be the minimum, and where the style of the seat has a sloping or tilting back, or where the back is of heavy upholstering, a still greater allowance should be given consideration.

The width of seats should also be increased to twenty inches as a minimum, placing nineteen-inch seats only sparingly to allow for crowded spots at wall pilasters, etc.

In laying out the seating the space might permit here and there to obtain a specially wide seat. It is well when possible to supply a very few twenty-two-inch, and even a few twenty-four-inch seats, and reserve these for particularly stout people. Where this is done, and where it is well known that such accommodations are to be had, stout people make particular effort to patronize such a playhouse.

In securing seats to the floors, many contractors attempt a small saving to the eventual detriment of the job by not placing enough screws or bolts to the floor. No seat can be placed too securely.

Where the standards are secured to a wood floor, each fore and aft leg should have three steel screws of sufficient length to engage with the finished floor and the under floor.

Where the standards are to be placed on concrete floors, the concrete must be drilled with an electric drill, and there should be two such holes to each fore and aft leg.

An expansion lead shield and bolt should be placed to each. The floor must of necessity be of good quality, and care must be taken not to split it when driving the bolt into the shield. If this work is well done there can be no after-trouble.

Standards are made of steel and of cast iron, and some of a combination of both. Those of cast iron are generally more ornamental. Either are generally equally satisfactory.

Few persons selecting chairs see any importance to be attached to the arm. Yet this little detail should get all possible consideration.

It must be simple and plain, that it may be kept clean. And it should be rubbed down at least once a week. Hardwood, well varnished, is the best material to use. It is sanitary and not cold to the touch.

The method of securing the arm to the standard is a matter to be considered. Very often the two are simply clipped together, and in such cases the arm falls off very easily.

This clip arrangement is good as far as it goes, but should be supplemented by an aditional screw placed at any point to prevent the arm being shoved out of the clip.

The seats themselves should be of a shape that they will give reasonable comfort. They should be of not too great a depth, that the patrons will not project their legs into the space in front any more than necessary.

The seats should have ball bearing hinges of a type that will not give too great a resistance to an easy movement of the same, and yet be so that the seat cannot fall with a thud.

Much trouble is had with poor and non-ball bearing hinges, and only the best shall be secured.

The method of attaching the back to the standard is likewise to be cared for. The wider the spread of the screws, the better the brace will be. Where the attachment is only close to the bottom of the seat, the strain may result in splitting the back just above the arm.

Too thin a material for the back is an error, and too few ply in the veneer is an error that should be avoided.

A few cents for chairs is a small amount to save between the cost of a thin or a heavy back.

An all-steel seat is found to be the best product for the gallery or any place likely to have rough usage.

It is a product that cannot be harmed by the feet on top of the backs, by penknives or other instruments, and not by dampness as will effect wood veneers.

Upholstering Should Be Used Sparingly

Upholstering should be used with great reserve in the picture house. It is ruined too quickly, and is expensive to replace.

Aisle letter plates and seat numbers have little use in a picture house, but when placed they must be so secured that they cannot readily be taken off. Boys often take these off, more for mischievousness than for gain.

Hat wires, hat guards and foot rests add greatly to any seating equipment, and may be inexpensively installed.

Many exhibitors might have had serious trouble with the veneer of seating splitting open. This is found to happen more in the seat than in the back. When the veneer once starts to separate, it will take but litle time for the need of a replacement.

The cause of this at times is from the misuse or abuse by patrons. Nervous people start picking at the wood, others are mischievous, and do such damage will ill intent.

The greatest cause for damage of this kind is from dampness in the building. Seating, therefore, ought never to be placed into a new building until the premises are absolutely dry, and until all mechanics are out of the building.

Any attempt to rush the job for a specified date of opening at the seating stage of the work will surely result disastrously.

The lines of sight may be effected adversely or greatly assisted according to relation of seats in one row as to those in front or in back of the same. Stagger the seats where possible. Do not get one directly in back of the other any more than can be helped.

COX STUDIOS HAVE READY MODELS OF SCENIC EFFECTS FOR MOTION PICTURE THEATRE

THE Eugene Cox scene painting studios in Chicago have recently been active in the production of curtains and scenic eqipment for motion picture theatres. Mr. Cox believes that there is a great need for settings that will adequately beautify and lend dignity to high class houses.

The fact that the few months since the Cox ateliers have turned attention to this new field have brought a surprisingly large number of orders from theatres in and around Chicago, proves Mr. Cox's belief to be well founded.

The Strand, Chicago's beautiful new photoplay house, is one of the theatres for which the Cox studios have furnished settings. The scenic effect in the Strand is similar to the one shown in Fig.

AN ELABORATE STAGE SET FROM THE COX STUDIOS, CHICAGO

1. This setting has been highly praised by the select clientele catered to by this theatre.

Mr. Cox states that he is now able to supply moving picture houses throughout the country with these settings. He has on hand a dozen models showing the scenic effects in miniature. From these models large stage settings can be reproduced with such changes as are demanded by the individual theatre.

ONE OF THE SETS BUILT BY THE COX STUDIOS, CHICAGO

The accompanying photographs show two of the most recent sets devised by the Cox studios. The picture screen in these settings is on a "drop," and is lowered to occupy the space in the center, between the columns. The city and buildings in the background are illuminated.

When the screen is down and the pictures are being shown, the sides are lighted up with a soft blue light which does not interfere with the picture. When the screen is raised the background makes a beautiful setting for vaudeville or a singing act.

TEN CENT POLICY MADE POSSIBLE WITH STRAND IN NEW ORLEANS WITH LARGE SEATING CAPACITY

FULL details of the construction of the new theatre to be erected in the two hundred block on Baronne street, New Orleans, have been given out by Leonard Newman, of the banking firm of M. W. Newman and Sons.

The theatre is to be known as the Strand, and it will follow closely the mode of architecture of the theatre of that name in New York. On a site 158 feet by 110 feet, in Baronne stree, at Gravier, the theatre will be constructed at a cost approximating $115,000.

Seven stores will be built in front, while the entrance to the theatre proper will be about a hundred feet from Common street. The theatre will be constructed in the form of an "L," with exits in Gravier street.

The structure will be of reinforced concrete. It is the present plan of the promoters to follow a ten-cent policy permanently, while only the highest class pictures will be shown. The ten-cent policy will be made possible, Mr. Newman says, by the seating capacity, which will approximate 1,750.

Favrot and Livaudais are the New Orleans architects who are preparing the plans for the new house. The theatre is being constructed by the De Soto Building Company, of which Leo Fellman is president.

Stockholders in the corporation include the cotton firm of H. and B. Beer, and the banking concern of M. W. Newman and Sons. The theatre will open on or about July 1.

Mr. Newman says that the realty proposition was first broached to New Orleans motion picture interests, who flatly turned it down. Then, he says, the owners of the property decided to take the matter in their own hands, and will construct the theatre themselves and form an operating company, without the aid of outside capital.

COMMISSIONER OF BUILDINGS IN INDIANAPOLIS URGES OBSERVANCES OF REGULATIONS AFFECTING PICTURE THEATRES

MOTION picture theatres of Indianapolis, taken as a whole, are as safe from fire hazard as those in any city in the United States, Jacob H. Hilkene, commissioner of buildings, told members of the Indianapolis Motion Picture Exhibitors League, at a conference last week at the headquarters of the league, in the Saks building.

A number of suggestions were offered by Mr. Hilkene as to how the theatre men could improve conditions, but his talk was in no sense a criticism of affairs in Indianapolis. He pointed out the danger from picture booths unless properly taken care of and urged the picture men to observe the relations relating to the crowding of persons into aisles.

Mr. Hilkene said that every theatre owner should personally know that the exit doors of his theatre are in perfect working order and that red exit lights are kept burning.

He suggested that where changes might seem advisable in the present building code relating to the motion picture houses the matter be placed before the advisory commission appointed recently by Mayor Bell to draft amendments to the building ordinance.

In line with this suggestion a committee was appointed by Joseph H. Gavin, president of the association, and a list of recommendations for changes will be submitted to the commission. Another conference with Mr. Hilkene is to be arranged in the near future.

SAENGER AMUSEMENT COMPANY BUYS TWO THEATRES IN MONROE, LA.

IT is authoritatively reported that the Saenger Amusement Company, New Orleans, one of the largest motion picture enterprises operating in Louisiana, has closed two deals in Monroe, La., whereby they gain control of the moving picture and theatrical business in the latter city.

The Saenger Amusement Company has already purchased the Lyceum theatre property from Mrs. M. W. Hoyt, of Chicago; has leased the Sugar theatre for a term of four years, and it is reported that several other deals are hanging fire.

CRANDALL'S THEATRE IN WASHINGTON, D. C., SELLS FOR $125,000

AN important real estate deal has been made in motion picture circles in the sale of Crandall's theatre, Washington, D. C., the purchaser being Daniel Loughran. The price is reported to be $125,000. The property has a frontage on Ninth street, of 75 feet and a depth on E street of 50 feet.

The sale does not affect the present management of the theatre, which is controlled by Harry Crandall, as his lease runs until 1918 at a rental of $7,500 a year.

Extensive improvements are under way in the office portion of the building, making it more commodious. There is some talk of acquiring adjoining property on E street and if this can be accomplished a larger theatre structure will be built with a capacity of not less than 1,000.

Crandall's theatre ranks as one of the most popular for high class features and its host of patrons would regret to see it abandoned as a playhouse.

SAENGER AMUSEMENT COMPANY, SHREVEPORT, LA., INCREASES CAPITAL TO $250,000

THE Saenger Amusement Company, Shreveport, La., owning a chain of theatres in Louisiana, at a recent meeting of its stockholders, voted to increase the capital stock to $250,000, to be divided into 250,000 shares of one dollar each.

Coincident with the new year, the Saenger Amusement Company announced that a number of important managerial shifts had been made, and that The Picture News, an attractive house organ, would be published in the interests of the corporation.

E. V. Rochards, Jr., secretary of the company, has been named editor of the paper, which is following breezy lines; D. L. Cornelius, associate editor; and Howard Swain, business manager. The journal first made its appearance in August, 1913, was continued until May, 1914, and then discontinued.

Jack Manning, manager of the Lyceum theatre in Texarkana, one of the Saenger string, has been returned to Monroe, where he will manage the Saenger theatre in that city.

FACIAL EXPRESSION

(CHEMISTS vs. WORKMEN)

CHEMISTS work with their BRAINS —workmen with their hands.

Therein lies the "DIFFERENCE" between all other screens and the MINUSA GOLD FIBRE SCREEN, which is "BUILT BY BRAINS." The "MINUSA" is built to order to fit YOUR theatre and its peculiar requirements. That is why they are built by chemists—there are no two just alike. They are built with a "focus" so that the reflected image is as perfect as the films, with all its Natural Light and Beauty—nothing is lost.

If you would have a screen that will ADVERTISE YOUR HOUSE as nothing can; if you would have a screen that WON'T TIRE THE EYES, and if you would save FIFTY PER CENT of your light bill, you MUST install a "MINUSA."

There are over 5000 MINUSA Screens in use today. All are making and saving BIG MONEY for their owners. They will PAY FOR THEMSELVES in a few months by the lesser light consumed.

CANADA

W. P. NICHOLS, manager of the National Amusement Company, Vancouver, B. C., has completed negotiation with the owners of the Bijou Theatre property, whereby that house will be completely remodeled for the National company. It is planned to so enlarge the house as to greatly increase its seating capacity, and to install a modern ventilating and heating plant. A four-piece orchestra will be used when the house reopens, and it is the intention to place the admission price at five cents.

J. R. Muir, of the Dominion Theatre Company, who added the Majestic in Victoria, B. C., to his string some months ago, has now given up the house, which is being conducted for the owners by Charles Bailey.

ILLINOIS

Manager W. A. Edwards, of the Wildey motion picture theatre, Edwardsville, has re-opened it after having been closed for several days to make improvements.

W. B. Finn, owner of the Grand motion picture theatre at Virginia, has installed a motor generator in his projection room.

C. A. Smith is said to be interested with a number of men at Bloomington in a proposition to erect a new motion picture theatre.

Walter Fredericks, proprietor of the New Capital theatre at Pekin, is installing new equipment in his projection room.

M. McDonnell, of South Pekin, has temporarily closed his motion picture theatre. He plans a number of improvements before re-opening.

INDIANA

The contract has been let for the remodeling of the Crystal theatre, in North Illinois street, Indianapolis. Work started February 1. The theatre, when finished, will have a seating capacity for 1,000. At present it seats only 250, but has one of the best locations in the city, being directly opposite the terminal station, and within two squares of the heart of the business district.

D. C. Bramble, formerly manager of the Blache Feature Film Company, has bought the Royal theatre, in West Market street, Indianapolis, which recently was damaged by fire. Feature pictures only will be shown. Fred J. Arnold will be house manager.

The Cort theatre, at Kokomo, has been redecorated. The theatre, which was formerly the Ideal theatre, was bought by Mr. Mossman the latter part of November from Mrs. Ager, and the name changed to The Cort.

KANSAS

W E. Hulse & Sons, local architects of Hutchinson, have drawn the plans for C. B. Yost's new motion picture theatre.

LOUISIANA

Mrs. Henry Lazarus has sold the Happyland theatre, 3130 Burgundy street, New Orleans, to Harry Olsen, who has installed a Gold King screen, Martin Rotary converter, and other improvements. Mrs. Lazarus has purchased the Ideal theatre, Cadiz and Dryades streets.

MARYLAND

Myer Fox, president of the Mount Royal Amusement Company, has perfected arrangements for building another large picture theatre in Baltimore. The theatre will be located on North avenue, at Linden, and will be one of the most decorative theatres in Baltimore. It will be about five city blocks west of the Mount Royal theatre, Mr. Fox's first motion picture venture. Contracts have been closed with the W. W. Kimball Company for two organs, one for the new house and one for the Mount Royal.

MISSOURI

The Arsenal theatre at Arsenal and Grand avenues, St. Louis, will be opened early in February by the Arsenal Theatre Company, a syndicate composed of five men living in the neighborhood of the house. The Arsenal will be the third of a group under the control of the company, the other two being the American and the King's. The Arsenal has been closed for more than two years, although it is in a very busy section of South St. Louis. Herman W. Fay is president of the Arsenal Theatre Company, and the other members are John J. and Edward Kleekamp, E. P. Craig and G. L. Loeffler.

The Eureka theatre, Grand and Obear avenues, St. Louis, formerly under the management of Miss Isabel Spear, has been taken over by Miss Fargo. The Eureka is unique in the fact that it has always been managed by a woman, and always very successfully, too.

NORTH CAROLINA

The Bellmo theatre, Washington, after being closed for some time, reopened January 17. Fred P. Hale, of Wilmington, has been secured to manage the house.

OKLAHOMA

Plans are practically completed for the construction of the Deal theatre at Wynnewood. The building is to be 56 feet by 125 feet, with two small stores on each side of the lobby. The stage will measure 18 by 24 feet, and the seating capacity will be about 500. The work will commence about the middle of March, and the theatre will be ready in the late summer. Frank Deal, the owner, will also act in the capacity of manager.

PENNSYLVANIA

The managers of the Locust theatre, Fred Dooner and Marcus Felt, recently completed arrangements by which they took over the Belmont theatre, on Fifty-second street, above Market, and the Fifty-second Street theatre, at Fifty-second and Sansom streets, Philadelphia.

CIRCLE THEATRE, INDIANAPOLIS, WILL BE BUILT BY "HOME LABOR" FOR MONUMENT REALTY AT COST OF $225,000

WHAT the promoters promise will be the finest motion picture theatre in the Middle West has been assured Indianapolis by the award of contracts to build the Circle theatre, in Monument Place, Indianapolis, which will be owned by the Monument Realty Company.

The theatre is to stand on the site of the Horace F. Wood buildings, having a frontage of about one hundred feet in Monument Place.

The wrecking of the old buildings has been started by the Bedford Stone & Construction Company, which has the general building contract. The contract for electric wiring was awarded to the Sanborn Electric Company. Contracts for the heating and ventilation systems will be announced later.

Until these awards are made the total cost cannot be determined, but it is estimated that the approximate cost will be about $200,000 to $225,000.

The Circle theatre is to be exclusively a monument to Indianapolis industry. The Monument Realty Company is made up of Indianapolis business men.

Only home construction companies were permitted to bid for the contracts, and only Indianapolis workmen will be used in the construction of the theatre. The plans were drawn by Rubush & Hunter, Indianapolis architects.

Altogether, the promoters say, the Circle will show the immense building resources that are available in Indianapolis.

A. L. Block, chairman of the building commitee, says that the delay in making contracts had been caused by the prolonged and careful study of the plans. The building, he says, will take first rank in appearance and in provisions for the comfort of the public.

The seats are to be extra wide, there will be a number of unusually broad aisles, and many exits opening into three streets, the Circle, Scioto and Court streets—are expected to assure safety. The building will be fireproof throughout.

Mr. Sanborn says that the finest and most complete electrical switchboard that has been set up in a Middle West theatre will be placed on the stage of the Circle.

The ventilating system provides for washed air, moved in and out of the auditorium by electric fans and many ventilators. The mezzanine will be an innovation in comfort, convenience and appearance, and will be for public convenience as a downtown meeting place.

The theatre will have a seating capacity of more than three thousand persons, which will be by far the largest of any theatre in Indiana.

LOUISVILLE WILL HAVE $30,000 PICTURE THEATRE FOR COLORED PEOPLE

WORK will be begun early in February on a $30,000 motion picture theatre on Walnut street between Eleventh and Twelfth streets, Louisville, which will be exclusively for colored people. The theatre will be known as the Palace. The incorporators of the company, which will erect the house, are A. C. Brock, A. B. McAfee, T. C. Brock, A. E. Mayzeck, and W. L. Sanders.

The new theatre will be fireproof, of brick and steel construction. The front will be of cream enameled brick with pilasters of brown enameled brick and cut stone trimmings. The lobby will be of white marble and tiling. A modern ventilating system is to be installed. On both sides of the auditorium will be a mezzanine floor wih twenty boxes with steel stairways to the auditorium floor. The plans have been drawn by S. P. Ostrander.

CHATTANOOGA STRING OF THEATRES MANAGED BY GRAHAM SOLD AT AUCTION

THE bankrupt "Quality Way," consisting of four motion picture theatres—the Colonial, Theato, Alhambra and Crescent in Chattanooga—has been sold to W. E. Wilkerson, an attorney, for a consideration of $1,910.

Mr. Wilkinson declined to announce the persons he represented, but stated that they represent both Chattanooga and out-of-town interests.

He also announced that the theatres will continue to be operated just as they stand for the time being. He explained that there will later be a re-organization, and said that he believed all four of the houses would be opened.

Howell Graham, who was manager of these theatres, expressed disappointment that they should bring such a low figure. He attributed that fact to the short lease now held on the theatre property. The Theato is Chattanooga's oldest motion picture house.

OPERA HOUSE AT FLEMINGTON, N. J., OPENS WITH PICTURES TO CAPACITY

THE Opera House at Flemington, N. J., was opened January 15 with pictures playing to capacity business. Alterations have been made and picture equipment including two new Power 6A machines installed. The Flemington Opera House will be booked through the F. L. Ferguson Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., New York City, which has taken the lease and is the owner of a circuit of theatres in New York state. The house management includes the following: A. A. Taylor, local manager; D. J. Dolan, treasurer; Harry Summers, electrician; Herman Doll, musical director, and Al Tompkins, stage manager.

MOTORS INCORRECTLY CONNECTED INTO CIRCUIT WITH LINES

By HERBERT W. ANDEM

THERE is nothing complicated about the connections for a shunt-wound motor, and yet it is surprising the number of times these motors are incorrectly connected into circuit with the lines.

In the first place, these motors are nearly always operated from constant potential mains. To prevent the heavy rush of current flowing into the armature wires it is necessary to insert a resistance in series with the armature at starting.

After the armature has attained some speed, a counter electromotive force is set up in these wires and the resistance may then be gradually cut out of circuit until the full speed is had.

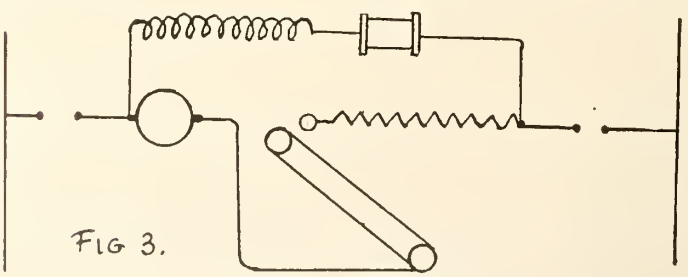
The armature is then directly across the mains. Therefore the starting resistance is connected in series with the armature.

The most common mistakes made in connecting up shunt motors is that shown in figures 1 and 2. The mistake is in confusing the two heavy wires and the result, as can be seen in these diagrams, is to practically connect the shunt field directly across the brushes.

The proper way is shown in diagram 3 where the field is a shunt circuit with the armature, both connected directly across the mains.

Supposing the armature is standing still and that the arm on the rheostat is moved to the first position when the connections are as shown in diagram 1.



NO. 3—CORRECT CONNECTIONS

The motor does not start because the pressure between the field terminals is too small to provide sufficient field excitation. The resistance of the armature is very low and the pressure between its terminals so long as the armature is not revolved, is equal to the current multiplied by the resistance of the armature.

The motor not starting the lever is moved farther and the current increases. The pressure across the brushes also increases, but it is still too small to cause sufficient field excitation.

The large part of the pressure is taken up in forcing the current through the starting box.

As the lever is moved still farther, the chances are the box will begin to smoke and the armature may also be overheated. If the load on the motor is very light, it may start up after the lever has been moved a considerable distance, because a weak field may set up sufficient starting effort.

When it does start, it will run up to speed instantly, because just as soon as the armature begins to turn it generates a counter-electromotive-force with the result that the pressure across the brushes, and also the fields, rises very rapidly.

If, however, the load is heavy the motor will not start. Unless the starting lever is moved back to the "off" position there will be danger of burning out both box and armature.

Whenever a motor behaves as described, the connections should be examined carefully. The chances are that the two heavy wires have been confused and connected so that the field is across the brushes, or there is a break in the field connections somewhere. The results are about the same in that the motor refuses to start readily.

When the wires are laid out systematically in a diagram there would seem little trouble in making an error in wrong connections. But in actual work, and after the wires are drawn into conduits, errors will appear with the best of wiremen.

Especially so if in connecting up a direct-current to direct-current converter where the motor outfit cannot be placed in an operating-room and is installed elsewhere at a distance. Under such circumstances the connections are easily confused.

There is a case on record where a 220-volt, one horsepower motor, had been connected as shown in diagram 1. It was noticed that the motor did not start up until most of this resistance was cut out and that when it did so it was with a howl and a rush.

The motor was continually blowing fuses and blackening the commutator. The motor was run in this condition of affairs almost six months before the error in wrong connections was discovered.

Had it been a motor of larger size it would have not been long before trouble of this kind would have required an investigation of wrong connections.

THEATRES IN PITTSBURGH CHANGE HANDS TOO OFTEN FOR THEIR OWN GOOD

A NUMBER of theatres in the Pittsburgh section have changed hands during the past ten days. This feature of selling houses has been one of the big drawbacks in that part of the country, as a house no sooner gets a good program attracting big crowds than the theatre is sold and the program changed.

The theatres of that section with a few exceptions seem to be on the market at all times and the practice has been to let the theatres go down hill after the sale has been completed.

No theatre in the Pittsburgh district seems to be able to survive more than one sale. There have been several cases where the theatres have changed hands to the betterment of the new owners.

Careless management has done much to drive patrons from the theatre and it is these theatres which have hurt the motion picture business there.

Several suits have been entered in the Allegheny county court as a result of the change in management and the claim has always been that the theatre was not as represented when it was really the fault of the new owners that the theatre lost money by the change from a good to an inferior program.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY STUDENTS READY TO ACT AS "EXTRAS" FOR FILM STUDIOS

THE Columbia University Co-operative Club, which is supervised by The Columbia Monthly, the leading magazine of the university, has a novel means of helping students to earn money.

The club is supplying supers to the leading motion picture studios and to the Metropolitan Opera House. Since this plan was adopted the club has supplied "extras" for the Edison studio in the Bronx, and for Francis X. Bushman, of Metro, in pictures taken on the university campus.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

SMYTHE-JAY COMPANY BEGINS MANUFACTURE OF INSPIRATIONAL MUSIC ROLLS FOR PICTURES

A MANUFACTURING plant—the Smythe-Jay Music Company—for the making of hand played inspiration music rolls for motion pictures, has been established at Los Gatos, Cal. Mrs. Alice Smythe Jay and her husband, R. G. Jay, will superintend the factory. Offices have been established in New York, Chicago and San Francisco.

The concern represents an investment of $10,000 to $12,000. Pictures will be screened in the factory, and music made to fit the pictures prior to release.

This part of the work will be done by Mrs. Jay, who plays by inspiration, working out the theme on the piano. As she plays the music is recorded by a masteroll perforated machine, the invention of E. W. Myers, of Los Gatos.

The time spent in cutting up the positive stock and the extra time required for printing is virtually wasted. When positive prints are made in this way a tremendous amount of splicing is involved, and this becomes an expensive matter. But, unfortunately, the disadvantage does not end there.

Every splice made in a strip of positive film reduces the value of it. That is to say, no splicing can be done without interfering with projection for the reason that it is impossible to join two strips of film so perfectly as to avoid the disturbance of the frame-lines in the positive prints.

Difficult frame-lines will appear in every splice in the positive prints, and no operator, be he ever so competent, can prevent the defect thus introduced from re-appearing in the projected picture.

And when, as in the case we have discussed, the splices are numerous (and they may run to 50 or 60), the value of the picture is so far reduced as that it can never properly grade as a first-run film.

If the film room superintendent, facing the task of making positive prints from negative films from several different cameras, undertakes to solve the problem by splicing the strips together he will gain in time saved in splicing, but lose in the quality of his picture.

The operator, let us say, finds the perforations in all sections of the negative film perfectly suited to his printer mechanism, adjusts the strips of positive and negative film properly, and begins the printing operation with a strip of film on which the picture starts from a line drawn through the perforations.

All goes well until he prints that strip and passes to another on which the picture starts at a point mid-way between the perforations, or at any other intermediate point. Just here the negative film should be readjusted in its relation to the printing aperture. But this adjustment cannot be made while the printer is in operation.

And so the printing of the second section of the positive film is marred by an error in framing—an error which will be multiplied as many times as there are changes from the work of one camera to that of another, provided they are not so adjusted as to start the picture from a uniform point on the film.

Here again the errors in printing are passed on to the projecting room, and will appear in magnified form upon the screen.

It has been the purpose of the four articles, of which this is the last, to give emphasis to the importance of standardizing the processes involved in the bringing of the motion picture to the screen.

No attempt has been made to deal with the subject exhaustively. But it is believed that enough has been said to show the interdependence of the various branches of the motion picture business and the need of co-operation among these branches in the effort to usher in the reign of economy and efficiency.

If the discussion helps ever so little toward the betterment of the conditions described we shall be satisfied.

FRANK M. BYAM,
Sales Manager, The Bell & Howell Co.

Every theatre owner and manager, as well as every musician, has his own idea as to just how pictures should be played and what is necessary in order to make his house popular from a musical standpoint.

Some realize that their knowledge and experience properly treated and set forth will be of value to others who may not enjoy their success, but they do not know how to make their suggestions of benefit to others.

There are also those who want help and these are perhaps the majority. Yet they do not know where or how to get this assistance.

* * * * *

The Music Department of the "News" is for just this purpose.

We will publish the opinions of any of our readers, or we will answer any of their questions; in fact, we are here for the express purpose of promoting better picture music.

Mr. Luz is an expert. It is because of his knowledge that several houses, which in the past have failed, are now making wonderful successes.

Why not take advantage of his knowledge?

This department is open to all.

Better Satisfaction

This notice is addressed to the minority of our subscribers who do not regularly answer advertisements.

The service described is, however, open and free to all who wish our help.

We do not wish to discourage you from writing direct to our advertisers; in fact, you do not do enough of it for your own good, but we do want you to get the proper goods to fit your needs.

There are many, perhaps you, who are too busy to write each company separately; therefore we are offering our co-operation, which means that you will receive full information on any subject which you may designate by merely filling out the coupon, designating by numbers the goods in which you are interested.

Your inquiries thus received will be forwarded to reputable manufacturers, even though the goods on which you wish information are not advertised in the "News."

THE GIRL AND THE GAME

The THRI

Prosperity is rolling in on "The Girl and the Game" exhibitors like an avalanche. A nation of them are tasting the sweets of success. Chapter Eight, now appearing, holds the interest at fever pitch! Helen drives a locomotive and coach of sheriffs against time. A careening coach smashes an obstructing building to thousands of atoms.

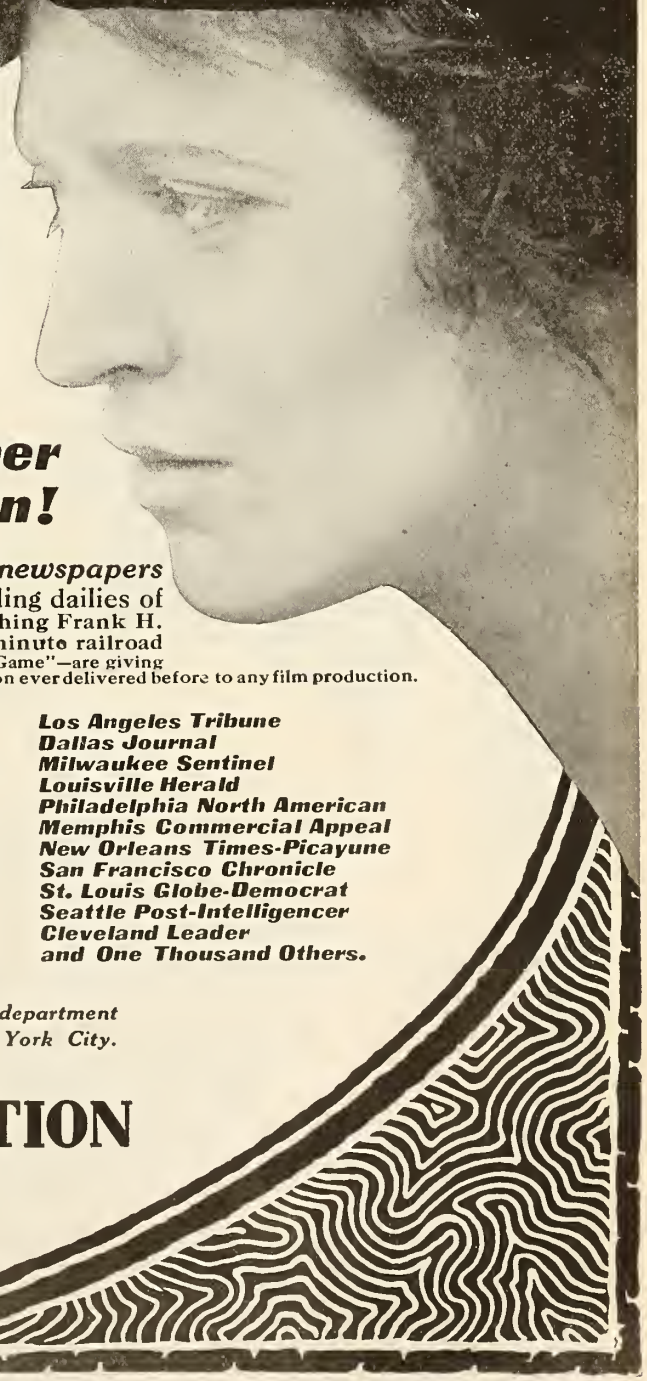
$500,000 Worth of Thrills —GUARANTEED!

The thrills in each chapter are definitely guaranteed by President Hutchinson—specified just as materials are specified in a contract. Every chapter is a hair-raising succession of tremendous climaxes!

Over a half million dollars have been spent on the Fifteen Two-Act Chapters—over $33,000 a Chapter—which means each Chapter costs as much as complete Broadway productions—is a titanic triumph.

CIAL FEATURE

Box Office UMPH!



A rousing reception greets each new chapter of "The Girl and the Game" everywhere. Exhibitors have called the police to handle the big crowds. "This breaks all house records after six years of business"—writes a big exhibitor of Cleveland. Unheard-of scenes of enthusiasm follow each thrilling exploit of Helen Holmes, the fearless film heroine. Death-defying leaps on speeding trains—from cliffs and bridges—sudden, sensational turnings of apparently hopeless situations into triumphs—simply stampede thousands of audiences into great demonstrations of delight.

A Flood of BIG Money for Fifteen Weeks!

Pile profits high every day you show "The Girl and the Game." Book this smashing success and let wild-fire popularity pay you enormously. Usual money-making successes look small beside this one. Stunning Helen Holmes and her great company simply blast open the flood-gates of a river of gold!

Book fifteen weeks of these high-tide profits — one two-act Chapter released each week. Boom your business! WIRE your nearest Mutual Exchange now.

A Newspaper Sensation!

Over one thousand newspapers —numbering the leading dailies of the country—are publishing Frank H. Spearman's two-mile-a-minute railroad film novel, "The Girl and the Game"—are giving more than twice the co-operation ever delivered before to any film production.

THE MEASURE OF MERIT

IN his book, "With Lincoln at Gettysburg," Dr. Junius B. Reinensnyder declares that the immortal speech of the great emancipator was "not appreciated at anything like its true value at the time, evoking no applause and but brief press notices."

> "But age, which is the true standard," concludes the writer, "has assigned the address a place foremost among the utterances of men."

All worth-while things, like Lincoln's speech, are measured by the yard stick of time.

Therein lies, in part, the explanation for the substantial box office value of Big Four features. The public through long experience, has learned to associate their names with merit.

As evidence that this confidence is fully warranted, we have only to refer to the releases of these producers during the past few months through this organization, including as they do, such widely known successes as:

PRODUCTIONS	STARS	PRODUCTIONS	STARS
Battle Cry of Peace	Charles Richman	Blindness of Virtue	Edna Mayo, Bryant Washburn
The Misleading Lady	Henry B. Walthall, Edna Mayo	The House of a Thousand Candles	Grace Darmond, Harry Mestayer
The Juggernaut	Anita Stewart, Earle Williams	The Great Divide	Ethel Clayton, House Peters
Graustark	Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne	The Nation's Peril	Ormi Hawley, Earl Metcalfe
The Island of Regeneration	Edith Storey, Antonio Moreno	No Greater Love	Regina Badet
The Rosary	Kathlyn Williams	Souls in Bondage	Nance O'Neil

That this confidence will be even further warranted in the future is indicated by the schedule of releases to come—some of which are described on the succeeding four pages, and others of which include

PRODUCTIONS	STARS	PRODUCTIONS	STARS
Vultures of Society (Essanay)	Marguerite Clayton, E. H. Calvert	Writing on the Wall (Vitagraph)	Virginia Pearson, Joseph Kilgour
Unto Those Who Sin (Selig)	Fritzi Brunette	Dollars and Cents (Lubin)	Tom Moore, Ethel Clayton

The exhibitor seeking productions of consistent high general average and sustained strength which will increase his prestige and profits, would do well to consider carefully the worth in dollars and cents of such time-tried reputation.

ANN MURDOCK

A brilliant satire of the politics and frivolities of the '70s.

Its fantasies, whimsical periods, its airy lightness, its heart free gaiety, its spontaneous joy, open the springs of contagious laughter.

Clyde Fitch's fantastic comedy, arranged and directed by Fred. E. Wright.

My dear Mr. Irwin:

Wish to inform you that Dr. L. S. Oberholtzer, Secretary, and Mrs. E. C. Niver, Vice-Chairman of the State Board of Censors, informed the writer that they consider "The Misleading Lady," the best picture that has ever been screened before their board and stated while they have seen many thousands of subjects, do not consider "The Misleading Lady," second to any one of them--in fact, in their estimation, is far superior to any subject that has been screened in their inspection room.

Mr. Sydney E. Abel,
Branch Manager V-L-S-E Inc.,
Cleveland, Ohio.

My dear Mr. Abel:

Lubin's "The Great Divide," opened at the Majestic Theatre, Detroit, Sunday, Jan. 9th. Mr. Westbrook informed the writer last night that they came within $10.00 of breaking all the house records for the day.

I was in the theatre last night and the house, seating over 2,160, was packed to the doors at the first show with everybody highly pleased with the picture.

Mr. Westbrook told the writer they consider "The Great Divide" one of the very best pictures and the biggest success of any picture they have ever shown in the house. This for your information.

Very truly yours

CROWDS FORCE POLICE OUT

Chicago, Ill.

V-L-S-E Inc.,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

When we ran the "The Rosary" it was necessary to sell tickets at two windows on account of the enormous crowd. Even so, at seven o'clock in the evening, we had to call up the police station to get two officers to hold the crowds back. Until after ten o'clock they stormed the entrance.

We are certainly highly pleased with this picture. We have played a lot of big stuff in the past, but believe we have never played any picture which gave better satisfaction.

Very truly yours,

MANY SEE FEATURE OVER AGAIN

Mitchell, S. D.

Gentlemen:

"The Island of Regeneration," was a great picture. Traveling men claim they never saw a better picture anywhere. You certainly are to be congratulated upon such efforts as these because they are works of art in every sense of the word.

The complimentary remarks of the patrons both to me and to each other, were very gratifying because they were sincere. There were perhaps twenty people who saw the picture on Thursday, who came again last night. One lady in particular, who made the remark that Edith Storey had no claim to being an artist, stayed through two complete shows and came out full of praise.

Keep up this kind of produotion and the V-L-S-E and in fact the "Big Four Family" will be so far ahead of them all that they will be lonesome.

Very truly yours,

...ur that a spectator readily overlooks the fallacy of these situations.

Rival for Charlie Chaplin.

Some time has elapsed since Charlie Chaplin entertained his many friends with a new play and unless he hastens with another and keeps the theaters supplied periodically with new pictures, he had best look to his laurels, for Harry Watson bids fair to wrest them from him. His "third whirl," called "Hold Fast," ranks with the funniest comedies shown in recent days. "Musty Suffer" is a welcome character in filmdom which imparts clean and wholesome humor.

said the New York Evening Mail, agreeing with The Cincinnati Commercial Tribune that The Mishaps of Musty Suffer are "the purest fun, concentrated sparkling mirth" and Kitty Kelly's happy observation in The Chicago Tribune that "at last an original comedian has developed a case of genuine funniness which doesn't show a trace of Chaplinitis!"

And—if further evidence were necessary—we might point to the extraordinary class of theatres now exhibiting these wonderful comedies—THE STRAND and BILTMORE, New York; the SCOLLAY SQUARE and GORDON OLYMPIA of Boston; KUNSKY'S circuit of Beautiful Detroit houses—THE STRAND at Hartford—THE TABOR GRAND at Denver—ALFRED HAMBURGER'S circuit of Chicago theatres—UNQUESTIONABLY THE FINEST AGGREGATION OF PICTURE THEATRES IN AMERICA, catering to a clientele hard to please, most fastidious, ultra-critical!

THIS IS WHAT THEY SAID ABOUT IT

Reviewed by Oscar Cooper in the Motion Picture News:—"This picturization of Edwin Milton Royle's stage play affords Beatriz Michelena opportunities for strenuous emotional acting which she realizes well, presenting an impersonation which is convincing in itself. In externals—that is, in photography, lighting, and sets—'The Unwritten Law' is thoroughly acceptable."

Jack Edwards in The Billboard:—"Volumes might be written of the clever characterization of the well-known Broadway success, 'The Unwritten Law,' and still it would be inadequate to properly describe her wonderful portrayal of The Woman."

George Blaisdell in the Moving Picture World:—"The subject is well acted and well staged. The picture will interest all the way. There are situations of real strength, and these are handled in a manner to bring out their power. The story is clearly told. 'The Unwritten Law' should be a popular picture."

T. O. Eltonhead in the New York Dramatic Mirror:—"Beatriz Michelena scores another emotional triumph in Edwin Milton Royle's 'The Unwritten Law.' Miss Michelena is called upon to go through a wide divergence of emotions and it is needless to say that she does it in a thoroughly capable manner."

Wid Gunning in Wid's:—"Miss Michelena makes this a 'worth-while' production. The story gives her a chance to do some very good emotional work and she holds the interest nicely in all her scenes."

Harry Ennis in The Clipper:—"As an out-of-ordinary type of picture play 'The Unwritten Law' should draw distinctly on its merits. In addition to the asset it possesses in Beatriz Michelena as a stellar drawing card, there is also an excellent acting cast and a well played and produced dramatic entertainment incorporated in the five reels. Any of the better class of houses can safely advertise this feature to the limit. It is of the type that should draw as well on a return date as the initial engagement."

Thomas C. Kennedy in Motography:—"'The Unwritten Law' has a uniformly effective cast, supported by good directions. The direction is easily one of the picture's strongest points. The fire scenes are handled admirably."

F. R. Buckley in The Motion Picture Mail:—"To sum up, this is a picture in which there are no flaws. It is wonderful. It goes into the exclusive class—in which we have placed only two other five reel features during the last six months— which we can recommend to any exhibitor, anywhere, as an absolutely certain success."

Dickson Watts in the Morning Telegraph:—"Too much cannot be said in praise of Beatriz Michelena's acting. It is at all times natural and in the strong scenes, of an emotional quality rarely seen. No glycerine tears are needed to heighten the effect of her art, for some of the close-ups, which show real tears coursing down her cheeks, are quite harrowing enough."

Have You a Definite Plan and Policy Then—

Team Work Between You and the Paramount Pictures Corporation Means Your Permanent Success

The foundation on which the Paramount Pictures Corporation was built was a definite plan and policy.

Good pictures is our part, so that your time can be spent in the great task of building your theatre so strongly in the hearts of your people that they will come to your theatre and keep coming.

The pictures are good—you cannot get eight pictures of the same quality in the same month for the same money or five times the money, for that matter—they are not to be had.

You are given a voice in determining the subject, star and style of the pictures because statistics are compiled from your reports that tell us what you want and we must get it.

The Paramount Plan is a "long distance" plan, not a new broom that sweeps clean for a month or two; it means your permanent success.

Preparedness

It is a big proposition to make your theatre make money.

You have no time to worry about selecting good pictures.

Save worry, build confidence with consistently good Paramount Pictures.

Isn't that preparedness?

PARAMOUNT PICTOGRAPHS

Paramount has made a careful study of the most successful magazines of this country and has analyzed the fundamentals of their success. The Pictographs will be a magazine on the screen.

Subjects of the most vital importance will be discussed by the leading minds of the country—like preparedness.

Subjects will be picturized in such a manner as to clearly edit the thought conveyed by the contributor.

In corroboration of this we offer:

Preparedness—Edited by Frederick Palmer and Henry Rauterdahl, and contributed to by Theodore Roosevelt, Major General Leonard Wood, John G. Hibbens, President of Princeton University; Robert E. Peary, John Hayes Hammond, Jr., and others of national repute.

Psychology—Edited by Dr. Hugo Munsterberg. Dr. Munsterberg discusses in a practical and humorous way, the great problem of the day, "Are You Fitted For Your Job?"

Better Babies—Edited in conjunction with the Woman's Home Companion. This publication has made a great feature of this series and is picturizing what they have printed and what has caused great interest amongst mothers. Inquiries have been received by the Woman's Home Companion in regard to where these pictures may be seen, and these will be referred to us.

Science and Invention—Edited by Waldemar Kaempffert, Editor of the Popular Science Monthly. One of the early contributions will be putting a gyroscope to work by Elmer G. Sperry, Inventor. Here you see an aeroplane held erect by a gyroscope, while a passenger walks out on one of the wings and the aviator holds up both hands.

Paramount Fashions—Created exclusively for Paramount by Zalud, and presented in an original manner.

It is a one reel picture which is going to make more talk throughout the country than any other ever produced.

They are their own best advertising.

These are broad statements—but see for yourself at the nearest Paramount Exchange.

First Release date, February 7th.

How Congress Sees Censorship

IF the victory over Federal censorship is won—and there is an increasing probability that it will be—we shall owe a great debt of gratitude to the men and women who have so persistently tried to force censorship upon us.

The censorship crowd is and has been unconsciously doing everything it could to win the fight for us.

THEIR choice of advocates was bad, in the beginning. Their manner of approach to the Congressional committee was unwise and ill-considered. Their fabric of facts and arguments has been too often demonstrated to be a fabrication. And now their multiplying of bills and measures—no less than four varieties of censorship are before Congress for consideration—has rather annoyed than impressed the legislators.

Four varieties of censorship on the one hand; one sound and proven method of regulation on the other.

ALREADY censorship is losing its glamor for the few members of Congress who were disposed to entertain it. Chairman Hughes of the Committee on Education, almost alone, is still "upon the burning deck." Even in his utterances one who reads between the lines can discern a lack of enthusiasm, a certain anxiety which can hardly be reassuring to the censorship forces.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS is able to offer its readers the views of two members of the House of Representatives which are each thoroughly representative of powerful groups in that body.

THE first, that of Representative William H. Carter, of Massachusetts, is opposed to any form of censorship, and strongly favors the Towner bill, embodying the amendment to Section 245 of the Federal Penal Code, recommended by this paper.

The other is the position of Representative John H. Small, of North Carolina, and denounces the Hughes bill on the ground that censorship, if a matter for any kind of governmental action, belongs exclusively to the States, and is no business of the Federal government.

"WE already have sufficient laws on our statute books to prohibit obscene and indecent pictures," writes Mr. Carter in a statement addressed to the House Committee on Education, which has under consideration the Hughes motion picture censorship bill. "I believe that the police court judges of my district are fully capable of taking care of this situation.

"I do not object to Representative Towner's bill to add a section to the penal code, providing for a penalty to transport in interstate commerce of obscene or indecent motion picture films. In fact, I am strongly in favor of the bill, and trust that it will pass. In many instances there have been put on boards persons to censor pictures who have had only a limited education so far as the world at large goes, and were not competent to act on motion pictures.

"MOTION picture producers themselves realize that nothing pays as well as wholesome and clean pictures. A great many of the churches in my district are now using motion picture for the lessons which they teach. I do not believe that these church lessons displayed on motion picture films should be subjected to a Government board of censors.

"If a man writes a book, or a minister preaches a sermon, he is not required to submit the proof of his book or his sermon to a board of censors. He converts the same idea into a photoplay and keeps within the bounds of decency, as provided by the common law, then no board of censors should be allowed to interfere with his work.

"We do not, and I pray God that we never will, have to show the proofs of our newspapers to a board of censors to pass on before a paper is published."

TELEGRAMS by the hundreds are coming into Washington from all parts of the country addressed to the members of the Senate and the House of Representatives, urging that the bill be voted down in the Senate and House if it should ever get out of committee. On the other hand, all are coming out in favor of the Towner bill which seeks to place indecent and obscene motion pictures on the same plane with photographs and printed matter of the same nature.

REPRESENTATIVE JOHN H. SMALL, of North Carolina, in an interview last week stated: "The Hughes-Smith bill, providing for Federal censorship of all motion picture films, is only one of the many activities seeking to have the Federal Government take over the local police powers of the States, and supervise the morals of local communities. The State of North Carolina and all other States are amply equipped to supervise and censor all exhibitions of motion pictures, and can certainly furnish a commission or other constituted authority as well equipped to supervise the morals of its citizens as any commission appointed by the President or by Congress.

Vol. XIII February 19, 1916. No. 7

"I FREELY admit," continued Mr. Small, "the popularity of motion pictures and their permanency as an educational factor, and, like the press and the drama, moving pictures may be obscene, or may violate good morals, but they will be regulated and controlled by the force of public sentiment through the several communities and the States, fortified by such legislative machinery as may be necessary. So far as I can observe, this legislation is mainly advocated by a few ultra enthusiasts, who are accustomed to look to the Federal Government for the rectification of every public evil and to hang around Washington instead of devoting their activities to the betterment of their respective communities and States. I will most assuredly vote against the Hughes bill."

CHAIRMAN HUGHES of the House Committee on Education, sponsor for the Hughes bill, is evidently preparing to retreat, and is making his dispositions accordingly.

In an interview with the Washington correspondent of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS he said: "I want you to say for me that I have no desire whatever, and it is not my intention to do anything that would be detrimental to the real interests of the moving picture industry. It is my candid opinion that some just and equitable bill, one that would give justice to all concerned, should be passed. I do not honestly believe that the bill introduced by Mr. Towner would coevr the ground, for there is a great difference between before and after in the effect upon the people in the showing of a film.

"THE committee has not yet had an opportunity to go over the bill section by section. This is its intention, and I hope that as a result of such consideration of each provision that we will be able to arrive at a bill that will meet with the approval of everybody. I feel rather confident that this will be the result of our deliberations. If not, the bill will not be reported to the House."

IN answer to a few direct questions from the NEWS correspondent, Mr. Hughes stated that he introduced the bill originally at the request of Canon Chase and a few others. The more he went into the subject, the more he became convinced that it was something absolutely needed by the various communities, and he resolved to devote his best efforts to its enactment into law. He declares he is perfectly honest in this conviction—that the need for regulation is present—and if he thought that there was anything in it that was not just what it should be, he would wash his hands of the whole proposition immediately.

The Delusion of the Subtitle

A GOOD deal has been said about the art of the photoplay. It has been described as an individual art—one totally different from any other form of expression—one which has its peculiarities, sovereign peculiarities which present their own problems—which brook no solution except in terms of their own sovereignty.

All this is true. The photoplay is not the novel, it is not the drama, it is not poetry, precisely. It may, or it may not be a combination of all three. In any case it is something more. That is to say, it has a style utterly different from that of any form of human expression.

THE novel is descriptive; it incorporates lights and shades of character; it delineates personality; it comprehends, or rather it interprets Nature. But it sets down all these things in an unchangeable and unchanging medium, namely, cold type. Once these things are set down in type they are capable of translation into action only according to the strength of mind of the reader who is engaged upon them.

The photoplay begins where the novel leaves off. It starts with action—it is action. What the novel describes, the photoplay actually does. It is silent as the novel is, but its silence is active, not passive, and it has therefore an infinitely greater power of arousing and fascinating the mind.

Where the novel uses type to convey its meaning, the photoplay employs living human beings. This is the real secret of its overwhelming popularity, its point of artistic strategy.

ALL of which sounds very much like a piece of special pleading in behalf of the photoplay. But it has a very practical application, and the application is this:

The photoplay does not have to describe a lot of things about its characters. It can show the characters in action, that is, it can let them describe themselves.

For this reason, the director or the producer who overburdens his picture with subtitles, or who indulges in a quantity of merely descriptive scenes, is throwing away his birthright. The fewer titles he has, the better his picture will be, or ought to be, other things being equal.

AND the best photoplays today—those with really grip—those which therefore bring the largest financial returns—are the photoplays which adhere to their own inherently fascinating style—the presentation of life, rather than the presentation of a lot of scenes about life.

The genuine photoplay, when it arrives, will be innocent of any subtitles at all.

Special State Convention May Be Called in Ohio

Exhibitors Are Aroused Over Second Rejection of "The Birth of a Nation" and Will Probably Demand an Investigation Into the Motives Behind the Action of the Board to Determine If Its Stand Is Due to Political Reasons —Rejection of the Picture Will Prove Boomerang to Censorship

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 4.

IN a few days there may be called to meet in Cincinnati a special state convention of motion picture men to consider many problems that now confront the trade in Ohio.

The convention has been suggested to Max Stern, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Ohio and the call will probably go out from his office, although it is understood attendance at the convention will not be limited to members of the state organization.

Chief movers in this latest proposed action will be members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, who have taken a determined stand against the Federal Censorship bill.

It is expected that some action which may lead to a definite campaign against state censorship will be taken.

"Nation" Incident Stirs Exhibitors

With the exception of the exhibitors of Cleveland, exhibitors have been more or less passive in regard to agitation against state censorship, but the recent rejection for the second time of the "Birth of a Nation" by the board, has brought about a situation which cannot well be ignored.

It is certain that an investigation into the motive behind these rejections will be made.

Charles Weigel, Cincinnati exhibitor, quoted in a recent issue of Motion Picture News as saying that "the rejection of the 'Birth of a Nation' is the boomerang which will prove the death-blow to State Censorship in Ohio," has asked to have his statement amended. "I do not want to be considered insincere," he said. "I do not want to go on record as condemning the state board until there has been an investigation made by the exhibitors and we feel sure that the picture was eliminated for political reasons.

"The evidence of this is very strong, but there should be an investigation made. If it can be shown that this picture was rejected for political reasons, I am off on state censorship.

"I was just as sincere in my espousal of the state board as the manufacturers were when they backed the National Board of Censors. I felt that state censorship would clothe our business with the dignity and respectability it deserves."

Senators and Congressmen Notified

Letters of acknowledgment of telegrams from the Cincinnati league have been received from Senators Harding and Pomerene and Congressmen Longworth and Allen, stating that these officials have received the local protests, against the Federal bill and will keep them in mind when the matter comes to a vote.

Prosecution of exhibitors under juvenile laws, ordinances and proposed ordinances to regulate conditions in motion picture houses and many other phases of what has been termed "malicious persecution" of motion picture theatre owners in Cincinnati and the state will be considered at this proposed "get-together" convention in Cincinnati.

The latest agitation which exhibitors feel is aimed against them is a campaign inaugurated by the health department of Cincinnati for purity of air in all gathering places.

Health Officer Landis in an editorial in the weekly health bulletin issued by the department, declares that hundreds of verbal, telephonic and written complaints have been received in his office.

He said: "Wise theatrical managers are now placing flags in front of ventilators so that their patrons can see that these openings serve other purposes than purely ornamental ones.

"A hole in the wall covered by a grating that looks like a ventilator frequently serves the purpose of deceiving the public. Be from Missouri. Test it with your handkerchief. If it is emitting fresh air, your handkerchief will indicate that fact.

"If it is abstracting foul air the evidence will be conclusive. If it is doing nothing it is in an unholy alliance with the coal pile, and the manager is a silent third party." Roe S. Eastman.

President Kleine Boosts Three Men Up a Few Pegs

Nelson, Traveling Auditor, Is Made Branch Manager for General Film in Washington, D. C.; Wells, Solicitor, Made Montreal Manager, and Conn Goes to Charlotte, N. C.

THREE promotions in the ranks of General Film Company were announced this week from the executive offices, 200 Fifth avenue, New York.

The promotions were made in accordance with President George Kleine's policy of advancing employes who have done efficient work for the General Film Company.

The men are: A. J. Nelson from travelling auditor, to branch manager of Washington, D. C.; E. G. Wells from solicitor, to branch manager, Montreal, Canada; and William Conn from a minor position in the southern division, to branch manager of the new office at Charlotte, N. C.

Mr. Nelson began with the General Film Company four years ago as a clerk. His abilities and fidelity soon pushed him through the varying grades until he became an auditor charged with countrywide responsibilities.

His performance in this capacity won the confidence and eventually the substantial recognition of the General Film Company's executives, with the result that Mr. Nelson takes full charge of the General Film Company's branch in the nation's capitol.

The promotion of E. G. Wells is one in which every solicitor of every film company will be interested. Mr. Wells when he began his salesman activities did not waste any time in telling anyone how difficult it was to sell goods—he sold them.

The General Film Company has a special system for knowing constantly the progress of its solicitors. Consequently, quick advancement or retrogression in salesmanship is instantly noted.

Mr. Wells was so successful as a solictor that President Kleine felt that it would be an injustice to the salesman to keep him from a larger sphere of action. Hence the promotion followed.

William Conn was very successful throughout the South in the General Film Company's exchanges. He was employed in the booking department of the Atlanta branch and also has done considerable soliciting.

His knowledge of the Southern territory is extensive. Hence, when it was decided to open a new branch at Charlotte, N. C., Conn was chosen as branch manager and has entered upon his new duties.

NESTOR STAGE NOW OCCUPIED BY JOKER COMPANIES

With the departure of Al. E. Christie and his two companies of Nestor comedians for their new studios on the corner of Sunset boulevard and Gower street, Hollywood, Cal., the stage which they had been using at Universal City up to the time of their removal was taken over by the two Universal Joker companies to be their special stage in the future production of comedy subjects.

Allen Curtis is at the head of the older of these organizations, and in his cast are Gale Henry, William Franey, Milburn Moranti and Lillian Peacock. Roy Clements is at the head of the other Joker company, and under his direction are Victor Potel, Jane Bernoudy and Eileen Sedgwick.

This stage, built originally for the use of the Nestor companies, is of the California outdoor transformable type, which can be used either as rainproof, electric light studio for rainy or cloudy weather, or in fine, clear weather may be used as a common type of diffused light stage. The company is already at work.

ROBERTS TO OPEN ESSANAY STUDIOS AT NILES, CALIFORNIA

The Essanay studio at Niles, Cal., where G. M. Anderson made his headquarters for several years, and where many of the best Chaplin comedies were produced, is to be taken over shortly by a company headed by J. J. Roberts and will be reopened early in February.

For some time previous to its being closed this studio was given over to the production of society dramas.

Hearing in Knickerbocker Theatre Suit Postponed

Arguments in Attempted Injunction Proceedings of Goelet Against Lessees and Sub-Lessee of New York House Showing Triangle Pictures Set for the Tenth

JUSTICE DONNELLY, sitting in the Special Term, New York City, on Friday, February 4, adjourned until Thursday, February 10, the hearing in the attempted injunction proceedings of Robert Walton Goelet against Hayman, Frohman, Klaw and Erlanger, as lessees, and their sublessee, H. E. Aitken, of the Triangle Film Corporation, to stop the latter from continuing the Rothapfel brand of entertainment at the Knickerbocker theatre, including the continuous presentation of Triangle plays combined with music, at prices of twenty-five cents and fifty cents for most of the seats.

The attorneys for the Triangle Film Corporation had less than three days to prepare their case. It was, therefore, a great surprise to the complainants when the Triangle attorneys presented no less than nine affidavits from prominent showmen and expert critics, declaring that the Rothapfel entertainment was a strictly first-class show, which would not tend to diminish the rental value of Mr. Goelet's property.

The defendants were ready to go on, but the complainants wished to have more time to prepare further evidence on their own side. This was agreed to on a stipulation that the complainants should furnish the defendants, by Tuesday, February 8, copies of all papers they intended to offer in evidence.

The argument between the parties is as to whether the Knickerbocker theatre, under its present regime, is operated as a first-class playhouse under the terms of the lease, which forbids any second-class performance, or variety, or minstrel show.

Harry Sommers, the former manager, in an affidavit alleges that the facts of continuous performance and of the twenty-five cents and 50 cents charge for most seats bring the Knickerbocker below the level of the first-class.

On the other hand are many showmen who say that prices and continuity of entertainment make no difference in the operation of a first-class play house.

They point to the Astor and Park theatres, and to the Knickerbocker itself as instances of houses which have varied between motion pictures and the spoken drama, and between high and popular prices without interfering with the first-class character of the play house in any respect.

CANADIAN CONTEST IN DAILY FOR POPULAR ACTRESS

The Edmonton Journal is endeavoring to discover the most popular moving picture actress in that district, and to this end is inviting its readers to vote on the question, giving their reasons for their choice.

Two Groups in Industry Give Views on Censorship; Los Angeles Producers Back Board of Trade

Lasky Counsel, Declaring Towner Bill Is Unnecessary, Explains Attitude of His Clients, and J. W. Binder Issues a Statement in Reply—Paramount Asserts That Metro Underwent "Change of Heart" on Question After Conference—Producers and Board of Trade Co-operate in War on Pernicious Measures

THE developments in the situation centering around the Regulation and Censorship Bills before the Judiciary and Education Committees of the House of Representatives at Washington, revealing a division of opinion between two groups of motion picture manufacturers, have elicited signed statements from both sides—from Arthur S. Friend, general counsel of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company on behalf of the so-called Paramount group on the one hand; and from J. W. Binder, executive secretary of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, on the other.

Producers Fight Censorship

Vigorous opposition to censorship is also at hand in the determination of the Motion Picture Producers' Association, of Los Angeles, in co-operation with the Board of Trade, to launch an active campaign against censorship.

Mr. Friend, it will be remembered, appeared on the final day of the hearings at Washington as the official representative of the Paramount, World, Equitable and Metro Corporations, and advocated what he described as a modified form of censorship.

Mr. Friend's latest statement has been answered by competent officials of the organizations referred to in that statement, and MOTION PICTURE NEWS is enabled to present both sides of the controversy. Mr. Friend's statement follows:

Friend Explains Paramount Stand

"Speaking on behalf of all those associated with me and for whom I spoke in regard to the proposed Federal legislation looking toward regulation of the motion picture industry, I want to say that we are extremely sorry that anybody connected with the industry should have attempted to make of our refusal to accept the views set forth by the Motion Picture Board of Trade, a factional fight. As a matter of fact, there is no factional fight. We have the highest regard for many of the people who are in and support the views expressed by the Board of Trade and feel that they are entitled, as we are, to independent thought on any matter affecting the industry at large.

"In my statement to the Committee on Education, at the last public hearing on the Smith-Hughes bill, I said very distinctly that I opposed the amendment to the Penal Code suggested by the Board of Trade, because it was unnecessary and because unnecessary legislation was bad legislation. When, however, the suggestion to amend the Penal Code was adopted by Congressman Towner and a bill introduced in Congress by him, we immediately advised Mr. Binder, the executive secretary, and Mr. Seabury, general counsel of the Board of Trade, that we should not oppose the Towner bill. This was at a conference held at the Paramount office on the 22nd day of January, four days before Mr. Seabury's brief on behalf of the Motion Picture Board of trade is dated.

Calls Towner Bill Unnecessary

"Mr. Seabury knows, as well as we do, that the Towner bill is unnecessary, except perhaps to clarify the law. Under Section 245 of the Penal Code, as it now exists, there is little doubt but that the same result can be obtained in prosecuting the persons who send 'obscene, lewd or lascivious or any filthy' motion picture through interstate commerce, as could be obtained after the enactment of the Towner bill. The point we make and which the Motion Picture Board of Trade very well understands, is that the Towner bill is not a substitute for the Smith-Hughes Bill and does not undertake to reach any of the ills with which the industry is suffering. Our attitude is not a 'holier than thou' attitude, but rather the sane attitude of men who are convinced that the industry will survive only if it is conducted along business lines, based upon clean, artistic product.

"Mr. Seabury and his associates must know that the kind of picture which is injuring the industry at present will never be stopped under the Towner bill. It was suggested because it looked like a substitute, although in reality it was not and never will be."

The above statement was read to J. W. Binder, executive secretary of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, and he was asked to make comments.

He said: "The facts of the above statement so far as they refer to dates and places of conference between Paramount-Lasky group, and representatives of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, representatives of trade journals and others are correct.

"The conferences were held, the subjects mentioned were discussed. There is this difference, however:

"Mr. Friend was not present throughout the entire conferences, hence his omission of them may be excused. The Motion Picture Board of Trade has never asserted that there was a factional fight within the industry. There is a difference of opinion, but no fight. It requires two men of the same size and weight to make a fight; in this case the parties of the controversy are too poorly matched for the controversy to be technically called a contest, much less a fight.

"The Motion Picture Board of Trade instead of encouraging fights believes in obliterating them; that is its central principle.

"Mr. Friend suggested that the amendment to the Penal Code, which we proposed as a substitute for the numerous flock of prepublicity censorship bills, was unnecessary and that it would not be effective in ridding the industry of the questionable pictures which are, apparently, sources of great worriment to the proponents of Federal censorship.

"My reply is that the amendment to the Penal Code will do just that thing. If Mr. Friend had sat through the conferences in the Paramount offices he would have known that the entire discussion turned on this point.

Difference Between Two Groups

"Mr. Hodkinson admitted that the basic motive of the Paramount and their associates in the fight was to drive out questionable pictures which were, he said, rapidly absorbing the market. I agreed with this and stated that the Board of Trade, no less than the Paramount, was anxious to have these pictures eliminated in defence of the good name and perpetuity of the motion picture industry.

"The difference between the groups is simply this: Mr. Hodkinson and his associates invoked the Federal government. They would preferably say to the Government of the United States: 'Our business is unclean, come and help us clean it; we are unable to do it ourselves.'

"The Motion Picture Board of Trade agreed that there were unclean spots in the industry, but held that it is the official business of the motion picture industry itself to clean up those spots, and that it is not necessary to create any new laws to do this. It simply requires an honest and fearless enforcement of those laws now on the statute books. The amendment, as proposed, includes specifically, motion pictures. We have no idea that the industry wishes to be exempt from the laws which now govern obscene books, obscene pictures, obscene newspaper articles, or immoral stories, wherever printed. This is the fundamental difference between us.

"It is not a 'factional fight.' It is a difference between men who believe in cleaning up their own business, and of men who confess their inability to do so and would ask for governmental authority to help them do it.

"I believe the motion picture industry big enough, strong enough, and decent enough to clean up its own house. We don't believe that this is or ever can be a governmental function."

Says Metro Changed Front

Mr. Friend's statement, on behalf of the Paramount group, also contains a reference to the attitude of the Metro people. In respect to this, Mr. Friend says:

"Insofar as the change of heart of the Metro Pictures Corporation is concerned, we are perfectly willing to concede the right on the part of the company to change its views as often as it pleases. However, at the time of the hearing, I had with me a letter actually

"Ramona" Marks New Stage in Picture Making

Fourteen-Reel Picturization of the Helen Hunt Jackson Novel of Historic Mission Days, Made by the Clune Film Company, Sets New Records for Industry in Its Settings and Actual Life-like Scenes—Presented with a Special Music Score, Every Bar of Which Is Fitted to the Picture

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.

A COMBINATION of filmcraft as practiced by the greatest producers of the industry, atmospheric creating stage settings of a class never attempted by legitimate stage producers, and music more of a synchronous than incidental nature by an orchestra of fifty-one, in all designated by the makers as a cinema theatrical production, was given its premier at the Clune Auditorium, Los Angeles, this afternoon.

The title of this is "Ramona," being an adaptation of the Helen Hunt Jackson historic novel of Indian mission days in Southern California, made at the studio of the Clune Film Company, under the supervision of Lloyd Brown, direction of Donald Crisp.

In several respects this gigantic production creates new records for the film industry. Not only is it the largest subject shown the public, consisting as it does of fourteen reels divided into a prologue and two acts, but the making of it required more time than any other as yet released.

More than eighteen months ago the rights for the filming of this subject were secured from the book publisher and immediately work was commenced. Following the completion of the scenario three months were spent by the producers in going over all locations described in the story to select those most desirable.

Forty-niners were found who spent time in Santa Barbara, the locale of the four-reel prologue, the time of which is 1850, and they served to give information concerning conditions of this time. In a like manner, younger men were employed when the two later periods of the story were filmed.

The atmosphere creating stage settings which served to introduce conditions and actual life like scenes of the period of the film to follow are greater than any previous attempt along this line. Production Manager Brown sought to give the public the genuine and not diminutive reproductions, and so had the buildings reproduced on the stage in actual size of the original. This is the first time this means has been adopted for presentation of a motion picture play, and opens a broad avenue of opportunities to the exhibitors.

Years of legitimate stage producing experience incorporating the presentation of such spectacles as "Beauty and the Beast," gave to Producing Manager Brown, a better conception of the possibilities of music for a production than is enjoyed by the average maker of motion pictures,and in "Ramona" he has sought to give to the screen play an incidental musical score, every bar of which is fitted to the picture and timed to such precision that it is as important as the score of an opera.

This includes several vocal numbers, and is given by an organization of fifty-one musicians. As each scene was completed for the photoplay, appropriate music was prepared for it. Parts from almost three hundred melodies compose this photoplay score.

The production opens with a stage setting representing the Santa Barbara, California, mission. This is a replica in actual size; eighty-seven feet high and more than that in width. It is dawn, and with the rising of the sun a priest and twenty lay-priests enter.

From inside comes the singing as of the ceremonies of Franciscan Fathers. Light effects represent all hours of the day and when darkness enfolds the mission the projection of the prologue begins.

This opens on the wedding and barbecue festival day when Ramona Gonzage meets Angus Phail and promises him to be his bride. Believing him lost at sea, months later she weds another. On that day Phail returns. The seaman taken an Indian woman as his wife, and to them is born a girl who is named Ramona Phail.

This child becomes the foster daughter of Ramona, and the principal of the two remaining periods of the story.

The first act is laid at the beautiful mission home where Ramona Phail lived with her foster aunt following the death of her foster mother, Ramona, and is preceded by an illusion showing the historical buildings constituting the home of Ramona enclosing a patio characteristic of the time. A priest begins the singing of the morning song at dawn, and all other members of the household later, and one by one, take part.

During the period of the first act, Ramona becomes infatuated with Allesandro, a wealthy Temecula Indian. The foster aunt who has always disliked Ramona, strongly opposes the match and separates the young people by sending Allesandro from the rancho.

In this early mission day conditions are reproduced as never before. The daily worship at the home, and the habits of people in mission day form most interesting parts, and there are scores of scenes depicting sheep shearing days at the big rancho.

The Temecula Indian village with camp fires and characteristic conditions constitute the stage setting for the third illusion which precedes act two. In the foreground are the adobe homes of the Indians and the background is of a scenic reproduction of two ranges of mountains.

Allesandro in act two arrives at the village shortly before the greedy whites, backed by rulings of the government, attacked the Indians and drove them from their homes which were later burned.

His possessions despoiled, Allesandro returns to tell Ramona of his loss. This does not alter her affections, they are wedded without the knowledge of her foster aunt, and go to the Indian village of San Pasquale. Months later the Indians of this village are driven away by the whites.

Allesandro becomes ill from exposure and suffers with a mental malady. While semi-unconscious he mistakes the horse of a white man for his own and rides it away. The owner follows and finding Ramona's husband at their mountain home, shoots him dead without an explanation and departs without a statement to Ramona or their little daughter, who likewise has been named Ramona.

THE PRIEST'S BLESSING

Mother and daughter were found by the former's foster brother and taken back to the rancho from which she had eloped. The brotherly affection developed into a deeper love, and Ramona became the happy wife of the foster brother, Felipe.

Of the several thousand who took part in this production it may be said that every one seems to have been picked as a type.

In the prologue Mabel Van Buren appears as Ramona, the sweetheart of Agnus Phail, who becomes the wife of Lieut. Ortegna, giving a praiseworthy performance. Little Anna Lehr was cast for Ramona Phail when a child and was excellent.

The most important part in the production is that portrayed by Adda Gleason, who during the first and second acts portrays the role of Ramona Phail after she had grown to womanhood. This is the lovable character created by the author of the story that is referred to by the readers of the four million copies of this book

The performance of Miss Gleason reflects credit upon herself and the director, and her work will receive the favorite comment of all lovers of this story. Monroe Salisbury cast in a part almost as important, that of Allesandro, is an excellent type for the role of the Indian.

Los Angeles May Recede From Censorship Stand

Public Welfare Committee of City Council Recommends Abolition of Censor Board and That All Films Shown Should Be Subjected Only to the Findings of the National Board of Censorship—David Horsley and the Reverend Thomas Dixon Make Strong Pleas for Fair Treatment of Industry

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Feb. 3.

THE abolition of the Board of Censorship of Los Angeles is practically assured.

The public welfare committee of the Los Angeles Council has recommended the abolition of the board, and that all films shown in Los Angeles be subject only to the findings of the National Board of Censorship.

In place of the Los Angeles board, a motion picture commissioner will be created, if a proposed ordinance now before the city council is passed.

The ordinance creating the office of commissioner is in compliance with the request of the motion picture producers, exchangemen and exhibitors.

It will be the commissioner's duty to see that only films approved by the National Board of Censorship are shown in Los Angeles, and that all eliminations recommended by the board are made.

At the first reading of the ordinance two of the nine councilmen voted against it. They favored killing the present ordinance providing a censor board, without providing a substitute.

The recommendation by the public welfare committee came after the committee had conducted a public hearing on the matter.

Big Film Representation

At this every studio in the Los Angeles district, all exchanges and many theatres were represented by the managers.

The principal plea against censorship was made by the Reverend Thomas Dixon, representing the recently-formed Motion Picture Producers' Association.

Besides Mr. Dixon, there were talks by David Horsley, representatives of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, Ad Club, and other leading business organizations.

But two were present who voiced the sentiment for local censorship of films, and the two were women who would not make specific charges against any films they had seen in Los Angeles.

Mr. Horsley, who has been in the fight from the beginning, appeared and made a strong plea for the repeal of the censorship ordinance. He said in part:

"We came here to discuss the question of censorship—there is no such question—the question is that of human rights.

"You have been led to believe that you had a duty to perform when you passed this obnoxious censorship ordinance. You were told by well-meaning but misinformed busybodies that there is a menace in our midst.

"The busybody is the dupe of the agitator and self-seeking professional reformer, always intent on his neighbor's business.

"The reformer is the drone in every hive; he makes no honey, but sits around criticising those who do and under cover of the confusion grafts a living.

City's Attitude Wrong

"Los Angeles today produces nearly eighty per cent. of the world's motion pictures and surely should be the last place to give aid and comfort to those who would tear down her chief industry.

"There was spent in your midst in 1909 a few hundred dollars; in 1910, one hundred thousand dollars; in 1911 a little less than a million dollars; in 1912 three million dollars; in 1914 five million dollars; in 1915 fifteen million dollars, and in 1916 over thirty millions of dollars will be spent producing motion pictures in Los Angeles.

"You cannot afford to throw this income away, and every hindrance that is placed in our way, everything that makes it more costly to do business, everything that hampers our business will have its effect, not only on us, but on Los Angeles itself.

"Three companies, the Equitable, Gaumont and the World Film Company are making pictures in Florida. All of these companies intended coming to Los Angeles but were influenced by the hostile attitude of our newspapers and city departments and thought this would more than offset the natural advantages that Los Angeles could offer, and this fifty thousand dollars a week is being spent in Florida instead of here.

"One of our producers is now in New York and is endeavoring to get these companies to come to Los Angeles, assuring them of the changed attitude of our press and city government; assuring them that the censorship laws do not reflect our real public opinion and will be repealed.

"He said that the ctiy departments will give them co-operation instead of opposition; that the building laws will not be construed so as to drive them outside the city limits; that they will be permitted to build practical studios with glass roofs that will permit the light to come through; that they will not be compelled to put on wired glass, which is prohibitive in cost and defeats the object of a glass roof, as it does not pass sufficient light for our purpose.

Citizens Generous

"He also said that the citizens offer the privilege of photographing their beautiful homes and gardens without charge; that the business houses will charge us no more than they charge others who are not in the motion picture business; and that Los Angeles has outgrown its old ideas and is dropping its paternal form of government.

"He believes that it will not be stampeded by agitators, demagogues and reformers into passing a new law every five minutes to cover the most trivial things; that Los Angeles is going to exercise birth control of her long-haired men and short-haired women, flood control of legislation, preparedness for an ever-increasing motion picture industry and has come to a realization that, 'That country is governed best which is governed least.'"

The Reverend Thomas Dixon prefaced his remarks with the statement that he had no complaints to make personally against the local board of censors, and that the organization he represented did not wish him to criticize the local situation, but that he and his associates had a bigger purpose in wishing the censor board to be abolished in Los Angeles, as this is the seat of production and what action is taken here will serve as precedent throughout the nation.

In reviewing the Los Angeles producing colony's activities, he brought out the fact that four hundred thousand dollars in payrolls is spent here every week throughout the year, and that the Producers' Association proposed to increase this to a million dollars per week, which will mean that Los Angeles will have a million population bringing a greater portion of the four hundred millions spent annually for theatre admission tickets to this city.

He pointed out that in New York at the present time five hundred thousand dollars is spent weekly for less and an inferior quality of production owing to the necessity of using artificial light more than half of the days of each year.

Pictures Take Away Only Sunlight

Furthermore he emphatically stated that the pictures take nothing from Los Angeles other than the advantage of the sunlight. Mr. Dixon called attention to the fact that motion pictures constitute more now than mere amusement; that it is the greatest medium for moulding the human mind as yet discovered.

"Why do you not censor the press?" Mr. Dixon asked the council committee, and answered it himself by the statement that it was against the constitution of the nation and state.

"If it is unconstitutional to censor one kind of a printing press, it necessarily follows that all censorship is unconstitutional. The nation and state have laws for the regulation of printing, and every day there are obscene books issued in New York and other cities.

"As soon as their publishers are discovered the scamps are sent to prison, and the same thing can be done with the improper motion picture, should there be any. Censorship has been established by the motion picture manufacturers for the improvement of the industry and this censorship has proven itself adequate."

The two women speaking for censorship frequently referred to films as being obscene, which caused David Horsley to challenge the women to mention pictures they referred to as belonging to this class.

Upon their refusal to do so they were asked to give the committee a definite explanation of what they understood the word obscene to mean. To this there was no response.

RAINS MAKE COAST DELIVERIES DIFFICULT

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Feb. 5.

Rainstorms throughout southern California, which tied up practically all railroad traffic because of washouts of bridges and tracks, cause great inconvenience to the film exchanges, and local managers used every means to take care of their patrons.

In several instances films were delivered more than one hundred miles distant from the exchange by automobile.

For more than ten days San Diego was cut off from Los Angeles with the exception of the communication afforded by steamship lines, but boat owners would not accept shipments of films.

In several instances exchangemen were successful in smuggling films aboard when packed in the usual containers inside of suitcases.

The California Universal Exchange was the first to deliver films in San Diego after the washouts occurred. This was accomplished by automobile trucks.

The local exchange managers, Dan Markowitz and Dave Burshon, induced a local truck dealer to make a test run which required fording a number of streams and driving through valleys that had been converted into lakes.

The distance to San Diego under normal conditions is one hundred and thirty miles, but owing to detours the mileage during the flood conditions was more than two hundred.

MARSHALL FARNUM COMPLETES "DRIFTWOOD"

The third release of the Ocean Film Corporation, "Driftwood: Or the Wrong Way," adapted from the stage play of the same name, by Owen Davis, has been completed by Director Marshall Farnum.

Vera Michelena, heretofore a light opera and musical comedy star, has the featured role. Director Farnum is authority for the statement that Miss Michelena's work in this picture reveals distinct motion picture ability.

"Driftwood" follows the release of the second Ocean production, "The Fortunate Youth," released February 7. "Driftwood" will be released February 15, according to Ocean's regular plan.

Finishing Touches Given Offices of V-L-S-E

Although Company Moved in Several Weeks Ago Workmen Were Constantly Employed in the New Quarters Until a Few Days Ago

ALTHOUGH the V-L-S-E moved its home office and the New York branch office from the seventh to the sixth floor of the Mecca Building several weeks ago, workmen have been constantly employed in the new quarters, putting the final touches on the appointments, and it was only last week that the undertaking was declared completed in the fullest sense of the word.

The pictures shown on this page illustrate only in part the efficiency with which the new office of the Big Four have been laid out.

For instance, the poster display room and the projection room in which exhibitors and the press are entertained by the showing of new Big Four releases, offer unusual facilities for consideration of those factors which go to make for the successful presentation of features.

The projection room has a throw of fifty feet. It is tastefully and comfortably furnished, and a great deal of care has been exercised to insure perfect projection.

The poster room is as large as the entire office space of many representative organizations. All the offices are furnished in mahogany, and the woodwork of the entire floor is mahogany finished.

The arrangement of the New York branch lends itself ideally to the convenience of visiting exhibitors. All the departments are adjacent so that after making his selection, an exhibitor can go right down the line to the cashier and stock department, and complete his whole transaction with a minimum amount of expended effort.

It is said that the Big Four did not get into its new quarters any too soon. The business of the organization, it is understood, has gone forward with remarkable strides during the past month, each week showing a very material increase over previous high water marks, with the result that notwithstanding the spaciousness of the organization's new quarters, all of it is found to be very much needed by the members.

Boston's Back Bay Turns Out for Pickford Subject

William Courtenay and a Party of Friends See "The Island of Surprise," in Which He Starred for Vitagraph—Lenore Ulrich Also in the Hub

Boston, Feb. 5.

THIS was Mary Pickford week at the Exeter street theatre. Perhaps never in the history of this unique theatre in Boston's Back Bay district was there such a week from the box office standpoint.

She was shown for the first three days in the week in the recent Famous Players release, "The Foundling." The last three days she appeared as "Tess of the Storm Country."

Miss Pickford's following in Boston has not in the least been lessened recently. Instead, it has increased.

Lenore Ulrich, familiar to picture patrons as a Paramount star, took occasion to state the other day that she believed firm acting was of great help to the actress of the legitimate stage. Miss Ulrich is in Boston appearing in "Oklahoma," a new Belasco production.

William Courtenay and some of his friends attended the Boston theatre the other day and saw himself act in his first screen play, the Vitagraph picture, "The Island of Surprise."

Mr. Courtenay had as his guests at the Boston several members of the "Under Fire" company in which he appears. "The Island of Regeneration" made a big hit throughout the week.

STELLA WILTERMOOD IS CAST FOR FORD PICTURE

One of the latest recruits to join the Universal forces at their Pacific coast studios is Stella Wiltermood, daughter of Frank M. Wiltermood, scenario writer and former newspaper man.

Miss Wiltermood's first role is in the cast of Francis Ford's picture, "The Madcap Queen of Corona," in which Grace Cunard is featured.

MILDRED GREGORY IS THE LEAD IN GAUMONT'S "ACCORDING TO LAW"

Mildred Gregory, at one time leading woman for Romaine Fielding with the Lubin Company, has now taken her place as a Gaumont leading woman with the casting of "According to the Law."

Miss Gregory's latest work on the screen is in "Bond Women." Although not the leading woman in this production, she has a part which fully demonstrates her skill.

The Gaumont Mutual Masterpicture, "According to the Law," takes Miss Gregory as the heroine through the divorce court when a word or a look from her husband would have saved years of suffering.

Many of the scenes of this photodrama are being made in the Everglades of Florida. "According to the Law" will be Gaumont's first March release.

"HAM TAKES A CHANCE" AND "HAM THE DIVER" READY IN FEBRUARY

Two "Ham" comedies have been completed since the return of Lloyd V. Hamilton, the popular Kalem comedian, to active studio work and are announced for release in February. They are "Ham Takes a Chance" (February 15), and "Ham the Diver" (February 22) both single reel subjects.

Bud Duncan and Ethel Teare are once more the players featured with "Ham." Gus Leonard, the former Orpheum circuit star, is an addition to the company who has gained considerable popularity since "Ham's" lay-off because of injury.

With Jack MacDermott, the juvenile, he will continue to appear in "Ham" comedies, making the organization one deserving of "all-star" claims.

ATTEMPT TO RESTRAIN EXHIBITION OF "WARRING MILLIONS" FAILS

An attempt to restrain the American Correspondent Film Company, Inc., from exhibiting the picture, "The Warring Millions," failed when Judge Neuberger, in the Supreme Court of New York, denied an injunction sought by several persons who had acted as agents in presenting "The Battles of a Nation," at the Park theatre, New York.

The plaintiffs sought to prove that they had obtained a monopoly on the war picture output of the American Correspondent Film Company, by reason of their presentation, as agents, of "The Battles of a Nation." Judge Neuberger held that the plaintiffs had no right to petition for an injunction.

VIRGINIA HAMMOND MAKES FIRST STELLAR APPEARANCE IN AN ESSANAY

Virginia Hammond, former leading woman, makes her first appearance as a screen star in "The Discard," Essanay's latest five-reel feature.

Miss Hammond was born in Stanton, Va., and was educated in a Chicago school for girls. Her father was a Confederate major in the Civil War.

VIRGINIA HAMMOND

Her stage career has included four years with Frohman as leading woman for E. H. Sothern, and three years with the Shuberts. She was Ophelia to Sothern's Hamlet, and also appeared with him in "If I Were King," "Don Quixote," "Richelieu" and other plays. She was for a time leading woman for William Courtenay.

A SCENE FROM GEORGE KLEINE'S "THE FINAL CURTAIN," FEATURING ARTHUR HOOPS AND ALMA HANLON

AUTHOR OF "THE NE'ER-DO-WELL" AT TRADE SHOWING ON TENTH

The premier exhibition of Rex Beach's "Ne'er-Do-Well," the ten-act motion picture production by Selig, will be given at the Candler Theatre, New York City, for the benefit of the trade on Thursday afternoon, February 10, at 3 o'clock sharp.

Rex Beach, author of "The Ne'er-Do-Well," will be present at the review.

REX BEACH

In an interview, he said it will be the first time that he has witnessed a pre-view on any of his books that have been filmed.

Mr. Beach, when asked if he would deliver a few remarks after the picture had been shown, declined, saying that he did not believe the public were interested in seeing him, but came to see a good film production, and cared nothing about the author.

ETHEL GRANDIN TO RETURN TO EASTERN UNIVERSAL

Ethel Grandin, her husband, Ray Smallwood, who also acts in the capacity of director, and a number of other members of the Grandin company, are shortly to return to the Universal eastern producing company.

Miss Grandin was one of the first stars with the Imp and Victor companies and her reappearance on the Universal program will meet with the approval of all exhibitors.

Until recently she was appearing on the General program, through the medium of George Kleine's company. She and her husband also made several subjects for the old United program.

For Universal Miss Grandin will appear in one, two and three-reel subjects under the direction of her husband. The pictures will be released under either the Imp or Victor trademark.

JAMES COOLEY FOR IVAN ROLE

The Ivan Film Productions, Inc., announces that James Cooley has been engaged for the role in "The Immortal Flame," formerly assigned to Irving Cummings.

HOWARD HALL, GAUMONT, APPEARS IN FIFTH PICTURE

When the Gaumont company releases "According to the Law" early in March, Howard Hall will make his first screen appearance as a Gaumont-Mutual star.

He has been a well-known Broadway actor for a number of years, and is of interest to exhibitors also because of his starring activities of more than ten years, principally in his own big melodrama, "The Man Who Dared."

Only recently did Mr. Hall turn to the screen; in fact, this is only his fifth picture.

"According to the Law" is a five-reel feature by Paul M. Bryan and Joseph H. Trant which will be released as a Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition.

Mr. Hall has just finished playing the lead in "The Clarion." Other pictures were "The Crown Price and His Double" and "The Governor's Pardon."

On the stage he has to his credit seven Broadway productions in which he has played the part of doctors. Among these are "The Poor Little Rich Girl," originating the role; "Damaged Goods," "The Unborn," and "The Natural Law." He has played two engagements with David Warfield in "The Grand Army Man" and "The Music Master."

MILLS, A MANSFIELD PLAYER, JOINS VITAGRAPHERS

The Vitagraph company has added Thomas R. Mills to its roster of players. He will be seen in "The Man Who Couldn't Beat God," "The Crown Prince's Double," and "A Man's Sacrifice."

Mr. Mills has had wide experience on the legitimate stage, both as actor and stock director. He was associated with such stars as Richard Mansfield, Henry Miller, Louis Mann, Mme. Modjeska and others.

He has also appeared in vaudeville. His most recent engagement was that of director of the Harlem Opera House, New York, whence he comes to join the Vitagraph players.

"LOVE IS KING" FOR KLEINE-EDISON RELEASE ON 9th

"The Martyrdom of Philip Strong," the Edison drama announced for release on the Kleine-Edison program February 9, has been changed.

In its place the romantic drama "When Love Is King," recently completed by Edison, will be released February 9. "When Love Is King" features Carrol McComas and Richard Tucker.

FLORENCE LAWRENCE AND PANZER WILL LEAD GRAND MARCH

Florence Lawrence and Paul Panzer, two of Universal's most popular stars, the first named of which has just recently returned to the Universal fold, will lead the grand march at a Novelty Cabaret to be given at Muller's Bronx Casino, Third avenue and 154th street, New York, on Wednesday evening, February 16.

Activities of Fox Stars in East, West and South

Vivian Martin Is Getting Ready for Her Second Picture, Farnum Begins Subject Under Apfel Direction and Mantell Is at Work in West Indies

VIVIAN MARTIN, starred in the William Fox production of Israel Zangwill's masterpiece, "Merely Mary Ann," is resting prior to beginning work in her second picture for Mr. Fox.

Miss Martin rests by skating ten or twelve hours a day and by playing basket ball or driving her automobile the rest of the time.

H. Cooper Cliffe, the English actor, has the part of Colonel Ernest Dent in the William Fox photodrama, "Gold and the Woman," which is being made in the Fox studio in Grantwood, N. J., under the direction of James Vincent. The part differs from any that Mr. Cliffe has ever essayed.

William Farnum, star of "Fighting Blood," which has just been completed at the William Fox studios at Edendale, Cal., has begun work on a new production under the direction of Oscar C. Apfel. Dorothy Bernard, Stuart Holmes and other favorites are working in the Apfel company.

George Walsh, James Marcus and others who appeared in the notable production, "The Serpent," are also in California, where they have begun work on another picture which is being directed by R. A. Walsh.

Violet Horner has just completed work in "The Marble Heart," a William Fox production in which she is starred.

Miss Horner plays the part of a neglected wife, who, tiring of her husband, aids her lover to kill him, only to discover afterward that a guilty conscience stands between her and happiness. Walter Miller is a member of the supporting cast.

Annette Kellermann, star of the William Fox million dollar picture which is being made in the West Indies by Director General Herbert Brenon, has swum approximately fifty-six miles since work on the picture was begun last August. The picture, however, is not one of aquatic scenes alone.

Robert B. Mantell, starred in "The Spider and the Fly," a William Fox production made under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards, has begun work in a new production in the West Indies.

Corps of Popular Writers Engaged by Universal

"Doctor of Afternoon Arm," Directed by Hill, a Story of Labrador Ice Fields, Is Planned to Run in "Ladies' Home Journal" Simultaneously with Release of Picture

THE Universal Film Manufacturing Company has purchased the rights to several best sellers of recent years, and is also buying original scenarios from some of the most celebrated writers of the day.

The first of these writers, whose best works will be seen on the screen, is to be Paul West, formerly editor of the New York Sunday World.

His first contribution is now being done by Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby, under the title of "Object—Matrimony."

This is a two-reel comedy, to be followed imediately by another two-reel comedy to be done by Matt Moore and Jane Gail, entitled "The Society Sherlock."

Another writer of the day whose efforts will be filmed by the Universal is Thomas Hardy, managing editor of Snappy Stories, whose first contribution, "Behind the Curtain," is now being made by Henry Otto, with Alan Holubar as the star, supported by a cast of other favorites.

Seymour Galland, another well-known author, has written a society drama, a five-reel feature called "The Crucible of Life." These authors will continue to contribute to the Universal program, and some exceptionally fine pictures may be expected from them in the near future.

Among the adaptations from popular magazines will be a story by Wallace Irwin, "Nags," which appears in the February McClure's, and Norman Duncan has contributed a story of the Labrador ice fields, "Doctor of Afternoon Arm," which is now being made by Director Bob Hill, the story of which will appear in the Ladies' Home Journal simultaneously with the release of the picture.

Indianapolis League's First Ball to Be Held March 3

Convention and Entertainment Will Be Held in Hotel Severin—Rembusch Is Appointed Chairman of General Committee—Lockwood Is Member of Reception Committee

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Indianapolis, Feb. 5.

THE Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors, an organization of proprietors of motion picture theatres in Indiana, will hold its first annual convention and ball at the Hotel Severin Friday, March 3, when it is expected that several prominent motion picture stars will be present, in addition to the exhibitors, exchange men and others interested in the motion picture industry in the state.

The convention will be held on the thirteenth floor of the hotel, and the twelfth floor will be used for exhibits of exchanges and motion picture supply companies.

The general committees and chirmen were appointed at a meeting held on February 1. F. J. Rembusch, of Shelbyville, is chairman of the general committee. Ernest P. Huner is secretary and Joseph H. Gavin is treasurer.

The chairmen of the different committees are: Enetertainment and publicity, Fred Sanders; reception, J. C. Lockwood, Frankfort; ball, John B. Huber; finance, Ben Barton; program, Bingham, Crose and Cohen. Hugh O'Donnell, of Washington, is president of the organization.

The members of the general committee and the chairmen will hold a meeting next Tuesday at the Hotel Severin to perfect arrangements for the convention.

BUNGLES IS IN JACKSONVILLE AT WORK FOR A VIM

Bungles in the Vim comedians is Fernandea Perez, formerly known as "Tweedledum." Bungles goes to the Vim Films after refusing many offers in this country.

He is now at work in the Jacksonville studios. His first release is February 10, when he will be seen on the General Film Program in the comedy, "Bungles' Rainy Day."

"BUNGLES"

For a long time Bungles has held important positions in comedy companies in Italy, but on account of the war came to this country.

Bungles is assisted by Ernest Boehm, a recognized director and producer. He is supported by Elsie MacLeod.

Carefully Balanced Programs for Triangle Service

Fairbanks Will Rush to Get "His Picture in the Papers" on February 13—"Hell's Hinges," Free from Ominous Creaking, Will Swing Open to Public on the Twentieth

SEVERAL changes have been made in the Triangle releases for the next eight weeks, whereby the interests of exhibitors will be safeguarded, and carefully balanced programs will be presented.

For February 13 the releases are: Douglas Fairbanks in "His Picture in the Papers," a Fine Arts comedy, and "Honor's Altar," a serious Kay Bee play, featuring Bessie Barriscale, Lewis Stone and Walter Edwards.

For the week of February 20 William S. Hart, in the powerful Western entitled "Hell's Hinges," is strikingly contrasted with Lillian Gish in the romantic costume story "Daphne," the title of which has just been changed to "Daphne and the Pirate."

The entertaining but somewhat long filmization of "Don Quixote," starring De Wolfe Hopper, has gone out to the coast for revision, and has been sent back lopped of superfluous material, so that it is now a compact five-reeler.

It will be released on February 27, in conjunction with the new Kay Bee play, "The Last Act."

The latter is a story of a young woman of the stage who gets down on her luck and is befriended by a young married couple.

The husband falls in love with her, and, as she is playing a somewhat similar situation on the stage, she contemplates stealing the husband from the wife and running away with him.

But the good wife's plea finally prevails over her rival's bad impulse, and the actress takes instead the good angel role of bringing husband and wife together.

It is a part that affords Bessie Barriscale splendid opportunities, and she will be supported by Clara Williams and Harry Keenan.

March attractions open up for Triangle exhibitors beginning March 5, with Billie Burke in "Peggy," and Dorothy Gish in "Betty of Greystone."

Both are love stories, but one is laid in a Yankee, and the other in a Scottish environment. These will be followed on March 12 by John Emerson's stirring war play, "The Flying Torpedo," and a serious Kay Bee drama, "The Moral Fabric."

On March 19 takes place the long expected advent of Mae Marsh in Triangle films, her vehicle being a delightful domestic story entitled "Hoodoo Ann," in which she is supported by Robert Harron.

Along with this will be presented a romantic Slav play, "Bullets and Brown Eyes," starring Bessie Barriscale, aided by William Desmond.

March 26's dramatic attractions are Norma Talmadge and Seena Owen, in "Martha's Vindication." The Fine Arts small town story has a counter-part in the stirring H. B. Warner Kay Bee drama, "The Raiders."

As there are now ten companies working for Mack Sennett on as many Keystones there will likewise be a plentiful supply of these comedies.

Some of the most notable that are promised are William Collier, with Mae Busch, in "Better Late Than Never" (working title, "Getting Married"); "His Auto Ruination," featuring Mack Swain and Harry Gibbon, and a genuine new dog story entitled "Fido's Fate," in which the irrepressible Charles Murray will be starred.

Speaking of titles, the descriptive and ornamental letterings used by Thomas H. Ince in connection with Kay Bee plays have come in for the warmest praise from exhibitors and the trade press.

LEE HILL IS WITH McRAE COMPANY AT WESTERN UNIVERSAL

Lee Hill, director and actor, has joined the Universal Pacific Coast studios, where he is to work under the direction of Henry McRae in his production of 101 Bison productions.

Prior to his advent into the Universal ranks, Hill was a member of the Vogue Film Company's forces, where he was engaged in making comedies.

He was leading man with NYMP at its Santa Monica studios. Following this engagement, he occupied a similar position with the Crown Hill Company at Pasadena.

After leaving this latter concern he joined the Charlie Chaplin Company of the Essanay organization, where he remained until he was offered the place on the producing staff of the Vogue company.

The first part in which Hill has appeared since entering the Universal ranks is that of leading man in McRae's production of Frank M. Wiltermood's story of the railroads, a two reel subject entitled, "The Strife of the Iron Trails." Marie Walcamp, known to film fans as "the dare-devil girl of the films," plays opposite him and the two are supported by a cast chosen from the best of the Universal City stock talent.

"HAMLET MADE OVER" FOR BILLIE REEVES

Billie Reeves and his comedy company, under the direction of Earl Metcalfe, are at work upon a one-reel comedy feature by Mark Swan, entitled "Hamlet Made Over."

Associated with Mr. Reeves in this production are William H. Turner, Carrie Reynolds, Arthur Matthews and Charles Griffith.

Charles Griffith, for many years one of England's principal clowns in the Drury Lane pantomime, is cast for the role of the property boy.

Miss Reynolds will appear as Beatrice, a dashing soubrette; Mr. Turner will be seen as Bilkins, the manager. Billie Reeves, of course, will play Hamlet.

FAMOUS LONG ISLAND RESTAURANT USED AS VITAGRAPH SET

Hollywood Hall, a famous restaurant familiar to Long Island motorists, will soon be shown on the screen in a new feature production of the Vitagraph Company.

The restaurant stands on the heights above Hillside avenue, Jamaica, and its architecture and interior decorations offer splendid scene settings for motion pictures.

Theodore Marston is directing the film for Vitagraph and will stage a huge ball scene in the dance room.

EARL O. SHENCK JOINS GAUMONT SOUTHERN COMPANY

Earl O. Shenck, who has become well known as a leading man for the Pathé company, has joined the Gaumont company at Jacksonville, Fla.

He will play opposite Iva Shepard in the first Mutual Masterpicture in which he will appear. This is a story with an East Indian setting which is now being filmed under the direction of Edwin Middleton.

Second Birthday of Fox as Maker of Feature Films

From Modest Studio Beginnings Company Expands to Point of Foreign Exploitation as Well as Home Release of Pictures with Over 28 Notable Stars

WITH a display of bunting, decorations and displays and an invitation to exhibitors, the New York branch exchange of the Fox Film Corporation begins the week of February 14 with a celebration of William Fox's completion of his second year as a producer of feature films.

Beginning with a small staff and a restricted number of branches, the Fox organization has now expanded until it occupies four full floors of the large building at 130 West Forty-Sixth street, New York, and operates branches in twenty-three cities.

There are also three sub-offices, the newest having been opened last week in New Haven, Conn.

In the last year Mr. Fox has entered the world markets, and has built an extensive international distributing mechanism.

From modest studio beginnings the expansion has been even larger than would be surmised. William Fox studios are now operated in Fort Lee, Grantwood, Jersey City, N. J. There are four New Jersey studio plants.

In Los Angeles Fox directors and stars are at work in his big Edendale studio. At Kingston, Jamaica, a studio plant has been created first for the production of the $1,000,000 Kellermann picture, but other directors are at work there producing five-reel weekly release pictures.

At Corona, Long Island, ground is being broken for the erection of the central producing and manufacturing Fox plant and this work will cost in excess of $1,000,000, it is announced.

At the present time William Fox has the following directors under contract:

Raoul A. Walsh and Oscar C. Apfel, now working at the Edendale, California, plant: W. S. Davis, James Vincent and Keenan Buel at the New Jersey studios. John G. Adolfi is about to leave New York, with Bermuda as the destination for his company.

Frank C. Griffin has just come from California to work in the Fox eastern studios; likewise Bert Bracken.

In Jamaica, J. Gordon Edwards is directing Robert B. Mantell and Genevieve Hamper; James McKay is directing other Fox stars there and Herbert Brenon is making the big Kellermann picture.

Here is a partial list of the stars and featured players working under William Fox contracts: Annette Kellermann, William Farnum, Valeska Suratt, Vivian Martin, Claire Whitney, William H. Tooker, Maude Gilbert, Ruth Findlay, Warner Oland, Theda Bara, Robert B. Mantell, William E. Shay, H. Cooper Cliffe, Katherine Lee, Violet Horner, James Marcus, Marcel (Hontabat), Kittens Reichart, Stuart Holmes, Virginia Pearson, Genevieve Hamper, Dorothy Bernard, Fuller Mellish, Jane Lee, Walter Miller, Nan Carter, George Walsh and Florence Deshon.

Mrs. Cobb Goes on Tour in Middle West for Claridge

Trip Will Be Made for Purpose of Getting in Touch with Exhibitors as Well as Exchangemen, in Principal Cities, Including Detroit, Columbus and Chicago

MRS. AGNES EGAN COBB, of Claridge Films, Inc., leaves New York this week for a tour of the Middle West, which will include Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Detroit and Chicago. Mrs. Cobb is taking the trip for the purpose of getting into the closest possible touch not only with states rights buyers, but exhibitors, in order to know just what the public tastes of the moment are, and just what should be done to cater properly to the demand.

In connection with this trip it is announced that Claridge Films, Inc., will base their productions for the coming year on this investigation of the public demand. The scheme of the Claridge releases is novel, in that it offers to states rights buyers something approaching a complete program of features for the year. Claridge will produce one five-reel feature a month, to be sold on a states rights basis, and it is the aim to make contracts, so far as possible, with states rights buyers for the whole year's output, holding to a uniform price, and covering each separate territory through the same hands.

The first two releases, "The Heart of New York" and "The Birth of Character," are now ready, and the third is practically completed. The first is a sequel to "The Traffic of Souls," and was written and produced by Walter McNamara, author of the former.

"We have found a great demand for good features sold on a states rights basis," said Mrs. Cobb to MOTION PICTURE NEWS. "The feature market has been tied up in programs so long that the time is ripe for something a little more independent. This is what we aim to supply, and the reception we have been given from buyers indicates that we are on the right track. The buyers have been of the greatest assistance to us in feeling out conditions. These conditions change very rapidly, and we want to arrange the type of our productions so as to meet them. More than half our territory was sold before we had done a bit of advertising, or had gotten out a single herald or sheet of paper. The buyers seem to have confidence in us, and we have in them. I am impressed with the fact that the states rights ideas which they tried to tell me is old and worn out, is absolutely new again. It is really wonderful the interest which has been shown in our plan."

The Claridge productions are being made in the Claridge studios, in Flushing, N. Y. It is now planned to have Mr. McNamara make several more pictures there, owing to the success of the two he has already produced. L. J. Hiller, who is associated with Mrs. Cobb in the company, declares that the attitude of the buyers is accounted for largely by their confidence in Mrs. Cobb, who has been in films since the inception of the industry, and is known to producers, buyers and exhibitors all over the country.

"What Has the Newspaper to Gain in Addition to the Approval of Its Readers, and Increased Circulation, by the Printing of Motion Picture News?" Asks General Manager Walter W. Irwin, of V-L-S-E, Who Answers the Question With Facts That the Trend of the Industry Should Indicate to Editors

EDITOR'S NOTE.—This is the conclusion to the article of General Manager Walter W. Irwin of V-L-S-E appearing last week. He compared the exhibitor to a merchant whose commodity for sale to the general public is entertainment, and he now shows why editors of daily papers should not neglect the golden harvest in store for publications which realize the demand of the public for news of screen drama.

"WHAT has the newspaper to gain, in addition to the approval of its readers, and increased circulation, by the printing of moving picture news?" asks General Manager Walter W. Irwin of V-L-S-E.

"First of all it has an advertising revenue from its local exhibitor which can be developed second only to that of the department store.

"Secondly, it has the revenue from an industry with potential advertising possibilities greater even than those of the automobile industry.

"If you doubt that first statement, I need only to point to what has already been done.

"The Seattle Times, for instance, by reason of its cultivation of the interest of its readers in motion pictures, today is carrying quarter, half and full page advertisements from the theatres in its own city, and is deriving from this class of advertising a revenue running over $5,000 a month.

"But you cannot expect to obtain any such results unless you give to the motion picture exhibitor an equitable advertising rate. He may be made a day-in and day-out advertiser with the right kind of editorial co-operation, and a fair advertising charge.

"He is entitled to the same rate which you give to the department store, because, as the Seattle Times and other papers have demonstrated, he may be developed to the point where he will use as much space as your department store, and where he may be relied upon with the same dependability that you rely upon the advertising from the dry goods house.

Amusement Rate Should Not Apply

"The amusement rate should not apply to him. It is a rate which was made for the spasmodic advertiser, for the theatre which had its doors open only a few months each year, and perhaps only a few times during those months.

"It was devised originally on the basis of 'so much publicity for so much advertising,' and the rate was made to cover, so far as possible, the cost of the white space in the editorial columns as well as in the advertising columns.

"Back of the exhibitor there is the manufacturer. The sooner you help the exhibitor to make more money, the sooner you co-operate with the manufacturer in showing the exhibitor how persistent, intelligent newspaper advertising will make more money for him, the sooner the manufacturer is going to get into the field with both feet himself.

"The cost of production of motion pictures now, has been exhorbitant. The cost of educating the exhibitor along the right merchandising and advertising lines has been tremendous.

"The motion picture producer has felt that he could not risk a national advertising appropriation until he has his exhibitors educated to the point where they would back up that advertising properly.

"This has been a long process, but, as in every other commercial line, it has been a necessary one. Today the motion picture industry is just on the eve of efficient interlinking in advertising and merchandising between the exhibitor and the manufacturer.

"It is just on the eve of the biggest advertising effort which any industry has ever made.

National Advertising for All Big Companies

"Four large distributing organizations are now advertising nationally. Many others will follow suit as soon as their distributive plans are properly taken care of.

"The combined appropriation of these organizations, I venture the opinion, will exceed those of any other industry which has ever come before the public.

"But just as the appropriations of the automobile manufacturers have gone to those mediums which have supported that industry best, the appropriation of moving picture producers will go to the publications that aid them most effectively in furthering the public's interest in the screen.

"And, as in all such cases, the pioneers in giving the motion picture interests this support, will undoubtedly be those to receive the largest share of the business.

"In fact, I believe I am safe in saying that the money spent in advertising by the motion picture field will be apportioned on the basis of the intelligent co-operation which newspapers have given it, rather than upon the basis of circulation solely.

"This tendency may already be noticed. In one of our large Eastern cities, a paper which stands third in the evening field in the point of circulation, is the one which has been selected by one of the largest of the motion picture producing organizations, as the medium in which it will concentrate its entire appropriation for that city—an appropriation running very close to six figures.

"Its foremost competitor, a leading afternoon paper in that community, has a circulation greater than any other three papers in the city combined, and yet this publication was entirely ignored in placing of this particular moving picture advertising, for the reason that its guiding spirits had not had the foresight to see the possibilities for them of helpful co-operation with the motion picture interests.

"The common complaint which I receive from editors, is that after printing motion picture news, they are unable to get the exhibitors in their community, to advertise in the newspapers.

"Or, they write me that they have sounded their clientele on the subject of advertising and have been unable to get any satisfactory response from them; therefore, they have decided that it would be a waste of time and money to start a moving picture department.

"The trouble with these editors is that they have simply been trying to sell white space. They have either approached the exhibitors before starting a motion picture page, or they have printed motion picture news in only a half hearted way.

"The photoplay department—and by department I mean a definite allotment of space given to this field of endeavor on specific days or every day in the week—must be raised above the dead level of hackneyed mediocrity.

"It must stand for something. It must be given thought. It should have an individual in charge who spends his entire time in furthering its interest.

Papers, with "Something to Sell"

Fifteen million people—20,000,000 is probably nearer the mark—today want to be told what pictures are being shown, where and when. They want this information each day. They want it for the city or town they live in. They want it for the theatre nearest them.

"The papers that are providing them with this, are those which will derive the most profit from both the circulation and advertising standpoints.

"They are the papers which have something to sell. They are the papers from which you never hear any complaint regarding lack of support from the motion picture exhibitors.

"In Chicago the News recently devoted 1,000 lines daily to attractively illustrated and carefully written advertisements directing the attention of their readers to the advertising of the motion picture theatres in their columns.

"The Evening Ledger, of Philadelphia, maintains at the corner of Broad and Chestnut streets of that city, a photoplay service bureau to which thousands of people come weekly for information as to where and when certain productions are to be shown in the city.

"In Springfield, Ill., the editorial staff of the News-Record holds periodical conferences with the exhibitors of that city at which the exhibitors are requested to present suggestions for improving the motion picture news in that paper, and members of the newspaper staff are offered suggestions with regard to comment on current attractions, advertising and motion picture news in general.

"Co-operation such as these papers are extending, is service with a 'come-back'—service, the dividends from which the newspaper proprietor may bank in advance."

NORTH CAROLINA LEAGUE TO HOLD CONVENTION FEB. 13, 14, 15

The third annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of North Carolina will be held in Greensboro, N. C., February 13, 14 and 15. The first business meeting will be at 10 o'clock a. m., February 14, in the Piedmont theatre. The Guilford Hotel has been selected as headquarters, where rooms can be secured at a reasonable price. Several speakers of prominence will address the convention.

It is the purpose of the officials of the organization to make this meeting the most interesting and profitable gathering of motion picture exhibitors ever held in the state.

One Man Bars Whole of Kansas from Seeing "Nation"

Superintendent of Public Instruction, Also Head of Censor Board, Issues Fiat Against Picture That Ninety Per Cent of the Population Want to See

Special to Motion Picture News

Kansas City, Feb. 5.

THERE are in the state of Kansas 1,670,000 men, women and children, and it is safe to say that ninety per cent. of this number would like to see "The Birth of a Nation," yet that privilege has been denied them by one man—W. D. Ross, superintendent of public instruction and head of the censor board.

He has barred this picture from the state as "being not proper, nor instructive. From its false title, through its false tissue of misrepresentation of the north, the negro and our country's history to the final culminating travesty which pictures peace on earth good will to men as the outcome of passion, of hate and murder, it is vicious and immoral—immoral not alone in the parts that are sexually suggestive, but in its whole revelation of race prejudice and sectional bitterness."

Such was his statement on the rejection of the picture, according to the Topeka State Journal.

He did not call together all his inspectors when he turned down this picture, but his decision has been upheld by the Appeal Board which consists of Governor Arthur N. Capper, S. M. Brewster, attorney-general, and J. T. Botkin, secretary of state.

H. A. Sherman, manager of the film company that submitted the film for censorship, states that the picture will be taken to Topeka on February 21, and an effort will be made to show it despite the adverse decision of the State Censor Board.

The press of the state is aroused over the barring of what is termed by some as the greatest picture that ever came into Kansas.

Many of the Democratic papers of the state see in the barring of the picture a political move to secure the negro vote of the state.

Many papers have commented editorially on the fact that the picture has been turned down by the censor board and the indications are that it will not stop here.

Some have predicted that an injunction will be granted that will allow the film to be shown.

The Topeka State Journal, in its issue of January 24, carries a column about the rejection of the film. It pointed out in this article that the Rev. Festus Foster was not in favor of showing the picture. When it was to be shown to the censor board he called his daughter from their home to see it.

Yet he was not in favor of allowing the picture to be shown, agreeing with Mr. Ross that it was immoral.

They also pointed out that some of the wives of members of the appeal board and the censor board had seen the picture and could see nothing immoral in it.

Small papers throughout the state are carrying a great deal about the barring of the picture, and no doubt further developments will come out when the picture is brought to Topeka.

President Wilson Compliments Selig News Editor

Jack Wheeler, Who Has Known the Chief Executive for a Number of Years, Is Granted Exclusive Interview in Chicago—Film of Complete Tour Will Be Presented Mr. Wilson

JACK WHEELER, EDITOR-IN-CHIEF OF THE SELIG-TRIBUNE, AT HIS DESK

PRESIDENT WILSON has personally complimented the Selig-Tribune, the news film issued twice weekly by the Selig Polyscope Company. On Tuesday morning, February 1, just before the President and Mrs. Wilson left Chicago, Jack Wheeler, editor-in-chief of the Selig-Tribune, was granted an exclusive interview by the President.

Mr. Wheeler has known President Wilson for years and has accompanied him on past tours. It is said that they chatted together for five minutes, while not another news writer or cameraman was permitted to intrude.

President Wilson mentioned the enterprise of the Selig-Tribune and complimented its attractiveness and worth.

"Mr. President," said Editor Wheeler, "after your present tour is over the Selig-Tribune will present you with a complete film showing every detail of your present journey."

The President and Mrs. Wilson both expressed their thanks and spoke of the value of such a gift.

A special cameraman representing the Selig-Tribune accompanied President Wilson on his recent tour. This cameraman was Mr. Lewis J. Simons and his work was praised by President Wilson to Editor Wheeler.

The Selig-Tribune filmed thousands of feet of exclusive film of President and Mrs. Wilson, and of scenes in connection with their recent tour of the Middle Western States, when the President made speeches in favor of preparedness.

CENSOR RECOMMENDS A SELIG TO WELFARE SOCIETY

Major Funkhouser, the Chicago censor of motion pictures, is quoted as asserting recently in an address before a Chicago welfare society that he regretted he had no copy of the Selig feature drama, "The Making of Crooks," to show them.

He stated, according to reports, that he considered the Selig drama as one carrying a strong moral lesson to parents. "The Making of Crooks" picturized the evils of certain poolrooms where boys, it is said, frequently absorb criminal atmosphere.

The American Is Now "At Home" in New Building

Company Whose Nineteen Studios in Santa Barbara, Cal., and Elsewhere Are in Full Production, Moves Main Offices in Chicago to 6227-35 Broadway

THE American Film Company, Inc., now is "at home" in a spick and span and spacious new building at 6227-35 Broadway, Chicago.

At a cost of approximately $200,000, an entire new plant has been erected in Chicago to house the American and its ever-growing activities.

The new structure is of brick and terra cotta, two and one-half stories in height, and each floor has an area of 9,000 square feet.

Work of construction was begun April 1, 1915. President Hutchinson and his army of co-workers expected to occupy the new home some weeks before the holidays.

An extensive strike, which tied up building operations in Chicago for a period of nearly two months, proved a severe blow to the hopes of moving in before Old Man Winter closed his first on the Windy City.

The buildings formerly occupied by the American are moved back close to the "L" tracks, and are being used as storerooms and for other activities in connection with the greatly increased output of the American.

The former projection room still is in use, but a new one also is in operation.

It is in this new projection room, fitted with four Motioscope motor-drive projectors, that representatives of the trade press sit weekly on Thursday to review forthcoming American releases.

The new projection room is some sixty feet long by twenty wide. It is fitted with comfortable chairs and tables, over which are bent well shaded electric lights.

A specially constructed screen is built in. The new projection room is modern in every respect.

The new building houses the general office, the assembling room, the dry room, the negative room and three spacious storage film vaults.

The general offices are on the second floor facing Broadway.

President Hutchinson's suite is finished in heavy, dark walnut, and a unique beamed ceiling effect has been worked out.

Adjoining Mr. Hutchinson's offices is the room of Manager R. R. Nehls, and adjoining Mr. Nehls' room is Mr. Ziebarth's.

These offices are finished in the same general material and design as those of Mr. Hutchinson's.

Nineteen hundred and fifteen saw a tremendous increase in the output of the American Company. Early in the year it was seen that new offices and factory rooms were absolutely necessary.

Accordingly, Mr. Hutchinson laid plans for a structure modern in every way, which he ordered constructed along lines best suited to the motion picture industry.

Practically all of the mechanical work in connection with American films is now done in Chicago.

The large studios in Santa Barbara and elsewhere in California supply the reels and reels of film.

In all, there are nineteen American companies at work, and the film dramas, comedies and tragedies produced by these nineteen companies are more than sufficient to keep the big force in Chicago working at top speed day after day.

FEDERAL MAKES PICTURES IN CLEVELAND

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Cleveland, O., Feb. 5.

After an almost unique experience of producing companies which do not produce, Cleveland at last has seen one of the many plans to make the city a producing center actually come to something.

The Federal Photoplay Company, with a model studio at 717 Superior avenue, N. E., last week commenced to make pictures. The well known comedy team of Johnny and Emma Ray, whose home is in Cleveland, are to be featured in the early comedies and many Cleveland amateurs are being tried out in an effort to develop local talent.

Robert H. McLaughlin, former manager of the Colonial theatre, whose play, "The Eternal Magdalene," founded on the abolition of Cleveland's segregated district, is bringing him both fame and fortune, is prominently identified with the new venture.

ORGANIZING $2,000,000 CORPORATION IN CLEVELAND

Cleveland, O., Feb. 5.

A New York motion picture man is in Cleveland trying to interest business men of the city in a scheme to form a $2,000,000 corporation for the production of business and advertising films.

He has had several conferences with the Chamber of Commerce and other business organizations. The prospectus, which is in the hands of attorneys, directs attention to the educational and advertising value of films showing processes of manufacture and the details of business organizations.

Amity the Dominant Note in Ohio League Views

Formation of Branch in Northwestern Part of State Galvanizes Industry in That Section Into Life and Indicates Its Intention to Become Important Factor

Special to Motion Picture News

Cleveland, O., Feb. 5.

THE formation of the northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors League seems to have galvanized the trade in this part of the country into life. Exhibitors are tackling the problems confronting them in a business like way. Their doings are attracting the attention of the newspapers and the public.

Their manifest intention to take their proper place among the progressive bodies of the community and to assert and defend their rights has created a favorable impression.

A more tolerant disposition toward each other's views and the new spirit of amity and unity has made the exhibitors a greater power than ever before.

Both toward strictly trade problems and public questions affecting the industry, the exhibitors are adopting a firm, intelligent and unmistakable attitude. Their views are beginning to receive that respect the more aggressive policy warrants.

A favorable impression has been created by the willingness of the Cleveland exhibitors to co-operate with the Federation of Women's Clubs in the provision of "family programs" at selected motion picture houses.

The federation embraces fifty women's clubs. The women are asking for special programs that will be "entertaining, worth remembering and talking about in the family circle, educational, something amusing and nothing to emphasize bad morals and bad manners."

The exhibitors have insisted that they and not the women shall select the programs, but they are endeavoring to secure reprints of good pictures approved by the joint committee of exhibitors and representatives of the Federation of Women's Clubs for presentation at neighborhood houses to be chosen later on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays.

The exhibitors want these reprints to be furnished outside the regular service. If the experiment proves successful, it is probable that producing companies will be requested to make new pictures of the type approved by the joint committee.

Protest was raised at the last meeting of the northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors League against the decision of film exchanges to demand payment for service one week in advance.

State Representative F. M. Kennedy moved a "C. O. D. one day in advance" resolution, but withdrew it in favor of a motion instructing the Exchange Committee to take the matter up immediately and report to the next meeting of the league.

Some exhibitors thought the exchanges were just as much entitled to protection in this way as the producers of features, and argued that the elimination of bad debts in the exchanges would benefit the whole business.

The majority of the members present, however, asserted there should be some discrimination between honest and old established exhibitors and those of the "fly by night" type.

They objected to all exhibitors being placed in the same category and asserted that they were entitled to credit in the same way that other business men are.

They strongly protested against reputable exhibitors being made to suffer for the failure of the few to meet their just liabilities.

Gaumont Winter Studios Hum with Feature Work

"According to Law," Directed by Garrick as a De Luxe Masterpicture, Is First March Release—"Feathertop," by Bryan, Is Picked for Marguerite Courtot

THE month of February will see unusual activities at the winter studios of the Gaumont company at Jacksonville, Fla. The policy of giving a director time to prepare for a new production is meeting with unqualified success.

Three big feature photoplays are always in work and the fourth director is planning his new production.

The first three February releases have of course been completed in "As a Woman Sows," "The Idol of the Stage" and the first Marguerite Courtot photoplay, "The Dead Alive."

Director William F. Haddock is just filming the last scenes of "I Accuse," the Marjorie Howe story picturized by George D. Proctor, Gaumont scenario editor. It will be released February 21 with Alexander Gaden in the leading role. Helen Marten is playing opposite him.

The first March release Gaumont will make as a Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition, will be "According to the Law."

For this production, which will be directed by Richard Garrick, supervising director of Gaumont stock companies, Howard Hall has been secured.

Mr. Hall, who has only recently turned to the screen, has been featured in numerous Broadway productions and has starred at the head of his own company for years.

"According to the Law" was written by Paul M. Bryan and Joseph H. Trant.

An East Indian village is now rising on the water front along the St. John's river opposite the city of Jacksonville.

Here Director Edwin Middleton is already taking scenes of "East Indian life" which is the setting for a story written by O. A. Nelson.

Marguerite Courtot will be the star in the next photodrama to be directed by Henry J. Vernot for Gaumont. Paul M. Bryan, who wrote "The Idol of the Stage," has written the new play with Miss Courtot in mind.

It is called "Feathertop," and the influence of the story of this name by Nathaniel Hawthorne upon the persons in the photodrama is so strong that they are vitally affected.

Three Studios in One Plan for Lubin at 20th Street

With New Lighting Plant and Sectional Glass Roof Directors Will Be Able to Produce Without Fear of Interruption from Bad Weather Conditions

EXTENSIVE alterations are in progress at the Lubin studio, Twentieth and Indiana Avenue, Philadelphia, under the direction of Edward L. Simons. The old floors are being replaced, columns and abutments are being removed to enable the occupants of the studio at any time to extend their field of operation by combining three studios in one.

A new lighting plant is being installed. Upon the completion of these alterations the Lubin Company will begin work upon several feature productions, safe in the knowledge that the weather will have no terrors for them in the future.

They are also installing in the Sixteenth Street and Glenwood Avenue studio a new lighting plant and sectional glass roof.

While the present winter has not been a severe one in Philadelphia, the sun has been hidden a good part of the time and this has caused many expensive delays in the turning out of the required number of features.

It has been a troublesome problem at times to keep seven directors and their companies from getting in each others' way.

The aforesaid improvements will solve all difficulties. Director Jack Pratt and his company will occupy the Glenwood studio. Edgar Lewis is in Georgia with his company and directors Kaufman, Terwilliger, Greene and other will occupy the Twentieth Street and Indiana Avenue studio.

Director Pratt is at present working on "Her Bleeding Heart," a multiple reel feature by Daniel Carson Goodman.

Director Kaufman will begin work upon the completion of the alteration of the studios on an adaptation of Clyde Fitch's famous play, 'The Woman in the Case." The adaptation is being made by Anthony P. Kelly. Ethel Clayton will be starred in this feature.

The Lubin Manufacturing Company has recently entered into an agreement with a prominent fiction writer and will soon present his work on the screen.

USE NEWSPAPERS TO DEFEND. RAISE IN ADMISSION PRICES

Winnipeg exhibitors who recently raised their evening price of admission to 15 cents have just made good use of their newspapers in combatting adverse criticism which had been aroused partly as a result of the increase in price, and partly through a letter sent to the papers by an anonymous "Film Admirer," in which he pictured the exhibitors as making large profits, being controlled by a film trust, taking advantage of the presence of a great many soldiers in Winnipeg, and creating a false impression generally.

Manager Schuberg, of the Province and Bijou theatres, and W. P. Wilson, of the Lyceum, the first house to put the increased price into effect, both gave interviews of good length to the newspapers, in which they pointed out that film service is costing the theatres infinitely more than it did a comparatively short time ago; that programs run twice as long as they did two or three years ago; that feature productions with prominent stars, which are now demanded by patrons, cost more than an equal footage made up of short subjects; that there is now an added tax on the seating capacity of theatres; and that a special war tax is now paid, in addition to the regular duty on films, which must be paid by the exhibitor in the form of increased rental. Attention was also called to the fact that the local theatres are not making large profits, and that many houses have been forced to close during the past year. The public was also informed that the regular admission price in all other cities in Western Canada is 15 cents.

This educative publicity has undoubtedly had a good effect, and it is thought that patrons, now that the situation has been fully explained to them, will be perfectly willing to pay the increased price.

NEWSPAPER SPACE FREELY USED BY MISSISSIPPI THEATRES

The Greenville Amusement Company, Greenville, Miss., operating the Grand, Bijou and Airdome theatres, is a believer in generous use of newspaper space.

Recently, they ran in their daily paper a two-column, full-page length ad, descriptive of the week's pictures.

AMERICAN FLAG THROWN ON SCREEN AT OPENING OF SHOW

Instead of throwing a "welcome" sign on the screen at the opening of each show, the Columbia Theatre, Bath, Maine, flashes an American flag.

TIES UP "GRAFT" ADVERTISING TO LOCAL AGITATION

Manager Hector Quagliotti, of the Colonial theatre, in Vancouver, B. C., a large user of newspaper space, recently created intense interest in the opening of the Universal Company's "Graft" series at his house by taking advantage of the interest in the prohibition question, which is at present a burning issue in British Columbia. Advance advertising in the papers stated, "We are going to expose the Liquor 'Graft' in motion pictures. We are meeting with considerable opposition, but will show them in spite of it."

Many people thought that the pictures must have a local application, and there was considerable speculation as to just what was about to be revealed.

SUBURBAN HOUSE GETS FIRST RUN BOOKINGS ON SERIAL

The Coliseum theatre, New Orleans, is one of the first suburban houses in the city to secure first-run bookings on a popular serial, thus giving residents a chance to see first-class pictures without the expense of carfare. "The Girl and the Game" is the serial.

This innovation is proving very popular with patrons of the Coliseum.

MARY PICKFORD STILL IN FAMOUS PLAYERS—PARAMOUNT PICTURES

"America's Darling" Remains With Company Which Has Been Responsible for Her Success

All doubt concerning the future affiliations of Mary Pickford has been dispelled. The foremost star of filmdom has rejected the greatest offers that have ever been tendered to an actress in the history of the stage [illegible] position to know the facts remained skeptical.

This year the film world was stirred by the news that Miss Pickford had received an offer of $6,000 per week in [illegible] understand my determination to reject such a tremendous offer, but my only answer is that money is not everything in this world. I have my future reputation as an artiste to consider, and it is to my best interests to ally myself with an organization that has already firmly established itself in the eyes of the world as a producer of photoplays of the highest order of merit. It is not a matter of being starred in a few excellent productions, but of appearing in plays of a never-falling high standard of excellence, such as are only released through the Paramount Pictures Corporation.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG AND WILTON LACKAYE IN LEADING ROLES

Patrons of the Colonial theatre will have their first opportunity of seeing the screen version of George Du Maurier's famous book and play, "Trilby," as produced by the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, under the able direction of Maurice Tourneur, with the screen and stage's foremost dramatic stars, Clara Kimball Young and Wilton Lackeye, in the stellar roles.

When George Du Maurier first wrote "Trilby" it took the world by storm, becoming the "best seller" of the times, and up to this present day that popular novel did not decrease twenty per cent in sales value.

"Trilby" was first presented on the stage in London in 1895, where it met with great success; since, being revived, both here and abroad, at least once every two years.

"Trilby," a model for an obscure sculptor, seeking adventure meets little Billie, the [illegible] Laird, Svengali, Gheeko, and [illegible] he can hypnotize her. His devilish mind conceives the idea of keeping her under mesmeric power and giving her, through his power, the voice of a nightingale.

Billie and Trilby fall in love with each other, and when Svengali finally influences Trilby away, and through his hellish power makes of her a great Diva, Billie is unconsolable.

Trilby mounts the ladder of fame, and soon becomes a universal figure.

Billie and his friends happen into a theatre one night, where a fashionable audience has gathered to hear the famous La Svengali, as Trilby has become known. Discovering Trilby, Billie attacks Svengali, who dies of heart failure, and Trilby, after months of torture, recovers her own personality and is about to become happy, when, facing Svengali's picture, the old influence returns and she drops dead of fright.

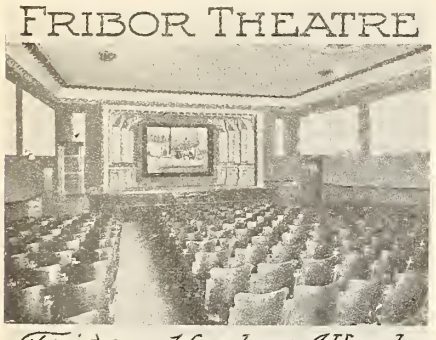
LITTLE ISLAND CITY HAS MODEL PICTURE THEATRE

Friday Harbor, Wash., is a little city of 350 souls. It is situated on an island and accessible only by small draught boats. It has no railroad; in fact, no communication of any sort after 3 p. m. or before 9 a. m.

You wouldn't expect to find a model little picture theatre in so small a town, would you? But there is one—the Fribor, built and managed by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred T. Middleton.



Friday Harbor, Wash.

The cut on this page shows the theatre's neat decorations, its excellent aisle space, and the indirect lighting system. An admission price of 25 cents is charged, and the V-L-S-E service is used practically exclusively.

Tom North, Seattle's V-L-S-E manager named the theatre. He took the first three letters of Friday and the last three of Harbor, thus evolving the name Fribor. A copy of the theatre's New Year folder is before us, and it is very neat—as neat as the house itself.

ASK PATRONS TO PASS ON MERITS OF PICTURES

To ascertain definitely whether or not the people of Monroe, La., want the Triangle program, the Saenger Amusement Company, operating a chain of houses in the state, are at present running a series of ballots in the newspapers.

"Do You Want the Triangle Movies?" is the question asked the people through the press. Then the Saenger company explains their motive: "The question has nothing to do with our present policy in case we do not receive enough encouragement to book the Triangle pictures, but is simply put as any merchant would to his customers."

The Saenger company successfully inaugurated the Triangle program at its houses in Texarkana and Shreveport, where over ninety per cent. of its picture patrons requested their continuance.

CANADIAN THEATRE GIVES A WELL-ROUNDED PROGRAM

The evolution of motion picture presentation from mere exhibition of reels to a well rounded program, is interestingly illustrated in the case of the Walker theatre, Winnipeg, Canada.

The Walker gives two complete performances each evening, the program being as follows: 1. Overture. 2. Special Topical Reviews. 3. Vocal Solos. 4. Five-Part Photoplay. 5. Vocal Solos. 6. One-Part Comedy.

The first performance begins at 7 o'clock, the second at 9. A special scenic background, which utilizes the entire floor space of 3,200 feet, lends an artistic setting. One of the features is a cyclorama 120 feet long and 70 high.

POLITICAL QUARREL AIDS CALIFORNIA THEATRE'S NOVEL LIVE WIRE STUNT

A LIVE wire stunt which took an unexpected turn was staged in Oakland, California, the other day. It shows, among other things, just how much valuable newspaper publicity an exhibitor can get, if he is alert, and is aided by good fortune.

The Franklin Theatre, Oakland, arranged a special showing of "A Submarine Pirate" for the officers and enlisted men of the naval training station at Goat Island. The Franklin people got Oakland to take the matter up and make it a civic affair. A reception committee from the Chamber of Commerce, headed by the mayor, met the sailors at their pier, and a parade through the main streets ensued.

Rex Midgley, of the Franklin Theatre, was in charge of the reception to the naval men. The mayor, wishing to make the affair as notable as possible, instructed the police chief to furnish a platoon of police as an escort. When the police commissioner heard of this he vetoed the plan. "I am not going to take the men off their beats every time the mayor wants his picture taken," said he, referring to the motion pictures made of the parade for the Triangle Film Corporation.

Whereupon war was declared between the mayor and his police commissioner. The parade was held, but without the platoon of police.

The point is this: whereas the Oakland papers—particularly The Enquirer—had given inside space to advance stories of the event before the political row developed, they gave it first page position after hostilities opened. All of which was the best sort of publicity for the Franklin Theatre; and the Franklin management saw to it that they were interviewed on phases of the situation.

Not only so, but the San Francisco papers carried stories about it, and every line that was printed, of course, was a boon to the Franklin. The result was that the newspapers kept the story going for several days, and the Franklin gained much valuable space.

Incidentally, we may remark that the Franklin is a firm believer in newspaper advertising.

NEW ORLEANS THEATRE USES NEWSPAPER FOR "MISSION"

A live wire exhibitor stunt par excellence has been accomplished by the management of the Crescent theatre in New Orleans, a house formerly legitimate, and which turned to the motion pictures only three weeks ago.

In the daily press the Crescent is running a series of episodes calling attention to the fact that the Crescent with its Paramount program was not established in New Orleans solely for profit, but rather to perform a mission. A few extracts from Episode No. 1 are given:

"Motion pictures have been presented with the old environment, on a lower plane than they deserve to occupy. First, be it known, the motion picture industry is fast supplanting the legitimate stage.

"It then becomes necessary to present the best of the silent drama according to the most advanced ideas. It is now wholly our aim to present the highest class of pictures but to project them 'midst the most comfortable and pleasing surroundings possible."

Excellent newspaper display advertising is offered in the Triangle Film Corporation's "Ad Sheet." It is about the size of a newspaper, and contains 10 model ads.

These ads have the characteristic Triangle border around each advertisement and a Triangle displayed somewhere in the ad; plenty of white space; the upper part a 65-screen halftone of two or three attractive characters in the play; the name of the play in large type, followed by a few paragraphs in 10 or 12 point type; blank space at the bottom for name of the local theatre and address.

At the top of each ad a scene from the play is shown, and this is an excellent feature.

ILLINOIS THEATRE GIVES WEEKLY SHOW FOR CHILDREN

The management of the Court theatre at Kankakee, Ill., now gives a special motion picture show at 10 a. m. Saturdays for the children at which comedy, travelogues and educational films are shown.

The action was taken by the management in response to a movement by the club women of the city for better shows for children.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

LASKY COMPLETES "THE BLACKLIST," LABOR AND CAPITAL PLAY FEATURING BLANCHE SWEET

THE Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company has just completed an elaborate feature production on the subject of capital and labor. The play is entitled "The Blacklist," suggested by the system under which certain big industrial firms exercise an unfair advantage over discharged employees by interchanging information between the companies, and was written by Marion Fairfax and William C. De Mille.

Those who followed closely the extraordinary happenings in Colorado a year ago when the state militia and federal troops were called upon to stop the bloodshed which was the result of armed conflict between the striking miners and mine guards, will see in "The Blacklist" a dramatic picturization said to be based on some of the events which took place at that time. Because of the universal interest in the tragedy of Colorado it is believed "The Blacklist" will excite exceptional attention on the part of the public.

The production was directed by William C. De Mille, who also directed Blanche Sweet in her recent success, "The Ragamuffin." Much of the material used in "The Blacklist" as a photoplay was obtained by Marion Fairfax at first hand.

Miss Fairfax went to Colorado to write a series of articles when the great strike was on, so she has drawn upon her personal observation and knowledge for considerable material in "The Blacklist."

When it became known several months ago that the Lasky company was contemplating a photoplay production of this theme in which both sides of the controversy were to be treated fairly and in an unbiased manner, many inquiries reached the Lasky offices from labor leaders as to the intent of the production.

"The Blacklist" is no propaganda either for or against labor.

Just as the light of publicity in newspapers and magazines exposed the innermost workings of the capital and labor organizations in Colorado during the strike, "The Blacklist," as a result of Marion Fairfax's exceptional information and investigation, will go a step further in exposing the cruel misunderstandings which existed at that time, and which in various forms still exist in different parts of the country.

There will be practically reproduced on the screen the series of frightful incidents which led up to and included the massacre of innocent women and children in the camps of the striking miners in the green hills of Colorado.

In support of Miss Sweet the cast includes Charles Clary, Ernest Joy and Billy Elmer.

TRAVERS VALE FINISHES HIS FIRST PRODUCTION, "THE CHASM," FOR "U"

Travers Vale, former Biograph director, who recently joined the producing staff of the Universal forces at its Pacific Coast studios, has just completed his first "U" release, a two reel drama by Harvey Gates, entitled, "The Chasm."

As readily can be seen, the resulting denouement is one of startling force, a denouement unusually well brought out in the production. Too much cannot be said for the work done by each of the players in their interpretations of their respective roles.

Taken as a whole, the picture is an exceptional one and one which will undoubtedly arouse considerable press comment.

"BEAUTY" ELOPEMENT SUBJECT FOR RELEASE ON FEB. 16

A new kind of elopement is shown in "Ella Wanted to Elope," a Beauty comedy to be released February 16.

Neva Gerber is seen as the piquant little lady who prefers a man of mature years to her youthful suitor, and so states in her diary. Her mother's attorney agrees to cure her—and they elope according to mother's well-laid plans.

The attorney is scheduled to desert the impetuous young lady, but the lover is the means of landing him in jail.

Mother effects the release only to find that the younger man has seized time by the forelock and paid the parson. Dick Rosson is the man with the ready money.

"GRINNING SKULL" READY ON MARCH 6 THROUGH GENERAL

One of the most meritorious Selig productions-with-a-purpose ever released through General Film Company is dated for release on March 6.

The drama is entitled "The Grinning Skull," and is a psychological play from the pen of W. E. Wing, to show social sophistry. The highest and lowest social strata of a great city are depicted, and the scenes showing mission work are most noteworthy.

Eugenie Besserer and an excellent cast present a production of power and morality.

HEFFRON MAKES PREPARATIONS TO PRODUCE "VALIANTS OF VIRGINIA"

Producer T. N. Heffron is making extensive preparations for the forthcoming production of Hallie Erminie Rives' remarkable story of Southern life, "The Valiants of Virginia."

The book has been picturized in five reels, and an all-star cast has been selected.

GLIMPSES OF "THE SPIDER," A FAMOUS PLAYERS-PARAMOUNT PHOTOPLAY, IN WHICH PAULINE FREDERICK IS STARRED

WILL FILM PRISON REFORM NOVEL BY MRS. BOOTH

Universal has procured the rights to picturize General Maud Ballington Booth's novel, "Was it Murder?" which made the Salvation Army head one of the most talked about writers for some time in newspapers and magazines. The sale of the book reached the million mark.

General Booth's novel was one of the first dealing with prison reform, which makes it all the more important to-day because many of the prophecies made at the time by the writer have become realized, according to revelations made in the testimony given at the investigations conducted by the State of New York in regards to the management of its prisons.

King Baggot willl probably be cast for the chief role, under the direction of Henry Otto, immediately following the filming of "The Honorable Peter Stirling." It has also been arranged by the Universal to take scenes for this picture in and around General Booth's home in the Adirondacks.

SELIG RAILROAD STORY FEATURES KATHLYN WILLIAMS

A railroad story is soon to be released by the Selig Polyscope Company, featuring Kathlyn Williams, supported by Guy Oliver. This Selig drama, called "The Girl and the Lantern," is not all railroad scenes. There is strong love interest. A number of character types are also ultilized. It is not generally known, but Miss Williams almost lost her life during the production of the drama.

She slipped and fell on the track in front of a speeding locomotive. Her presence of mind saved her life, for when she saw that the train could not be stopped she rolled down a steep embankment.

"MERELY MARY ANN" RELEASED FEB. 6

The Academy of Music, New York, will have as its attraction for the four days beginning Sunday, February 6, a picturization of Israel Zangwill's masterpiece, "Mercly Mary Ann," produced by William Fox under the direction of John G. Adolfi.

Vivian Martin, who has scored heavily in feature pictures, will be seen in the samc part, originally created for the legitimate stage.

SCENES FROM TWO COMING PATHE PRODUCTIONS—(LEFT) "THE LOVE TRAIL" AND (RIGHT) "LIGHT THAT FAILED"

UNIVERSAL COMPANIES IN EAST SPEEDING UP TO HIGH RATE OF PRODUCTION

DIRECTOR HENRY OTTO, who was transfered by President Laemmle, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, from Universal City to New York City to direct King Baggot, found that he could not begin directing Mr. Baggot until the first of February, as the script of "The Honorable Peter Stirling," which will be Mr. Baggot's next production, was just being prepared.

Not wishing to remain idle, Mr. Otto directed Dorothy Phillips and Allen Holubar in "Behind the Curtain," a one-reel drama which Mr. Otto completed in two days.

"Just Kitty" is the title of a one-reel drama in which Edith Roberts, the young Universal leading lady is featured by Director Robert Hill, and is equal to his "Trail of the Wild Wolf."

Mary Fuller is working in Wallace Irwin's "Thrown to the Lions," in which over one hundred people are used in the cafe scene. It is being given in as near to the original atmosphere as Mr. Irwin intended for his story, and Director Lucius Henderson is working day and night in getting the proper scenes.

It is expected that in another week the five reels will be finished. It will undoubtedly be released as a Red Feather feature.

Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby are putting on "Object, Matrimony!" It is a two-reel Universal comedy, in which Mr. Myers and Miss Theby are shown to great advantage.

King Baggot and Edna Hunter have just completed "Jim Slocum No. 48,393," a chauffeur story, written by Robert Hill and directed by Mr. Cummings for the regular Universal program.

"A CORNER IN COTTON" AND "THE PRICE OF MALICE" WILL BE RELEASED THE SAME WEEK

THREE distinct parts of the United States, in as many different directions, were used for the locales in the production of "A Corner in Cotton," a forthcoming Metro feature produced by the Quality Pictures Corporation.

The first scenes were photographed in California, the interiors made in New York and the final scenes made in and near Savannah, Georgia.

Marguerite Snow, the Metro artist, has the stellar role in this production, and is supported by an all-star cast, including Frank Bacon, Lester Cuneo, John J. Goldsworthy, William Clifford and Helen Dunbar.

"A Corner in Cotton" was produced under the direction of Fred J. Balshofer, one of the most capable producers in the country. Howard Truesdell co-operated in the direction. This production will mark an innovation in Metro's policy of releasing one five-reel feature every week.

"A Corner in Cotton" will be a special release, and will be presented to the public for the first time the same week that "The Price of Malice" is shown.

Marguerite Snow was last seen on the Metro program in "The Upstart," in which she was starred with George Le Guere. Before that she appeared in the stellar role in "Rosemary." She was also starred with Francis X. Bushman in "The Silent Voice," which marked her debut on the Metro program.

Frank Bacon, who has one of those inimitable roles in "A Corner in Cotton," which have made him famous, is now playing a stage engagement in New York. He furnishes most of the comedy in "The Cinderella Man," one of the most successful plays on Broadway this season.

"HAM" AND "BUD" IN "WINNING THE WIDOW," COMING KALEM COMEDY—ETHEL TEARE AND JACK McDERMOTT IN ANOTHER KALEM LAUGH-MAKER

LOOKING AT UNIVERSAL PRODUCTIONS: SCENES FROM "THE STRONG ARM SQUAD," "THE RECOILING VENGEANCE," AND

"DOLLY'S SCOOP." IN THE FIRST, FRANCIS FORD AND GRACE CUNARD ARE STARRED.

VITAGRAPHS FOR "VALENTINE WEEK" INCLUDE A WALLY VAN COMEDY, "YOU'RE NEXT"

THE Vitagraph releases for the week of February 14 include a sermon-drama, "The Writing on the Wall," in five parts; a Broadway Star Feature, "The Man He Used to Be," in three reels, and two one-reel comedies, "You're Next" and "In Arcadia."

Of particular interest at this time is "The Writing on the Wall," pertaining as it does to the inadequacy of fire prevention laws and the criminal neglect in their non-enforcement.

It is on this theme that the Vitagraph Film treats—and it presents it in a series of scenes in which the wealthy man, too late secs the "writing on the wall" and falls a victim to his own disregard of human life.

Irving Lawrence is a tenement house owner, whose wife and brothcr are scttlement workers. The wife is saddened by the knowledge that her husband is leading a double life.

Their only son gives a birthday party to children of the slums in one of his father's tenement houses, where he has caused fire escapes to be painted instead of replacing them.

Fire breaks out at the party and three hundred children, panic-stricken, jam the stairways and crowd the fire escapes, which break down under the unusual weight and send the human freight to death on the sidewalk far below.

Lawrence learns that his son is in the burning building and rushes in to save him. He is caught in the flames and dies, while his brother rescues the son and replaces him safe in his mother's arms. The film closes with a scenc auguring future happiness for the widow and the brother.

Joseph Kilgour, Naomi Childers and Virginia Pearson portray the principal roles in their usual capable way. Little Bobby Connelly is effective as the host of three hundred school children and other Vitagraphers give good accounts of themselves.

The film was produced by Tefft Johnson, written by William J. Hurlburt, and picturized by Marguerite Bertsch. It is a Blue Ribbon Feature released Monday, February 14.

An all-star cast of Vitagraphers will be seen in "The Man He Used to Be," released on Saturday, February 19. This is the second picture directed by Eugene Mullin.

Naomi Childers, William Dunn, Mary Maurice, Charles Kent, Kate Price, Belle Bruce and others are cast in the production.

The play tells of a man who break's his wife's heart and goes down to the very depths. He conquers his bad habits after a long fight and falls in love with another woman, who accepts him despite the "man he used to be."

"You're Next" is one of Wally Van's comedies with himself and Nitra Frazer in the leading roles. It is released on February 14.

Cutey is a barber and Polly is a manicure girl. Cutey neglects his business for love-making, is fired and sells safety razors in revenge.

The boss barber, in desperation, advertises for a lady barber and Cutey dresses up and gets the job. He creates a sensation but the wives of the customers raise objections. He is finally exposed and elopes with Polly.

"In Arcadia," releasd on February 18, features William Dangman in a onc-reel comedy produced under the direction of Courtland Van Deusen. Ethel Corcoran, Kate Price, William Dunn and others arc in the production.

The story tells of the efforts of a couple in Harlem to find Arcadia in the suburbs, believing the tale told them by a real estatc agent. They are sadly disappointed and return satisfied to their Harlem home.

"THE GAY LORD WARING" IS PICKED FOR KERRIGAN

Under the direction of Harry Carter, J. Warren Kerrigan is soon to be featured in the production of a five reel film adaptation of Houghton Townley's novel, "The Gay Lord Waring," the scenario for which has been adapted by F. McGrew Willis.

The story is one that is unusually well fitted for Kerrigan, and it is thought to bear promise of a greater success of any film in which he has appeared during recent months. Much of the story is laid in England, the home of Lord Waring.

Lois Wilson is to appear opposite Kerrigan in this offering and the remainder of the cast will be chosen from the best of the Universal City stock players.

Maude George, Bertram Grassby and Howard Holland will be among them. Their work in "Landon's Legacy" and the "Terence O'Rourke" adventures make introduction unnecessary.

While Carter will direct the action, he will do it under the supervision of Otis Turner who has been directing the action of Kerrigan since the latter's return from Lake Tahoe.

"SHRINE OF HAPPINESS" IS SECOND COLORED GOLD ROOSTER

"The Shrine of Happiness," the Pathé release for February 18, is the second Gold Rooster play to have been colored, "The Beloved Vagabond" having been the first.

The play was produced in southern California by Balboa, and the locations chosen were so beautiful as to lend themselves particularly well to Pathécolor.

Jackie Saunders is featured in the kind of a part which she has always preferred —that of an unsophisticated, ingenuous country girl.

GARRICK RUNS UP NORTH TO DIRECT CUTTING OF "THE DRIFTER"

Richard Garrick, supervising director of Gaumont stock companies, arrived in New York from the Jacksonville, Fla., winter studios Monday, January 24. He stayed only three days, but crowded a great deal of work in that time.

Mr. Garrick's main reason for the visit was a desire to direct the cutting of his latest Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe edition, "The Drifter." This unusual five-reel photodrama will be released February 7.

DRAMATIC SCENES FROM "I ACCUSE," GAUMONT-MUTUAL MASTERPICTURE DE LUXE, FEATURING ALEXANDER GADEN

LIFE IN ANCIENT BABYLON SHOWN IN "THE SOUL MARKET," A METRO

More than half a score of artists and experts were employed in the making of a Babylonian scene, which will be one of the features in the forthcoming Metro feature, "The Soul Market." Mme. Petrova, the gifted Polish actress, is starred in this production, and others in the notable cast include Wilmuth Merkyl, Arthur Hoops, Gypsy O'Brien, Evelyn Brent, Fritz de Lint. It is being produced by Popular Plays and Players.

The story of "The Soul Market" deals with a prima donna, who tires of the gay life which surrounds her, and she looks upon the Great White Way and its kindred environment as a "soul market."

She views present conditions as being practically the same as they were during the Babylonian period, when slaves were sold in the open marts to the highest bidders.

To allegorize this condition, the sale of twenty-five beautiful girls is shown in a Babylonian market, which is a faithful reproduction made from paintings and ancient drawings.

The girls are shown, scant of clothing and just out of the bath, being auctioned on the block.

To obtain a realistic and accurate setting, Director Francis J. Grandon called in experts on the subject, who made designs and pictures which were used to stage the scenes.

Virtus Scott, assistant director, spent two days in the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Astor Library with a sketch artist, who made drawings for Director Grandon's use.

FROHMAN COMPANY IN MOUNTAINS OF NORTH CAROLINA FOR CONSTRUCTION CAMP SCENES

The Frohman Amusement Company, filming "Then I'll Come Back to You," on Black Mountain, N. C., found exactly what the story called for in the way of a railroad construction camp.

The local lumber concern put a train at the disposal of the company and took them to the top of Black Mountain, where they could get the actual construction camps in the wonderful scenery of the Appalachian Range.

Jack Sherrill, in the part of Steve O'Mara, the chief engineer of the new railroad, was taken in some very realistic scenes on the actual construction work.

The story will have some of the best mountain locations that have been taken in the East, and the action fits in so well with the scenery that some splendid results will be obtained.

FRITZI BRUNETTE-SELIG READY MARCH 8

Fritzi Brunette, the emotional actress, makes her initial debut in the Selig Red Seal Play, "Unto Those Who Sin," to be released through V-L-S-E on March 8.

Miss Brunette enacts the role of a poverty-stricken working girl, who, lured by a life of luxury, finds that, after all, gold is gross and that the pleasures of the world are not worth the love of a pure man.

Miss Brunette, said to possess one of the most elaborate wardrobes in motion pictures, wears eighteen beautiful gowns in this production, and her work will certainly appeal. Her supporting cast is a most excellent one.

CRANE'S "LOOKING GLASS" NEARLY READY AT PARAGON

Director Frank Crane has nearly completed at the Paragon studios the picture "As in a Looking Glass," in which Kitty Gordon makes her World film debut. Everyone who has seen test runs of this film is enthusiastic over the way Miss Gordon "screens."

She is declared to be an absolute vision of loveliness and to stand the inexorable "close-up as well as of any girl in her teens.

FAIRBANKS CAST FOR ITALIAN COUNT IN A FINE ARTS

Douglas Fairbanks of the Fine Arts Eastern studios has been cast to appear as an Italian count in a new subject now being filmed by Alan Dwan. This photoplay, the name of which has not been decided upon, will be in the nature of a detective drama.

Fairbanks appears as the detective and discovers a band who are planning to overthrow the Italian government.

"THE DISCARD," AN ESSANAY THROUGH V-L-S-E, DEALS WITH INTERNATIONAL SWINDLERS

DEPARTING from the beaten tracks of story telling and furnishing an interesting exposition of the queer workings of Fate, "The Discard," Essanay's new five-reeler, released through V-L-S-E, is said to be a fascinating tale.

How a pair of international swindlers inadvertently attempt a coup with their own kin with tragic results to themselves, but with ultimate happiness to the unknowing victims is the main thread of the piece.

Virginia Hammand, for many years in the principal Frohman plays and who has had a career marked by keen versatility, will take the part of the woman of the world, accomplice of a "big time" confidence man who takes his spoils in hundred thousand dollar lots. Ernest Maupain will play this part.

The daughter of the woman swindler, Marguerite Clayton, is in boarding school in France, knows little of her mother and nothing regarding herself. The mother, hoping to keep her occupation from her daughter, deals with the girl through lawyers.

Thus when the daughter falls in love with the brother of a school mate, Harry Beaumont, consent to the marriage to the young American is given by the mother through her solicitors.

The scheming pair meet the young husband now a millionaire in America, and not knowing his identity, sue him for alienation of affections when he comforts the elder woman as Maupain feigns abuse.

He settles, fearing his young wife would not understand. The blackmail continues and the girl learns about it. She sends for her mother.

Then the elder woman discovers she has defrauded the husband of her daughter. She urges the girl to believe in the boy, instigates a reconciliation and departs. She turns her accomplices over to the police and ends her own life.

The young couple know nothing of the common identity of the mother and the woman swindler, when they read of her death.

Lawrence Windom is the director. This story was written by Charles Michelson, former editor of the Chicago American.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Feb. 3

DELAYS in production from the recent rainy weather caused the Rolin Film Company to make a decision to build a glass studio, which may be used in all kinds of weather. Plans and specifications for this are now being made, and the size will be 80 x 120.

The company expects to have work on the construction of this begun at a very early date.

General Manager D. Whiting and H. E. Roach, director, are now investigating various kinds of electric lighting apparatus, and expect to so equip the new producing plant that work can be continued day and night.

Harold Lloyd, the Lonesome Luke of the Rolin Pathé Phunphilms, prior to taking up theatrical work, was an electrical engineer, and is proving a great aid to the company in planning the new studio and also in securing decidedly attractive lighting effects for the films.

The first two-reel Kalem, "Hazards of Helen," has been completed, the previous releases having all been of a thousand-foot dimension. In this Helen Gibson had several narrow escapes from injury—once when she leaped from a locomotive to a stream below, and for another when Miss Gibson was to jump from one horse to another while the animals were running at full speed on a railroad track. Just as she was ready to leap the horse on which she was to alight slipped and fell.

WILLIE COLLIER AND MAE BUSH IN "GETTING MARRIED" (Triangle-Keystone)

The heroine of the railroad melodramas fell and was dragged several yards before rescued by members of the company. Some exceptional effects were secured by using locations damaged by the recent floods.

Kalem "Ham" Burlesque on War

The Kalem "Ham" comedy company has produced a war burlesque which was made under the working title of "Ham Agrees With Sherman."

The story for this was by Lloyd Hamilton and Bud Duncan, who serve as generals in the army. The manoeuvers are cause for some particularly good comedy situations.

Ham and Bud both will make an aeroplane ascension, in which the two generals discover the horrors of war, and continue to fight—but for peace. Norma Nichols is playing opposite Mr. Hamilton.

CONSTANCE COLLIER

The Signal "Girl and the Game" company are still at Las Vegas, Nevada, making desert scenes for the eleventh episode.

The company thought they would escape some of the undesirable weather by getting across the first range of mountains to the north of Los Angeles, but since going to Nevada practically half of the work has been delayed on account of weather similar to that Los Angeles has been experiencing.

H. E. Law, in charge of publicity, spent several days with the company last week, and discovered a new motion picture company being organized by Las Vegas capital.

According to reports, some of the stockholders believe another "Clansman" is to be made in their very midst.

Exterior Scenes for Four Early Keystones

Keystone companies have been able to secure sufficient exterior scenes to finish four early releases. The first Western comedy entitled "His Hereafter," to be made at the Keystone plant, has been finished, and is serving as a portion of the program at the Triangle Majestic.

Louise Fazenda is featured in this as the daughter of a Western town hotelkeeper, who wins the heart of a young man, Wayland Trash, who follows the advise of his Eastern sweetheart's father to go west and win a fortune.

HAROLD C. LLOYD AS "LONESOME LUKE" IN ROBIN-PATHE PLUMPHILMS

He loses all in a faro game, and goes out to hold up the stage, but finds that another bad man has beat him to the game, so he holds up the bad man.

Charlie Murray plays the part of the sheriff, with some brave exterior. The subject will have a wild chase by the posse, and some wonderful storm effects during the same.

"Cinders of Love" is the title for a rural fireman's picnic in which Chester Conklin is the chief, and pulls all the hero stuff in the rescue of lank, lean Slim Summerfield. Other principals are Smiling Billy Mason, Billie Bennett, Frank Alexander, and the direction is by Walter Wright.

Ford Sterling is soon to be seen in his favorite makeup, that of the chief of police in the subject "His Pride and Shame." The chief's son returns from college a regular Nancy, but he comes out of it after humiliating and dishonoring his brave father, and proves the real hero.

Bobbie Vernon appears as the son, and others in the cast are Guy Woodward, Juanita Hanson and Bobbie Dunn.

Dueling Stunts in "Love Will Conquer"

Some sensational dueling, in which stunts that would turn the French professionals green with envy, have been staged for the Keystone "Love Will Conquer."

SESSUE HAYAKAWA AND TSURU AOKI, THE NEW LASKY PLAY, FEATURING FANNY WARD, A SCENE FROM "TO HAVE AND TO HOLD"; CHARLOTTE WALKER AND TOM MEIGHAN IN "THE TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE"

Mack Swain and Polly Moran are the principals in this, who appear as cabaret entertainers. Others in the cast are Harry Gribbon, Fred Mace, Joe Swickard, Harry McCoy and Lillian Brockwell.

Sickness has greatly disorganized the Keystone staff. James Youngdeer, scenario writer; Clarence Badger, director, and Iva Crosthwaite have all been ill with pneumonia.

Juanita Hansen and Director Charles Avery are la grippe patients, and Anna Luther is recovering from a recent operation.

Scenario editor Hampton Del Ruth, and his assistant, Frederick Palmer, together with Jean Harvez and Harry Williams, are the only remaining members of the former scenario staff of ten. Walter Newman is a new man in this department, and William Hart and Jack Clavey are assistants in the publicity department.

Director R. A. Walsh, accompanied by his brother, George, James Marcus and Cameraman Georgis Benoit, all of the Fox producing staff, recently arrived, and are filming a subject not yet named.

The Oscar Apfel-Fox Company, headed by William Farnum and Dorothy Bernard, are marooned near Rio Vista, California, where they went for lumber region scenes. The railroads out of San Francisco have been damaged by floods, and train service has been discontinued for the present.

Roscoe Arbuckle Will "Vode" for Awhile

Director-General Mack Sennett has granted permission to Roscoe Arbuckle to accept a few weeks vaudeville booking, and negotiations for the fat man's appearance in vaudeville are being completed in New York. It is understood Arbuckle will be under the management of U. B. O.

Members of the Japanese Association of southern California filed with the city council a protest against the showing of the Lasky subject, "The Cheat."

When this protest was referred to the public welfare committee, which conducted the public hearing regarding the anti-censorship movement here, Councilwoman Lindsay, chairman, expressed the opinion that the showing of the film should not be barred because it might hurt the feelings of people of any particular race, as this procedure might result in barring a great portion of the films.

President Carl Laemmle, of the Universal Company, after spending a month in California, the greater part of the time at Universal City, has departed for his home in New York City.

Since Mr. Laemmle's last visit to the coast a number of important improvements have been made at the picture town, including the new electric lighted studio, which is the largest in the world, and several new buildings, outdoor stages and additions to the technical and laboratory departments.

Prior to his departure Mr. Laemmle warmly complimented the new general manager of the producing plant, H. O. Davis, who has been in charge now almost three months.

The special feature company of the American under the direction of Charles Bartlett, has just completed filming the five-reel Mutual masterpiece de luxe, "The Craving," and this week took up the filming of "The Bruiser."

Russell in Strenuous Role

The subject will feature William Russell, Charlotte Burton and Roy Stewart. Russell appears in the part of Big Bill Brawley, Miss Burton as an unsophisticated and uneducated girl of the city, and Mr. Stewart appears in the part of modest Tim Dorgan, the heavy.

This is a story of capital and labor, in which the two principals first appear as longshoremen. Both have varied careers, including a try at prizefighting, and later both become leaders.

Finally Dorgan is overcome as the result of double-crossing both capital and labor. Both of the leading actors are decidedly well qualified for this story in that they have had considerable physical training, and are considered very excellent boxers. Despite Roy Stewart's two hundred and ten pounds and his six feet two inches, he is worsted in bouts by William Russell. A number of the big scenes will consist of action pertaining to strikes and riots.

The scenario for the third De Wolfe Hopper fine arts subject has been prepared, and is entitled "The Philanthropist," in which Mr. Hopper will play the name part.

This story is by the same author, Chester Withey, who prepared the film adaptations of "Don Quixote" and the original scenario for "Sunshine Dad." The latter is now being completed.

Use E. and R. Jungle Lion

In many of the scenes the big trained lion Leo, of the E. & R. Jungle Film Company's zoo, plays a very important part. It required but a short time for the king of the jungle to become acquainted with Mr. Hopper, Fay Tincher and other members of the "Sunshine Dad" cast, and they have appeared in scores of scenes with him.

Leo took a decided liking to Director-General D. W. Griffith, and this proved of great aid in the making of films.

The cast selected for this coming production includes Fay Tincher, Marguerite Marsh, Max Davidson, Chester Withey and Jack Leonard.

Director Alan Dwan and Douglas Fairbanks, who have been in the East for the making of two Fine Arts subjects, have returned to the Los Angeles studio.

While in the East Mr. Dwan directed the production of "Betty of Greystone," with Dorothy Gish and Owen Moore and George Fawcett, and also made a comedy which has not been titled and which features Douglas Fairbanks.

The Fine Arts Company, producing "Marja of the Steppe," under the direction of William Christy Cabanne, is home from Truckee, California, with bigger stories of winter weather than have come back to the film colony so far this season.

Getting the various versions of the players together brings out the fact that the snow was twenty-two feet deep in places, and the mercury dropped to twelve degrees below zero during one night they were there.

The cast for this picture, which features Lillian Gish, includes Frank Bennett, Pearl Elmore, A. D. Sears, Walter Long, M. G. Blue and others, and the camera work was in charge of Billy Fildon.

Mrs. Wood Completes "Martha's Vindication"

"Martha's Vindication," the Fine Arts subject from original scenario by Ella Wood, has been completed. This features Norma Talmadge, Tully Marshall, Secna Owen and Ralph Lewis. A very important part is taken by Josephine Crowell.

Some new photographic effects were worked out for this by Cameraman Frank

Good, who is responsible for the excellent effects in "The Price of Power."

Studio gossip has it that a good-sized fortune will be spent in the filming of the first Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree subject.

Immediately after the contract with Mr. Tree was made, a research department of the Fine Arts scenario staff began the work of securing definite information pertaining to costumes, scenery and props necessary for this production.

English representatives were secured to continue the work in London libraries and museums. Hundreds of photographs of plates, costumes and articles needed in sets have been secured, and will greatly aid Director John Emerson and the producing staff to make this subject technically correct.

More than three hundred motion picture people attended the third annual ball of the Static Club of America, held Friday evening, January 28.

The grand march was lead by Thomas H. Ince and Anna Held. The program began at 10.30, and consisted of twenty-four numbers.

The arrangements for the ball were completed by a committee composed of Ralph Merollo, Charles G. Rosher and Harry Gersted.

H. L. "Buck" Massey was floor manager, and assisted by J. D. Jennings, George W. Hill, E. J. Vallejo, Fred L. Granville, R. D. Armstrong and K. G. McLean.

The reception committee was composed of E. G. Ullman, Harris N. Engisn, Albert E. Cawood, Ira H. Morgan, Jas. A. Crosby and W. F. Alder.

Prominent Film Colonists at Ball

Among the prominent members of the film colony present at this ball were: Mr. and Mrs. David Horsley, Mr. and Mrs. P. D. Gold, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Allen, Raymond B. West, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Rawlinson, Francis Ford, Grace Cunard, Edna Maison, Beverly Griffith, "Daddy" Charles Manley, Ella Hall, Zona Landowska, Pierre Hungate, Adona Faveri, Neal Burns, Sessue Hayakawa, Turi Aoki, Judge Roy L. Chesbra and wife, Harold C. Lloyd, Beebe Daniels, Glenn Cavender, Ray Gallagher, Chester Conklin, Dorothy Abril, Gus Inglis, Gean Lowry, Tom Mix, Victoria Forde, Harry Schumm, Rhea Haines, and all members of the Static Club.

Press representatives present were Clemensaw Pope, husband of "Mollie of the Movies"; Connie Miles, Mabel Condon, Clark Irvine and J. C. Jessen.

Not to exceed five new subjects were taken up this week by the twenty-six directors of the Universal producing staff, which practically tells the story for every organization on the coast.

California weather boosters are again overworking the poor word "unusual," and every Native Son will say, "the like of this weather was never known before." But that does not compensate the motion picture companies for the great loss occasioned by the idleness of their players and directors.

Exterior scene-making has practically been at a standstill since December 29, and a number of companies have interior scenes made for two or three subjects, which are being held up until the exteriors can be "shot."

The Lynn Reynolds Universal company is filming "The Disappearance of Mary Paige," which will consist of two reels. Myrtle Gonzalez is featured in this as a bride-to-be with a drug habit.

Learning of the contempt her prospective husband has for a dope fiend, she resolves to effect a cure, and engages the services of a former sweetheart, now a doctor.

By the aid of her aunt the girl is kidnapped and taken to a lonely place, where she is constantly treated by the doctor.

The aunt is called away and intends sending a nurse, but this is found impossible, and the doctor performs the duty with the result that the love of former years is rekindled, and he becomes the groom.

Frederick Church appears as the doctor, Val Paul the groom-to-be, and Helen Wright the aunt.

"Too Many Wives," Joker

"Too Many Wives" is the title of a Joker comedy being made by Allen Curtis from a scenario by Aaron E. Bishop.

The comedy situations are caused by the arrival of three young ladies to meet three gentlemen at the home of one who is expecting his uncle and wishes to make a good impression in order to secure an inheritance.

Another Joker comedy just completed by Director Roy Clements is entitled "When Bosco Disappeared," Bosco being the world's greatest magician and hypnotist, who attempts his magic on the belles of a tank Western town, and the cowboys shoot up the show.

George Barnes, Ed. Sedgwick and Victor Potel play the principal parts.

"When Dreams Come True" is a two-reel melodrama with scenes laid in India, being staged by Director Francis Ford, who plays the leading part, that of the heavy, with Adoni Fovieri and Jack Holt as the other principals.

Story of a Jealous Husband

It is the story of a jealous husband, who is a doctor, and refuses to go to the aid of natives suffering from a dreaded plague because he fears that in his absence his wife will receive attentions from a former acquaintance, who is also stationed in the city.

In a dream he has a vision of the acquaintance coming to the house, and the doctor bottles a viper, which he places in the room where it may bite the visitor. Instead the wife is bitten.

When he awakes he finds that his wife had abandoned him because of his cowardice to aid the natives, and he becomes ill and dies of the fever.

The film adaptation of the Franklin Hall and Lucy Paton story, "The Ill-born," has been completed in five reels at Universal City, and features Tyrone Power in the role of a district attorney, who believes his greatest purpose in life is to perpetuate the race.

The district attorney, after years of married life, during which time he thought his wife physically deficient, learns that she, together with scores of other women of society, have sought and secured the aid of a noted physician, that their lives should remain childless.

This information is secured from the physician when the attorney learns of an instance in which the death of a woman was caused. Wild with rage, the attorney takes the doctor's ledger containing charges for professional service of this character to his home for the purpose of confronting his wife with the charges.

There he finds his wife hostess of a number of women at tea, and, by referring to the ledger, sees that all have practiced the unlawful.

GLIMPSES OF LIFE AT THE FINE ARTS STUDIO, HOLLYWOOD: (Left to Right) "SHERRY'S," THE STUDIO CAFE—EXTRA EMPLOYMENT DEPARTMENT—FINE ARTS BARBER SHOP

All the women are driven from the home, and the wife is made the defendant in a state case brought by the attorney to dissuade the women from continuing the practice.

The part of the wife is taken by Helen Riaume, who played with Tyrone Power in a number of legitimate stage productions.

Racing with National Suicide

This subject, though daring in theme, has been handled by the producers, the Smalleys, parties who have seen the film say, in a very forceful and convincing manner that will cause it to become a great feature.

The Jacques Jaccard Company is filming a two-reel subject, "The Wedding Guest," adapted from the Lucia Chamberlain story in a recent magazine.

Scenes for this are laid in California in 1878. The subject is of the nature of a Western, with Harry Carey and Olive Golden as principals.

Dave Markowitz, manager of the California Universal Los Angeles Exchange, during the past week had considerable trouble with the local Motion Picture Board of Censors, who after passing the three-reel subject "Across the Rio Grande," decided to withdraw their decision and insisted upon another screen examination.

They demanded the surrender of the film claiming eliminations of the film had not been made. Manager Markowitz advised the board that he had complied with their ruling which was sufficient under the law, and that the film would continue to be shown.

An attempt was made to stop the showing at the Grand theatre on Main street, but this attempt was unsuccessful. The police took charge of the film, at the order of the Board of Censors, for a few hours, when it was returned to the exchange.

The annual election of officers of the Film Exchangemen's Board of Trade of Los Angeles, was held during the past week, at which time M. L. Lewis, manager of the Progressive Exchange, was elected president; Harry Lustig, Los Angeles Metro Exchange, vice-president; B. E. Loper, manager Pathé Exchange, second vice-president, and C. J. Morley, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Morley succeeds himself and is the manager of the board.

Negotiations which have been pending for the past several months resulted during the past week in the purchase by the New York Motion Picture Corporation of thirty-one additional acres of land adjoining the original twelve purchased for studio site at Culver City.

With the announcement of this purchase came the statement from Thomas H. Ince that the additional tract would be used for exterior settings, and that in all probability two additional stages would be erected, making a total of eleven.

The recent purchase consists of level land particularly adapted for the building of street scenes and villages.

At the Inceville studios, producing companies were hampered for the want of this kind of land, as at that place hills cover every portion of the property with the exception of the plateau half mile back from the studio, and on top of a steep elevation that rises to approximately five hundred feet.

CARL LAEMMLE BIDDING GOOD-BYE TO VICE-PRESIDENT DAVIS AT UNIVERSAL CITY

Before this purchase was made arrangements were practically completed for a railway to build tracks to the studio grounds, and for the opening of a sixty foot boulevard along the full length of the property, this boulevard to extend to Washington Boulevard, the main thoroughfare which is traversed coming from or going to the studio from Los Angeles.

Four Stages Completed at Culver City

The present Culver City studio now has four stages completed together with scene docks, wardrobe, dressing rooms, property building and film vault.

Two important additions to this producing plant will be a hot house for the protection of flowers, shrubs and trees used in pretentious sets, and a natatorium with a capacity of more than one hundred thousand gallons which may be used for water scenes, or around which miniature coast cities may be built.

An Inceville stage last week contained a most elaborate court room setting measuring 80 x 110 feet, which was especially built for a subject Director Charles Giblyn made with Bessie Barriscale as the star, and William Desmond and Franklin Ritchie as principals of the supporting cast.

Louise Glaum, who has appeared in a number of Ince subjects in the role of a vampire, is to be starred in a coming feature wherein she plays such a part.

Scenario for this is now being prepared by C. Gardner Sullivan, and production will be commenced within a few days, as soon as the costumes especially designed for this part are completed.

To use the words of the Ince publicity department, these creations are to be "the most weird and uncanny ever seen on the screen." Charles Ray, Jack Standing and Howard Hickman will play in support of Miss Glaum, and Raymond B. West will be in charge of the direction.

The subject which has been in the process of filming since early in 1915 at Inceville, is now said to be completed. This is referred to at the studio as "The War Picture," and in the filming more than a hundred thousand feet of negative was exposed.

This subject is now being cut at the studio, and it is expected that it will have its first showing some time in March in New York. Hershel Mayall, and Howard Hickman are said to have the most prominent parts in this subject.

For this picture a most elaborate setting consisting of several blocks of buildings of a national capital including the Federal buildings was built.

William S. Hart, who has appeared in Westerns practically throughout his motion picture career, is next to play the principal role in a sixteenth century romance of a decidedly elaborate and spectacular nature.

The story for this photoplay has been prepared by Monty Katterjohn, and Enid Markey, Dorothy Dalton, Joseph J. Dowling and Walter Whitman will support Mr. Hart.

Thomas H. Ince will personally direct a greater portion of this subject with the cooperation of Charles Swickard. Following the making of this subject Mr. Hart will appear as a minister in a strong drama of the Kentucky mountain district.

SIGNAL FILM STUDIO SAR AFTER ITS TOUR THROUGH THE FLOODED LOS ANGELES DISTRICT

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

"I'M willing to take chances, and I'm willing to do anything for the sake of realism," said Agnes Vernon (we quote the University City facilitator of publicity) and as she said it she splashed another gob of blue and yellow paint on her face.

This same source yields the information that it is the custom for a certain director of a certain company to spray his actors after every day's work. This announcement should quiet a growing uneasiness on the part of certain audiences.

At 2.30 p.m., week before last, Lionel Barrymore stood before a motion picture theatre in Broadway. The paper outside announced "Lionel Barrymore, Inside." On further examination he discovered that the picture was a reissue of a film made four years before, and he decided to step in and see what changes time had wrought. So he loosened his belt, dug down a few feet and got a dime, and soon was one of the spectators. The picture showed him in all his old corpulence, made up as an aged seaman, and he was astounded. Right in front of him sat a couple almost as astonished. "That Lionel Barrymore!" exclaimed one. "Why I saw him week before last and he was as thin as the number eleven on a door. How could he get so fat so soon?" "Dissipation," suggested her companion.

"Rats," murmured Barrymore, "I'm going out and get a drink."

We quote from The Pink Sheet, an enterprising, but not entirely disinterested organ, of Dallas, Texas: "Did you read what Peter Milne said on page 562 in MOTION PICTURE NEWS of January 29, regarding the L-Ko two-reel comedy, 'Firing the Butler and the Butler Fired?' He said it was great and congratulated Mr. Lehrman on it. When Milne says it's so, it must be so, therefore, get ready for a 'knock-out.'" Rare good sense, that. Yet, in the same column of the same sheet which has exercised such excellent judgment, we find a little couplet lifted bodily from this department, and without credit, at that. Not that we seek credit, for Arthur James wrote the couplet; yet some acknowledgments should be made.

Some of this language which has been trickling out of the World Film publicity offices is explained. A visitor to these offices last week found John Goldfrap and Dick Schayer squabbling over a volume of "Crabb's English Synonyms." The book bore every evidence of having been well used.

Things are looking up for the light-fingered order. For several months their hauls have been confined to pearl necklaces, diamond studs, watches and gold bullion, but last week one, a pioneer in his line, has rifled the automobile of Sidney Drew, and obtained 100 motion picture scenarios! Think of that! The lucky man's family will be provided for, and should be real comfortable through the long cold snap which is predicted for us; and besides, he will have the laugh on his competitors, whose efforts have yielded them nothing more valuable than jewelry, or, at the most, anthracite coal. Not that this enterprising thief originated the idea of stealing scenarios. Oh! no.

IRENE HOWLEY

We now flash on the screen a picture of Irene Howley, whose last appearance until to-day was in Metro's "A Yellow Streak," with Lionel Barrymore. Even the Metro officials admit this is one of the best pictures they have ever made, and the critics and public appear to have supported their contention.

The picture of Miss Howley is offered to show that a photograph is often the most effective way to prove a point. On page 80 of MOTION PICTURE NEWS Studio Directory Miss Howley is listed as a character actress. This was an error—one of those errors which sometimes do creep in—and was not exactly fair to Miss Howley, who has played ingenue leads in many Famous Players and Metro subjects. There is no more convincing way of acknowledging our error than to print Miss Howley's picture.

We have also devoted two weeks' pay to hiring detectives to find out just who made the error. Although we wouldn't mention it for the world, we rather suspect the Metro publicity department as being at fault.

Maybe soon we will have an Alma Hanlon theatre; who knows? Miss Hanlon, who recently joined the Fox forces, has begun to save her pennies. She seems to recall how there was built a Maxine Elliott theatre, an Eltinge theatre, a George M. Cohan theatre, and she has it figured out that these people simply saved their pennies.

The Fox press department special messengers that Miss Hanlon saves between 200 and 250 pennies every week.

"Colors influence the mind and body. Dark colors exert a deleterious influence (though this is not always true), and light colors a healthful, constructive influence. In evidence of the general truth of this statement, so far as the physical being is concerned, peruse any statistical medical report.

"You will note that disease is found where there is darkness, health where there is light. Also you will find a higher degree of mentality among those who reside in light quarters than you will among those who live and work where it is dark."

We quote Virginia Pearson, who is employed in the Fox studios. They tell us she is now writing a book along these lines. Next week we hope to have her views on the mental and physical influence of a pousse cafe.

We trust our readers will not be disappointed at the lack of news regarding Kitty Gordon's back. We were too busy to cover it this week.

Discussion is rife as to whether California or the East is the better place to build studios. De Wolf Hopper, now with the Fine Arts Studios at Los Angeles, declares for California. His reason may be found in this daily program, submitted by the publicity department:

"Eight a. m.—Receives 'phone message from studio that rain prevents work during the morning; 10 to 11 a. m.—plays with William Hopper, aged nine months; 11:30 to 1.00—billiards; 1.00 p. m.—receives 'phone message from studio that there will be no work during the afternoon; 5 p. m.—'phone message that there will be no work the following day if it rains."

Pretty soft, eh, De Wolf?

FORREST PICTURE IS READY

"At the Bottom of the Sea," released by the Forrest Film Company, Philadelphia, with New York offices at 220 West Forty-second street, Room 1018, was on the Strand, New York, program of last week.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

DENVER EXCHANGES, AFTER LARGER BOOKINGS, ARE NOT DISAPPOINTED; SCREEN CLUB ORGANIZING

CARL STEARN, manager of the Bluebird Photoplay Exchange in Denver, reports that the Bluebirds are making a clean sweep in the inter-mountain territory.

Manager Stearn is doing a lot of advertising for the pictures, and, as the Tabor Grand Opera House will be the Bluebird first-run house, Manager Boyd, of the Tabor, and Manager Stearn are confident of the success of the productions, now that "Secret Love," featuring Helen Ware, played to capacity business.

Charles Gilmore, manager of the World Film Exchange, of Denver, reports that the local censor ordered him to cut twenty feet of the Alice Brady feature, "The Ballet Girl."

He also reports that the police of Colorado Springs ordered Manager J. W. McMahan of the Pike Theatre to rearrange his lobby display of the Alice Brady feature, "The Rack."

The police threatened to take McMahan's license, but when the matter was placed in court the police could not justify their demand.

The Universal Exchange of Denver, under management of Louis Goldstein, reports that on Monday, January 31, the Denver branch of the alumni of the Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa, met at the Universal exchange to review five reels of commencement exercises and athletic meets of the college.

Some of the most prominent men of Denver were present, including Carlos M. Cole, superintendent of the schools of Colorado.

W. S. Rand, manager of the Triangle Exchange, of Denver, reports all features booked up solid until April 1. On Monday, February 7, Rand will leave Denver for Pueblo, Canon City, Leadville, Grand Junction, Montrose and several other towns in quest of new business.

The United Film Service reports that the picture shows in Cimarron, Kansas and several other towns nearby have been closed by the authorities on account of a scarlet fever epidemic. This was also true of a few towns in the southern part of Colorado.

Manager L. D. Purdy of the United reports that R. C. Gardner, new manager of the Salt Lake office of the Universal, has greatly increased the business of that office.

Paramount Exchange is very anxious to know if their challenge has been accepted. As stated in a previous issue of the NEWS, Manager Cohn claims to furnish the smallest town having a moving picture show with two features per week. The name of the town is Venadian, Colorado, with a population of seventy-five people. The picture show seats seventy-five people, and H. R. Mosley, the manager, is making money.

Manager Scott, of the Mutual office, reports "The Girl and the Game" rapidly increasing in bookings. The Mutual office of Los Angeles wired Manager Scott to supply Globe and Miami, Arizona, with films until train service from California is back on schedule time.

Manager W. C. LeMaster, of the new Isis Theatre, Victor, Colorado, dropped in to see Manager Scott after purchasing an entire new equipment in Denver for his theatre.

The Kleine-Edison Exchange, under management of H. H. Buckwalter, has placed first-run Kleine-Edison features on the program of the Tabor Grand Opera House in Denver. Buckwalter also reports a steady increase in bookings.

The General Film Exchange, under management of W. H. Cree, is receiving new business each day through Fair and Heineman, his roadmen. Cree is a live wire and knows how to get the business.

The Pathe Exchange reports a big increase in bookings on "The Red Circle." This picture is making good in that territory, and Manager Knappen claims it will be a record-breaker.

S. Carmichael, manager of the Fox Exchange, has just returned to Denver from a short trip. We all know that Carmichael is a man who never returns without new business.

The Screen Club is being organized in Denver by H. T. Nolan, of the Nolan Motion Picture Supply Company of Denver, and is to be formed of exhibitors and exchangemen; and, in fact, anyone connected with the motion picture business in that territory.

The object of this club is to promote social affairs and also to combat the different laws that are dealing unjustly with the motion business in general in that territory.

KEAN, EXPERT CAMERAMAN, OPENS EXCHANGE IN VANCOUVER

ANOTHER new exchange, opened in Vancouver, B. C., this week, is fathered by A. D. Kean, Vancouver's enterprising camera man, who is known throughout the province as "The Cowboy Photographer." Mr. Kean has accumulated a large stock of special and scenic films since entering the camera end of the business, and has also taken pictures of all local events of interest.

Since the outbreak of the war he has made rather a specialty of photographing the British Columbia battalions. These films are especially valuable on account of the fact that an enormous number of the soldiers shown have already been reported killed.

Two reels of these military pictures are booked to be shown at the Orpheum Theatre in Vancouver next week. Another interesting subject called "Big Game in B. C.," previously four thousand feet long, but now cut down to two interesting reels, is at the Rex Theatre here this week. Although the Kean films have at times been booked through local exchanges handling regular programs, they have not been pushed, and it was to correct this condition that Kean's Canada Film Exchange was established.

Mr. Kean maintains a complete laboratory in connection with his photographic work, with all facilities for developing, tinting and toning, printing, titling and enlarging.

The completeness of the little plant may be judged by the fact that an exceptionally good printing press has been purchased for setting up titles. Mr. Kean has a big Ernemann camera, and a slightly smaller Williamson, and has installed an Edison projection machine for the convenience of his patrons.

It has been a hard fight, but the doughty camera man has at last achieved the satisfaction of establishing what is thought to be the only strictly Canadian exchange in existence, with all subjects photographed and finished in Canada.

STEALS 3 REELS OF COMEDY FROM MUTUAL

Three reels of comedy, "The Scoop at Belleville," a Thanhouser; "The Queen of the Band," a Reliance, and "Putting Papa to Sleep," a Novelty, were stolen from the Mutual Film Corporation's Chicago exchange recently by a youth who represented himself as the employe of one of the big downtown theatres.

ERDMANN GOES TO VICTOR IN CLEVELAND

George W. Erdmann, former manager of the Bijou Dream, Elmwood and Columbia theatres, Buffalo, N. Y., has been appointed manager of the Victor Film exchange in Cleveland, which distributes the Universal features.

QUAKER CITY BOOKS LARGE ADVANCE ORDERS FOR BURTON HOLMES "TRAVELOGUES"

OSCAR BOWER, the new manager of the Famous Players Philadelphia exchange, finds himself a very busy man, as the business on all Paramount subjects is rapidly increasing around his territory.

The largest advance bookings in the history of the exchange have come in on the new Burton Holmes "Travelogues," the first release of which will be shown at the Stanley theatre.

Much enthusiasm was manifested over the newspictures taken at Atlantic City last week, under the direction of Publicity Manager Oscar Morgan, who took the Philadelphia Paramount cameraman to the shore for this enterprise of the Quaker City office.

The Colonial at Atlantic, where this reel was shown first, was mobbed by an eager audience.

Herbert Given, on his recent trip through the state, found conditions in the trade quite encouraging. Though primarily a tour of investigation, the magnetic Herbert incidentally managed to land a goodly share of new Paramount trade.

George Mann, formerly connected with the Stanley company in Philadelphia, now manager of the Famous Players Washington exchange, spent a few days in Philadelphia last week on his way to New York for a conference with Paramount.

The Interstate Film Exchange is exceedingly attractive since the alterations have been made. The Fairmount side shows the already well-known large Bluebird in natural colors poised in flight, on the window.

Already in the two weeks that the Bluebird releases have been on the market, the Philadelphia office has captured twenty-seven accounts. All February dates are taken and March is going fast. In fact, forty days' solid bookings are on hand.

The home of the Interstate, at 1304 Vine street, houses not only the Universal and Fairmount offices, but the Eagle Projection Film Company, all under V. C. Carrick. There is also the Philadelphia Film Exchange around the corner which belongs to the Interstate.

So with all these local irons in the fire, to say nothing of other exchanges in his large territory, Mr. Carrick has his hands full, but he is always equal to any amount of responsibility that comes his way.

C. G. Powell, of the Mutual, says the censors in one week gave three releases, comprising seven thousand feet of film, their disapproval. Thanhouser's "Betrayed," the Beauty comedies of "Some Night" and "Billy Van Deusan's Wedding Eve" were the banned subjects.

J. W. Pope, of the Masterpicture department, has been summoned to court because the censors claim he failed to cut out some eliminations they had ordered. The trial will be held before Magistrate Hoag at the Twelfth and Callowhill streets court.

George Bennethum, having severed his connection with the Fairmount Feature Film Company, is now devoting all his energies to the Kline Poster Rental and Booking Agency, which is about to move from one floor at 1305 Vine to a whole building at 1307 Vine, especially erected for the fast growing business of the company.

ABRAMS SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE FOR KNICKERBOCKER FEATURES

Jacques Earl Abrams, one of the most generally known men in the moving picture business, has become the special representative of the Knickerbocker Star Features and Vim Comedies.

Mr. Abrams is a man who knows the picture business from "Script to Screen." He has had about five years' experience as exhibitor, writer, actor, director, technical director and general representative of important companies.

Several vaudeville acts are credited to Mr. Abrams, the most popular being "Cloak Models," which was played in prominent variety houses in the country; also "Sunshine Girls," "Dream Girls" and a number of others.

Mr. Abrams graduated from acting before the camera at the Balboa studios, becoming a director, and finally technical director for that company.

Directly on signing with the Knickerbocker Star Features, Mr. Abrams left for Boston, from there he will tour the middle West and Southwest.

The Knickerbocker Star Features and the Vim Comedies are released on the General Film Program, Thursdays and Fridays of each week.

Mr. Abrams will confer with exhibitors generally, endeavor to learn their wants and announce to them the future plans of his company.

HOLAH SHOWS DAUGHTER OF CYRIL MAUDE HER FATHER IN A PATHE

Manager C. E. Holah, of the Pathé Cincinnati office, was the means of giving Marjorie Maude her first chance in many months to see her famous father, Cyril Maude. Mr. Holah learned that the young actress was going to Cincinnati with the Paganini company, and straightway invited her to visit his show room and see her father in the Gold Rooster play, "The Greater Will."

He also invited George Arliss, of the same company; Paul Gordon, Miss Maude's fiancee; Chares Wiegel, Cincinnati's leading exhibitor, and many others. All accepted, and the showing was most successful. Miss Maude was a most interested observer.

Mr. Holah expects Mr. Maude himself to be his guest within a few weeks as "Grumpy" will play in his city at an early date.

Mr. Holah some weeks ago had C. Aubrey Smith, the star of "John Glayde's Honor," another Gold Rooster play, in his show room to see himself in his own picture.

FOX OPENS SUB-OFFICE IN NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The Fox Film Corporation announces the opening of a sub-office branch in New Haven, Conn., to supply the various exhibitors of Connecticut.

This office is located in Poli's Theatre building, 23 Church street, and its manager is Richard Wernick. It is a unit of the Fox Film Corporation's New York exchange, and is made necessary by the rapid growth of the company's business in that territory.

There are now twenty-three branch offices in as many cities, exclusively the William Fox organization and three sub-offices.

These are exclusive of the corporation's two Canadian branches in Montreal and Toronto and branches already opened in two South American countries, Brazil and Argentine Republic, and the Australian branch at Sydney, and the general European headquarters of the company at Savoy Mansions, London, England.

BAKER IN CHARGE OF BLUEBIRD FILMS IN ST. LOUIS

S. J. Baker, who was formerly manager of the Fox Film Corporation at 3632 Olive street, St. Louis, has been put in charge of Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., at the Universal Exchange, 2116 Locust street, St. Louis, and Sam Shurman, a well-known and experienced film man, has been made traveling representative for the Bluebird Photoplays.

The St. Louis branch of the Universal company has established a publicity department, with a view to helping exhibitors in their advertising campaigns by assisting them in preparing copy, and giving advice generally to help box office receipts.

Any exhibitor, whether a user of Universal pictures or not, may avail himself of this service.

FOUR DAYS RAIN AFFECTS MISSOURI SHIPMENTS

On account of a four days' heavy rainstorm in Missouri the last week in January, many of the film exchanges were unable to ship films to outlying districts because of washouts and other railroad troubles.

Telephone connections were cut off, and telegrams were accepted subject to delay.

Many out-of-town theatres that are supplied from the St. Louis exchanges were dark for a night or two on account of late trains, or the inability to telephone their orders into the exchanges.

After the rain stopped a heavy coating of ice prevented quick repairs, and the better part of a week passed before things had resumed their normal course.

LEVY IN CHARGE OF FOX AT ST. LOUIS

At the Fox Film Exchange, on Olive street, St. Louis, Joseph Levy has taken charge, upon the resignation of Mr. Baker. Mr. Levy went to St. Louis from Omaha, Neb., where he had been connected with the Fox company.

PINK SHEET BULLETIN WITH RED-BLOOD IDEAS FOR PALE PUBLICITY

Jake Mitchell, publicity man for the Laemmle Film Service in Omaha, recently wrote personal letters to the five hundred exhibitors on his mailing list, asking them whether they appreciated a weekly pink sheet bulletin he was publishing and sending to them.

He received over two hundred replies saying in every instance that the exhibitors were interested, liked the sheets and favored their continuance.

The sheets advertise in a breezy manner the week's films and the serials. They boost publicity, urge the use of newspapers and plenty of posters, carry a column of letters from exhibitors, show the week's releases and their reviews, give a few jokes, advertise second-hand machines or other special articles on sale at the exchange, and tell of booster work in every department.

NOLA INVITES EXCHANGEMEN TO NAME FILM

New Orleans exchange men and exhibitors were guests recently of the Nola Film Company, which projected at the Crescent theatre their initial five-part production. This picture is as yet unnamed, and approximately five thousand invitations were sent out to local people, mostly the film colonists, to view the picture at the Crescent and later suggest its title. Approximately 2,200 persons responded to the invitation sent out by President W. M. Hannon, and packed the Crescent to its capacity.

The Nola company but recently returned from Gadsden, Ala., where most of the scenes were taken. They encountered freezing weather and many dangers in the vicinity of Noccalula Falls, where some exciting scenes were snapped.

HODUPP, IN SYRACUSE, CONSULTS WITH BEVINS

V. H. Hodupp, the newly-appointed division manager of the General Film Company, was recently in Syracuse, N. Y., in consultation with Mr. Bevins. Albany manager of the General Film Company; Mr. Johnson, the Syracuse manager, and Thomas Dooley, manager of the Greater New York Film Rental Company.

Mr. Hodupp announced that the Syracuse office of the General Film Company has taken over all contracts of the Greater New York Film Rental Company, and that the General Film Company will have new quarters in Syracuse.

No announcement has been made as to what change might occur owing to the consolidation.

MERIT EXCHANGE REPORTS

Impelled by the success of "Forbidden Fruit" as a box office attraction, The Merit Film Corporation, the exchange distributing Ivan Feature Productions in New York, reports a large number of bookings on "A Fool's Paradise," the new Ivan's feature, in advance of its release.

KANSAS CITY TERRITORY FEELS EFFECTS OF STORM AND RAIN

P. J. HALL, manager of the Western Film Exchange, Kansas City, has taken on a line of supplies. He represents the Swanson interests of Denver, and reports that he is in a position to supply all motion picture theatre needs.

A branch of the New Film Corporation of New York has been opened at Kansas City in the Gloyd building. It is in charge of Walter L. Rupert, an old film man.

It will be the endeavor of the manager of this branch to put out fifty-five features and four single reels that he has on hand.

Charles W. Harden, Kansas City manager for the Fox Film Corporation, returned last week from a trip to Chicago, where he attended a conference of branch managers. He went back enthusiastic about the prospects for the Fox productions for the coming year.

The recent cold weather together with the heavy rains that have visited the Kansas City section have caused much loss of time by delaying shipments of films to exhibitors.

In many instances it was necessary for exchanges to have special messengers deliver film to their customers. Another cold snap is now upon that section and the same trouble is again expected.

J. D. Thatcher is now on the road for the Western Film Exchange. He will cover the larger portion of the Kansas City territory.

VANCOUVER AND WINNIPEG MEN TO HANDLE V-L-S-E SUBJECTS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

A VERY important addition to the film exchanges already doing business in Western Canada was made last week, when negotiations were completed for turning over the distribution of all V-L-S-E subjects in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba to a corporation about to be formed by leading moving picture men of Vancouver and Winnipeg.

On January 27 the deal involving this transfer was finally consummated at Vancouver, through Tom North, manager of the Big Four office in Seattle.

The new distributing company is being formed by W. P. Dewees, managing director of the Rex Amusement Company, of Vancouver; J. A. Schuberg, of the Province Theatre Company, of Winnipeg, and W. P. Nichols, general manager of the National Amusement Company of Vancouver.

The latter company controls ten houses in Vancouver, Victoria and neighboring cities.

The V-L-S-E productions have for some time been shown in various cities of Western Canada, but have been imported for this purpose from the Big Four Seattle office, to which they were returned after playing a circuit of houses extending from Victoria to Winnipeg.

This service was inaugurated by W. P. Dewees of the Rex Theatre in Vancouver, and the eastern end of the business has been attended to by Mr. Schuberg.

Although no definite plans have been announced as yet, the new company will undoubtedly enter the field in an aggressive manner.

NEW ORLEANS IS MADE CAPITAL FOR GENERAL FILM IN SOUTH

FOLLOWING J. E. Farrell's visit to Orleans a week ago, it was announced shortly after the Southern division manager's departure that New Orleans has become the General Film Company's capital for the South.

Heretofore all the supplies for the Southern district have been purchased in Memphis, but the business has been given such an impetus by Manager H. G. Morrow and Bert King, his assistant, both of whom came from Jacksonville a short time ago, that the transfer of the purchasing point became advisable. Hereafter the money will come through that port, to use marine terms, to the general satisfaction of the local branch and everybody else concerned in New Orleans.

V-L-S-E, which has been quartered in a small temporary office at 316 St. Charles street, has moved to 342 Baronne street, in the heart of the Exchange row and directly opposite the General Film offices.

The new place will be much more commodious. R. King Evans, manager of the branch, who was brought here from Dallas, is an old hand at the legitimate game, but virtually a youngster, although a hustling one, at the motion picture business.

He comes direct from the Dallas Opera House, for which institution he served fourteen years as treasurer and assistant manager.

Al Durning, of the Mutual Office, is absent on a trip to Alabama where he is booking Masterpictures in rapid fashion.

V-L-S-E EXCHANGE FOR SYRACUSE, NEW YORK

A. N. Webster, of V-L-S-E, was recently in Syracuse, N. Y., arranging for suitable quarters for an exchange.

The company contemplates covering New York State outside of Greater New York direct from Syracuse, and the office is being established to afford better facilities in serving up-State exhibitors.

GUILFOIL IN CHARGE OF PATHE AT SYRACUSE

Duncan Guilfoil, until recently connected with the Greater New York Film Rental Company, is in charge of the Pathe office in Syracuse, N. Y. The main office has been moved to Albany, N. Y.

CALGARY BUSINESS BEST IN WESTERN CANADA, SAYS PHELPS

Manager James E. Finch, of the Vancouver office of the Universal, last week received a visit from B. T. Phelps, roadman for Western Canada, his territory extending from the coast district of British Columbia to Port Arthur, Ontario, which is some territory, so to speak.

Mr. Phelps reports that business seems to be better in Calgary than at any other place in the Western Canadian provinces, but that in most cities the exhibitors are complaining of poor attendance.

The Universal Company has lately experienced a loss of several days in routing programs through a circuit of interior towns, and Mr. Phelps has now started over the route to rearrange the schedule.

He expects to arrive in Calgary in about two weeks, and will then spend some time in covering Alberta. Mr. Phelps formerly managed the Bijou Theatre in Calgary, and gained several years of exchange experience with the Mutual, so he is particularly well-fitted for the duties of a road man.

METRO EXCHANGE IN WINNIPEG IS LIBERAL NEWSPAPER ADVERTISER

Metro Starfilms, Limited, which has just established a branch in Winnipeg for the distribution of the Metro productions, took large space in the Manitoba Free Press to advertise its productions, and the fact that they had been booked at the Walker Theatre.

The newspaper reciprocated by publishing a large number of stories, featuring Metro stars and the policy of the company, as well as extended interviews with Manager C. P. Walker, of the theatre, and with Less. Kauffman, the Metro general manager for Western Canada.

The great amount of publicity thus secured enabled the Walker to start off to good business at prices ranging from 15 to 50 cents. With the exception of a reduction of the admission to the Saturday morning "Children's Hour" from 15 cents to 10, the original prices are still maintained.

SLATER IS MANAGER OF PATHESCOPE IN LOS ANGELES

C. W. Slater, who for the past several months has been salesman for the Mutual Film Corporation, has accepted the position of Los Angeles manager of a Pathescope exchange.

One thousand reels and a number of projecting machines will compose the stock of this exchange, which will furnish programs and equipment to churches, schools and hospitals.

GOLD PRIZE OFFERED EXCHANGES BY IVAN FILM

When the Ivan company offered a prize of one hundred dollars for the exchange making the best showing on "Forbidden Fruit," the current release, little did the company expect the keen rivalry among the Ivan exchanges that now exists.

The contest is to be decided on two counts; the first, the amount of advertising done on "Forbidden Fruit," and second, the quality of bookings done on this feature.

To date the Standard Film Renting Service of Cleveland is in first place in the advertising division. Their beat of the week is a double center page spread in colors in The Moving Picture Bulletin, a Cleveland and Cincinnati trade paper, on "Forbidden Fruit," with publicity also in almost every page of that paper.

OFFICE ESTABLISHED IN SYRACUSE TO HANDLE V-L-S-E FILMS

Mr. Partridge of the V. L. S. E. and A. N. Webster were in Syracuse, New York, last week arranging for an office to handle more satisfactorily the needs of the New York State exhibitors outside of Greater New York.

The office will probably hold about six hundred reels at a time and be equipped for every modern convenience for giving first-class service to the exhibitors.

WINEGAR HANDLES BLUEBIRD PLAYS IN BUFFALO, NEW YORK

C. Winegar, former manager of the Central Park Theatre of Buffalo, N. Y., has accepted the position of manager for the Bluebird Photoplays for the western part of New York State.

Mr. Winegar has had a wide experience in the film line, having booked Annette Kellermann and other feature pictures. His office will be with the Victor Film Service at Buffalo, N. Y.

LUSTIG HANDLES METROS IN LOS ANGELES

Harry Lustig, for more than three years manager of the Mutual Film Exchange at Denver, has been contracted by the Metro Company to manage their new exchange at Los Angeles, and took up this work a few weeks ago.

He has been very successful up to this time, and Metro pictures are securing especially good bookings in that territory.

ZIMMERMAN REPRESENTATIVE FOR VICTOR EXCHANGE

Mr. Zimmerman, formerly road man for the Buffalo Feature Film Company and Queen City Film Company of Buffalo, N. Y., has resigned to accept a position as special representative for the Universal Film Company and the Red Feather Photoplays, working under the Victor Film Service, of Buffalo.

SOSKIN LEAVES BROTHER IN CHARGE

I. Soskin, who covers Canada in the interests of the Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., has left Vancouver, where he has been for the past two months, leaving his brother, Ben Soskin, in charge of the local office.

Mr. Soskin will spend some time in Montreal and Toronto, and will probably return to Vancouver early in the summer.

FLINTOM GETS REPORT FAVORABLE TO "STILL WATERS"

In a telegram to A. D. Flintom, head of the Kansas City Feature Film Company, and distributor of Paramount pictures in the States of Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa, N. H. Cinberg, of the Magnet Theatre, Lincoln, Nebraska, says that Marguerite Clark, in "Still Waters," broke all records since he has been in business.

ALLEN MADE BOOKER AT MUTUAL IN BANGOR

Arthur Allen, formerly manager of the Palace Theatre in Bangor, Me., and for the past three years actively associated with the motion picture business in that city, has accepted a position as booker with the Mutual Film Exchange of Portland.

GREENVILLE ON TRIP IN EASTERN MAINE

William Greenville, manager of the Mutual Film Exchange, of Portland, Me., is in the eastern section of the State on business.

He visited the motion picture houses in Brownville and Ray last week, with the view of furnishing these places with pictures.

STERN OF "U," IN BANGOR, PUTS ITS PICTURES IN THE PALACE

Charles M. Stern, manager of the Universal Film Company in Bangor, Me., has taken over the management of the Palace Theatre, using the line of pictures furnished by his exchange house.

VINCE ENGAGES CARRUTHERS IN VANCOUVER

Manager Albert E. Vince, of the Mutual office in Vancouver, B. C., recently made a trip to interior British Columbia towns, and on his return installed an assistant for E. F. Carruthers, shipper.

CRAFT OPENS OFFICE FOR TRIANGLE IN DETROIT

P. P. Craft, Detroit exchange representative for Triangle Films, has opened an office in the New Farwell Building on Griswold street, that city.

SUNDAY CLOSING WANTED BY EAST CLEVELAND

Arnold Goodman, manager of the new Wind-A-Meer theatre at East Cleveland, O., has been fined fifty dollars and costs for operating his house on Sunday. Mr. Goodman gave free Sunday shows when the theatre was first opened, but for the last few Sundays he has been charging admission to test the legality of the Sunday ordinance.

The anomaly of this East Cleveland ordinance is that competitors of the Wind-A-Meer who happen to be located in the city of Cleveland, of which East Cleveland is a suburb, are not interfered with.

Common Pleas Judge P. L. A. Lieghley has ruled that under a state law the opening of motion picture theatres in Cleveland itself is illegal, but present intentions of the city officials are not to attempt to enforce the state law in the city.

Mayor W. E. Minshall, of East Cleveland, however, seems to be determined that the residential district over which he exercises jurisdiction, shall not have Sunday motion picture shows.

Thousands of East Cleveland citizens have petitioned in favor of Sunday opening. The Wind-A-Meer management is credited with the intention to open Sundays in spite of the attitude of the authorities.

DELAWARE, OHIO, IN FIGHT FOR SUNDAY OPENING

Delaware, Ohio, is in the throes of a fight that will determine whether or not that city shall have motion pictures on Sundays.

The theatre managers believed that Sunday performances would meet with favor and began to sound out public sentiment on the matter. The majority of persons in the city of Delaware are of the Methodist faith, and they began to circulate petitions against the proposed opening of the shows.

The result was that the church element got 2,100 names and filed them with Police Chief James Spaulding.

Reports from the other side are that 1,400 names were secured in favor of the proposed Sabbath opening. As the opening of theatres is against a state law, according to a decision handed down by a Cuyahoga County court, it looks as if the liberal-minded citizens of Delaware will not be able to enjoy picture shows on Sunday.

Police Chief Spaulding declares that "Delaware is a Methodist town and never will consent to having motion picture theatres open on Sunday," and that he will obey the state law.

CAMPAIGN FOR SUNDAY OPENING IS LAUNCHED IN NEWARK, NEW JERSEY

A CAMPAIGN to have every motion picture theatre in Newark, N. J., open every Sunday was launched at a recent meeting of ten of the leading exhibitors of the city. A committee was immediately appointed to confer with Chief of Police Michael T. Long, whose formal and official attitude toward the proposed plan was requested.

Newark's chief of police, as was expected, refused to commit himself to anything definite. "I have frequently granted local motion picture theatres the right to show their films on Sundays," declared the chief.

"There are some localities in Newark where, instead of opposition to the plan, a popular demand has been brought to our attention. In these instances permission to remain open on Sundays has been given."

Nicholas La Vecchia, counselor for and secretary of the motion picture organization in Newark, declared that the present system of regulating Sunday openings in Newark was at least unjustly discriminating.

"What is right for one section and part of Newark can hardly be classified as harmful for their neighbors.

"The class of patrons, and the number of them, who attend motion picture exhibitions in Newark on Sundays, is proof that only a comparatively few of the narrower minded would interfere with the plan that would allow everyone to stay open. The police department is supposed to represent the people of Newark. At present they are representing only a percentage of them.

"If the police and municipal authorities refuse to represent the citizens of this city we shall ask the state legislature to end the reign of misrepresentation by passing a law favorable to the motion picture theatre managers of Newark and New Jersey. Here in Newark we all feel that Sunday closing is by far too big a question to be left entirely to the judgment of one individual."

LAW FORBIDDING SHIPMENTS OF FILMS BY BOAT WILL WORK HARDSHIPS ON BANGOR, ME., OFFICES

BANGOR, Me., film exchange men were notified recently that the Federal regulation which went into effect last June is now to be enforced, forbidding the shipment of moving picture films on steamboats.

The regulation has not been carried out yet, but the notification that the authorities will act in the future has caused some consternation on the part of the film exchange men, who assert that films, as they are now packed for shipment, are not dangerous.

The films are packed in two containers, one within the other, and each fireproof, this being somewhat different from the old days, when the films were shipped wrapped in paper.

If this regulation is carried out it would work a hardship on the exchanges supplying pictures to places along the coast, such as Bar Harbor, Boothbay Harbor, Brooklin, Castine, Dark Harbor, Lubec, North Deer Isle, Seal Harbor, Sedgwick, Southwest Harbor, Sorrento, Southport, Squirrel Island.

Providing the regulation, in its present form, is enforced, the people in these places will be deprived of the amusement derived from the motion pictures. Some of these places may be supplied with films taken over in motorboats, during the summer months at least, but it is hardly probable that the express companies will desire to make arrangements with the small crafts that cannot be depended on in rough weather.

In some of the inland places it is true that the films may be delivered over the stage lines, but this will cause unnecessary handling and much delay.

LAFAYETTE, IND., JURY FREES ALLEGED SUNDAY OPENING VIOLATOR

After deliberating for more than twelve hours, the jury in the case of the state against Misha Rubinoff, at Lafayette, Ind., charged with running a moving picture theatre on Sunday, came into court January 28 and reported a disagreement. A number of ballots were taken and the vote stood eight to four in favor of acquittal.

Rubinoff was arrested three times Sunday, January 23, for attempting to run a moving picture theatre. He pleaded that he was a Jew and did not observe his Sabbath on Sunday. He contended that he had a right to work on Sunday.

The case excited great interest in Lafayette, and a hard fight was made on both sides. The ministers and church element assisted in the prosecution. The defense had a number of attorneys on its side.

EXCHANGES MAY COMPEL PAYMENT BY STOPPING SERVICE

The legal right of a local exchange to enforce payment of rentals on contract by annulment of service is established by decision in favor of the Mutual Film Corporation just handed down by the Court of Civil Appeals, of the Second Supreme Judicial Court of Texas, Ft. Worth.

Litigation was begun September 5, 1914, when Morris and Daniel brought suit against the Mutual Film Corporation of Texas for $10,600, in the District Court of Taylor County, Texas.

Morris and Daniel conducted a theatre at Abilene, Texas. They had a contract with the Mutual Film Corporation for service. The Mutual defended on the ground that Morris and Daniel left C. O. D. shipments in express offices and that after having become delinquent in payment, service was cut off.

Further, it was charged by the Mutual that payment was stopped on checks sent in remittances by Morris and Daniel.

In a suit, the exhibitors set up the claim that they had contracted for service from the Mutual to them so long as the theatre and the Mutual Film Corporation remained in existence.

Mutual responded by a plea that the contract was unalterable. On this showing the case was dismissed.

A series of amended complaints was filed by Morris and Daniel and at last in a trial before a jury, they received a verdict for $1,500. The Mutual fought the case and through appeal won the victory of the Ft. Worth decision.

This will have an important bearing on film rental and collections in the state of Texas.

MOVE TO ABOLISH CENSORS IN SAN FRANCISCO

All attempts to secure an amendment to the present regulations in effect at San Francisco to make the censorship of moving pictures even more drastic have been abandoned and efforts are now being made to have the board of censorship abolished.

This matter was to have been brought up last week, but has been postponed for future consideration. Members of the police commission of the board of supervisors are in favor of the repeal of the present ordinance, but state that a formal petition will have to be presented before the measure creating the censorship board can be repealed.

CENSORS FAIL TO AGREE ON SAME PICTURE

A striking difference of opinion between the censor boards of British Columbia and Manitoba serves to bring out the fact that their decisions are merely arbitrary, and not based on any broad question of right or wrong. The Famous Players productions of "Bella Donna" and "Lydia Gilmore," with Pauline Frederick, were both submitted to the censors of both provinces.

In British Columbia "Bella Donna" was rejected and "Lydia Gilmore" was passed. In Manitoba "Lydia Gilmore" was rejected and "Bella Donna" was passed.

MARYLAND THREATENED WITH STATE CENSORSHIP; LEAGUE PLANS FIGHT ON MEASURE

MARYLAND motion picture exhibitors are very much concerned regarding a censorship bill introduced into the House of Delegates of the Maryland Legislature by Delegate Allan Bryant. The bill has been delivered to the Ways and Means Committee.

The Baltimore members of the Maryland branch, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, have held a meeting to discuss this censorship measure. Preliminary arrangements were made for another meeting, when it is probable that a special committee will be appointed to take the matter in charge and protect the Maryland interests.

The meeting of the Baltimore exhibitors will probably be followed by a state-wide meeting in the next few days at which general plans for fighting the measure will be taken up.

In addition to the work of the Maryland branch, President Guy L. Wonders, of the Maryland Exhibitors, is in direct communication with the officials of the legislative committee of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of New York.

Considerable aid in fighting the measure is expected from the latter organization.

The Maryland measure provides for three censors to be appointed by the governor for a term of three years.

The first appointed under the act is appointed for three years, two years and one year, respectively, the respective terms to be designated by the governor.

For examination of each film or set of views the board shall receive a fee of two dollars and one dollar for each duplicate or print thereof, which shall be applied for at the same time and by the same person.

One-half of all fees are to go to the treasury of the state; the other half shall go to the three members of the said board in equal proportions.

The penalty for any violation on the part of any one violating the rules provides for a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars or more than fifty dollars for the first offense.

For any subsequent offense the fine shall be not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars. In default of payment of fine and cost, the defendant shall be sentenced to imprisonment of not less than ten days nor more than thirty.

The bill also provides that copies of all banners, posters or other advertising matter used by theatres shall be submitted to the board before being displayed.

The limitation of the scope of this bill provides that the act does not apply to any exhibition of film used for educational, charitable, fraternal or religious purposes; by any religious associations, fraternal societies, libraries, museums, public schools, private schools, institutions of learning or by any corporation of the first class.

APPEAL FROM WINNIPEG CENSORS POSSIBLE IF ALLEN BILL GOES THROUGH

FILM men of Winnipeg, Canada, will be able to appeal the decision of the three Winnipeg censors if a bill prepared by John Allen, deputy attorney general of Manitoba, passes the legislature, now in session.

This bill will abolish the civic board of censors and create a provincial board of three men.

Another body of three will be appointed, who will constitute an appeal board, so that if the censors ban any film which the film men think should not be banned, they can appeal.

This is a reform which has been advocated all over the American continent, but Manitoba is the first to start the ball rolling.

The present system of censorship in the province is similar to methods in other Canadian provinces and in the United States. The result has been a widespread complaint, which, while starting an organized wave of protest, has as yet, borne little fruit.

The Manitoba bill, which is an amendment to the Amusements Act, will, therefore, cause comment all over this continent, and may pave the way to wider censorship in America.

Under the existing system, a film can be censored, vital parts cut out, or the whole film banned and nothing more can be done in the matter.

Unfortunately, other western provinces often follow the action of the Winnipeg civic censors, instead of acting independently.

The new bill will take the power of censorship out of the city, put it into the control of the government and provide remedy by appeal. J. L. STEELE.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., POLICE OFFICIAL PASSES "NATION"

Police Commissioner Nicholson at Syracuse, N. Y., has proven himself a friend of the motion picture business by accommodating the management of the Empire theatre to the extent of making a special trip to Rochester, N. Y., to witness a showing of the "Birth of a Nation" at the Regent theatre to ascertain whether or not it would be suitable for showing at Syracuse.

Representatives from several negro organizations and colored ministers waited on the commissioner and registered vigorous protest against the showing of this picture in Syracuse, but upon his return to Syracuse the commissioner stated that he could see nothing objectionable in the feature, and has given permission to have it shown in Syracuse.

It will hold the boards at the Empire theatre for two weeks beginning February 7 at prices ranging from twenty-five cents to two dollars a seat. An eighteen-piece orchestra will accompany the picture.

Film News From Foreign Parts

GALSWORTHY, ZANGWILL, WILDE AND PINERO ON IDEALS LIST OF PRODUCTIONS

Special to Motion Picture News
London, Jan. 30.

THE Ideal Company's announcements for the year include Oscar Wilde's drama, "Lady Windermere's Fan," "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," featuring Sir Geo. Alexander and Mrs. Hilda Moore (this is said to be the biggest modern English play); John Galsworthy's drama, "Justice"; Israel Zangwill's stories, "The Bachelor's Club" and "The Old Maids' Club"; Dicken's story, "Dombey & Son," "Dr. Primrose," and "The Vicar of Wakefield," showing Sir John Hare, Oscar Wides's comedy, "The Importance of Being Earnest."

Lady Tree, speaking at a film company's function the other evening, said that playing for the screen was a considerable help to stage players. She confessed to liking the work very much, and paid a high tribute for skill of the moving picture producer. This is the man of whom the public hears nothing, but who really is the brains of picture-making.

The most interesting and one of the most successful trade shows of the week was that of Hepworth's "Annie Laurie," which was accorded a most enthusiastic ovation. With a beauty of manner and of setting that will do justice to so great a song, this play presents a story based on the old ballad.

The story is one of many that might have been inspired by Annie Laurie. Yet it so beautifully presents the very heart of appeal that has enabled the song to capture the world, that its success with the enormous public of those who love the song is already assured.

Among the best films of the week are: "Sally in Our Alley." Turner film. A lovely English picture, 'round a pretty English ballad, telling story of the song with which the famous tenor, Sim Reeves, charmed and delighted his audiences for years.

"The Winner, Bricks and the Man," 1,144 feet. An interesting drama of two young men, both loving the same girl. They decide who is to win the bride by an exhibition of fisticuffs.

Kineto, Ltd. War map. 550 feet. Demonstrating Battles in the Balkans, Animal World Series No. 3. Some excellent out of the ordinary pictures, including some unique under water scenes.

Fred Gronback.

BRITISH THEATRE PROGRAM SETS STANDARD FOR HOUSES HERE

Motion Picture News has received copies of the program of the Empire theatre, Leicester Square, London, W. C., for the afternoon of Wednesday, December 29, a memorable occasion in the theatre's history.

That day a series of films was shown under the title, "Britain Prepared: A Grand Revue of His Majesty's Naval and Military Forces." The performance virtually received government recognition, for the Right Hon. Arthur J. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, gave an address.

The pictures were made under special permission from the British Admiralty and War Office by Kinemacolor, Jury, Gaumont and Kineto, under the direction of Charles Urban. So far as the censorship permitted, they were graphic and complete indications of Britain's mobilization of military resources and men.

The program is a work of art, and surpasses any similar American motion picture theatre program we have seen. Accompanying it is a smaller booklet, also a splendid specimen of color work, containing an article illustrative of the subject matter of the pictures. This is entitled "The Drake Spirit in the Iron Age," and is written by Raymond Blathwayt.

ESSANAY BRITISH HOUSE ORGAN A "LIVE WIRE"

The Photoplay Review and Essanay Guide, house organ of the Essanay Film Service, Ltd., London, is an attractive and interesting manufacturer publication.

The Christmas issue, just received, had a remarkably good color cover, carrying excellent likenesses of the principal Essanay stars.

The press matter is written in lively style, and undoubtedly has commanded attention. Langdon Reed, publicity manager of the British Essanay house, is a "live wire," as his publication shows.

TWO RITA JOLIVETS RELEASED IN AMERICA BY AMBROSIO

Anonima Ambrosio, the well known Italian producer, before sailing for Italy last Wednesday announced that the two multiple reel features, "Zwany" and "The Hand of Fatma," in which Rita Jolivet acted the chief roles, will be released in America immediately.

Mr. Ambrosio has closed a contract with the Authors Film Co., Inc., 1432 Broadway, New York, by which the company will act as sole agent and distributor for the Ambrosio output in North America.

As already announced, Mr. Ambrosio will specialize on productions for the American market.

JOURJON OF ECLAIR KNOWS WHAT IT IS TO BE UNDER FIRE

Charles Jourjon, president of the Société Française des Films and Cinematographes Eclair, of Paris, has been serving as a first lieutenant in the French army since the beginning of the war.

M. CHARLES JOURJON OF THE ECLAIR COMPANY AT THE FRONT "SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE"

He is now at Badonvilliers in the Vosges and has taken part in all the battles for the conquest of the Hartmannsweile Zopf.

Mr. Jourjon is one of four hundred members of the Eclair Film forces who have seen service with the French, English, Russian or Italian armies. Of these eleven have been killed in action, twenty-two wounded and five made prisoners.

"SEATS OF THE MIGHTY" SHOWN AT BENEFIT

The new Dominion Theatre in Nanaimo, B. C., recently gave a benefit performance for the local branch of the Red Cross Society, presenting the World Film feature, "Seats of the Mighty," and vaudeville by local talent, as well as a ten-piece orchestra especially engaged for the occasion.

An admission price of 25 cents brought the society's share of the receipts up to $175.

STRIKING MOMENTS FROM A RAILROAD FILM NOVEL: CHAPTER 7 OF "THE GIRL AND THE GAME," SIGNAL-MUTUAL

WAR POSTERS ORDERED FROM LOBBY IN SAN FRANCISCO THEATRE

The management of the Savoy Theatre on McAllister street, San Francisco, was ordered last week to remove from its lobby certain objectionable posters used in connection with the showing of a war film, the order having been made by United States Attorney Preston.

The posters gave the address of Canadian recruiting stations, the scale of pay for various ranks and other information in regard to enlisting. Protests were filed with the Government agent by the German Consul, the American Independence Union and German-American organizations.

NEVADA MOTION PICTURE PERMITTED TO SELL STOCK IN CALIFORNIA

The Nevada Motion Picture Corporation has been granted a permit by the California Corporation Commission to sell stock in California. All moneys received must be deposited until $100,000 has been raised, when it will be released.

In case this sum is not secured before June 1 subscriptions will be returned to stockholders.

Miss Turnbull, Lasky, East After Over Year in West

Scenario Writer with Many Screen Successes from Notable Books and Plays to Her Credit, and Author of Several Original Photodramas, Finds Writing for Films "No Vacation"

MARGARET TURNBULL, of the photodramatic staff of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, was in New York last week, her first visit east from the studios at Hollywood, Cal., in more than a year.

In addition to the dozen photoplays which Miss Turnbull has written during the year, including several original and the most recent Lasky production of Mark Twain's "Pudd'nhead Wilson," she has found time also to write a novel entitled "Handle with Care," which has just been published by Harper and Bros.

After a few weeks in the East Miss Turnbull will return to the Lasky studios and to her work in the photodramatic department.

"Twelve months ago when I went to the Lasky studios," she said the other afternoon, "I had an idea along with others who had written considerable for the stage that writing a photoplay was to be something like a vacation.

"But how mistaken such an idea was, and particularly how mistaken such an idea is at the present time, when the demands of motion picture audiences are becoming more and more severe for the very highest kind of work.

"No one within the motion picture industry has any illusions now as to the stability of the future of the art and as to the channels along which the photoplay will develop. In the mad dash through literature of all ages, the supply of material drawn from other sources such as the stage and the book-shelves is being rapidly depleted. Everyone knows this. But the motion picture industry, with that same far-sightedness which has marked other inward developments, is preparing for the next step in the photoplay, which is the original story, simple in motive and emotions, but brilliant in invention and conception.

"With this transition will come a greater development of the photoplay as it will then absolutely divorce itself from any other art and stand for itself.

"It is quite different from any other kind of writing. I frequently wonder if my experiences with photoplays are the same as others who have taken to writing for motion pictures," Miss Turnbull remarked by way of conclusion.

Some of Miss Turnbull's adaptations from plays or books for the Lasky company which have been presented on the Paramount Program are "Pudd'nhead Wilson," first of the longer Mark Twain stories to be screened; "The Fighting Hope," "The Case of Becky" and "Blackbirds." Among her original photoplays are "Armstrong's Wife," for Edna Goodrich; "The Clue," "The Secret Sin" and "Stolen Goods," all presenting Blanche Sweet in the featured role.

Paramount Pictographs Picturize Public Policies

Burning Questions of the Hour Like Preparedness Presented in Novel Manner by Frederick Palmer, and Henry Reuterdahl and Infant Mortality by Aid of Health Department

THOUGHTS foremost in the minds of the public are picturized in a novel way in Paramount Pictographs, the first issue of which was shown to the press last week in New York.

For example, the question of preparedness is taken up by Frederick Palmer and Henry Reuterdahl. First, Palmer's reasons for believing in preparedness are flashed on the screen: "To defend my home and ideals," "To defend my neighbor's home," and "To keep my body sound." Following this statement of his beliefs, their picturization is shown.

The next article, illustrated in a similar way, is by Elmer G. Sperry, and is entitled "Putting the Gyroscope to Work." Then comes "Testing Your Mind," in which Dr. Hugo Munsterberg discusses one's fitness for his job.

These articles will be continued from week to week.

In co-operation with the New York City Board of Health, the Woman's Home Companion edits the Better Babies Department of this celluloid magazine, showing that ignorance is responsible in three out of four cases of infant mortality.

J. R. Bray contributes a political cartoon entitled "Our Watchdog." A piece of trick photography is seen in the "Birth of the Trickids," in which all the actors are toys. J. Zalud contributes a series of exclusive fashion designs.

The film is arranged like a magazine. On the cover is "Paramount Pictograph." The page is turned, and on the inside cover appears, "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute."

The American flag appears in the foreground. A huge turret gun fires its charge of destruction at an imaginary foe and then the different editors are introduced.

Col. Roosevelt will deliver a message on preparedness in the Pictograph to be issued February 13.

"BEAUTY HUNTERS" IN PRODUCTION AT SELIG ZOO STUDIOS

A rollicking single reel comedy from the pen of James Oliver Curwood, entitled "The Beauty Hunters," is now in course of production at the Selig Zoo studios. James Bradbury, Martha Mattox and Cecil Holland all have exceptional opportunities. William Robert Daly is the director of this picture.

VIRGINIA NORDEN, STAGE ACTRESS OF NOTE, WITH VITAGRAPH

Virginia Norden, an actress of considerable note on the American stage, has joined the forces of the Vitagraph and will lend her splendid screen personality to the success of that company's films.

She is at present working under the direction of Ralph Ince at the Bayshore studio of the Vitagraph and will make her bow to the public in a Blue Ribbon Feature in which Anita Stewart will also appear.

VIRGINIA NORDEN

Miss Norden will be remembered by theatregoers as the lead in Elinore Gates' "The Poor Little Rich Girl," which enjoyed a successful Broadway run two seasons ago. She also played in Guy Bolton's "Rule of Three."

Although her screen experience is limited, she is an actress of marked versatility and under Ralph Ince's guidance she is expected to take a high place among film luminaries.

She is a Washington, D. C., girl, the daughter of Major William N. Dalton and Olivia Williams. Norden is a family name she has adopted for professional use.

She was educated in private schools in Washington and spent some time at a convent. Developing aspirations for a stage career, she was placed in the Empire School of Dramatic Acting in Manhattan, from which she graduated with high honors and was immediately cast in a well known stock company.

Here she gained experience that added the finishing touches to her technique.

WILLIAMS OF FRISCO SELLS RIGHTS TO MOVCA FOR 15 STATES IN 15 DAYS

The C. L. Williams and Company Exchange of San Francisco, which has charge of placing Movca Cartoons in the Coast states, including Nevada and Arizona, has had very successful bookings for these new products.

State rights have been sold through the New York office for fifteen states in the past fifteen days.

"California Better for Actors and Pictures"—Lasky

As Screen Is Relentless in Exposing Every Line of the Features, and Night Life of Broadway Is Sometimes Irresistible, Enforced Early Retirement in West Is Best

IF for no other reason than the fact that New York's Broadway is three thousand miles away, southern California will continue in the future to be the center of the motion picture producing industry, according to Jesse L. Lasky, president of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company.

Returning to New York, where the executive offices of the Lasky company are located, Mr. Lasky this week voiced his sentiments in the controversy that is being carried on between Eastern and Western producers, that the West had all the better of it.

"In the past few months, comparatively," said Mr. Lasky, "since so many Broadway stars of the legitimate stage have entered motion pictures, one of their difficulties is being able to adjust themselves to new working conditions.

"In the legitimate theatre the actor works at night or at earliest at the matinee, under artificial light. In the motion picture work, however, the man or woman star must submit their features to the scrutinizing glare of bright sunlight.

"It is a small point but one, the importance of which cannot be over-emphasized, that because stage stars when in Los Angeles are far removed from the temptations of Broadway and the delights of its night life, they retire earlier, get more sleep and, besides, look better in the morning."

Mr. Lasky also said that within one day the Lasky studio has taken photographs of deserts, cotton fields, fruit ranches, frontier scenes in small Western towns, Spanish missions, sunken gardens, tropical foliage and exact reproductions of the Bay of Manico, the cliffs of England and perfect reproductions of Japanese palaces and tea gardens and an Italian Villa.

"But what would you do for a New York tenement street," was asked.

"Build one," replied the producer.

Diversity of Subjects Marks 4th Group of Mutuals

The Plots of the Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, Run the Gamut of Adventure, Intrigue, Love, Diplomacy, Mysticism, and Other Elements

VARIETY of theme marks the fourth group of Masterpictures, de Luxe Edition, released by the Mutual Film Corporation. Adventure, intrigue, love, diplomacy, mysticism and other elements have been worked into the plots.

The first of this group is the five-reel racing drama, "The Drifter," produced by Gaumont and released on February 7.

Two phases of society which have long been at odds—the race track and the church—have been drawn upon for the basic idea. Alexander Gaden is starred in a dual role, and Lucille Taft appears as his co-star.

"Powder," a five-act war drama, produced by the American Film Company, Inc., released as a Masterpicture de Luxe on February 10, features Arthur Maude, the well-known English actor, in the stellar role.

He is supported by Constance Crawley and a large company of players. Mr. Maude is seen in the role of a pacificist, who is fighting to prevent the shipment of munitions to the belligerent nations of Europe. One scene shows the blowing up of powder mills.

In "The Soul's Cycle," a Horsley production which will go forth as a Masterpicture de Luxe, on February 12, the transmigration of souls is the main theme. Margaret Gibson is the star of this production, in which the Bostock animals have a conspicuous part. Miss Gibson's chief support is furnished by John Oaker and Henry Watson, and a large company of especially selected players.

Spiegel Plans Big Appropriation for Service

In Connection with the Reorganization of the World and Equitable Companies He Will Set Aside $2,000 a Week for Exhibitor Aid

IN connection with the reorganization of the Equitable and World Film companies announcement was made last week by Arthur Spiegel, the new head of the Equitable, that one of the new policies of the organization will be a system of service to the exhibitor.

Details of this plan are now being worked out, Mr. Spiegel said, but further than that the scheme will be something entirely new, and is expected to be more effective than anything of the kind yet tried; nothing will be announced regarding it at present.

An appropriation equivalent to at least $2,000 a week is to be set aside for the new department.

"I have very little to say about our plans just now," said Mr. Spiegel. "We would rather do things right at this moment than talk about them. We are going ahead and do the things we have planned, and will discuss them after they are done.

The new organization of the Equitable is as follows: Arthur Spiegel, president and general manager; H. C. Drum, assistant general manager; Felix Feist, sales manager; John H. Goldfrap, advertising manager; Harry Reichenbach, publicity manager. E. Richard Schayer will be associated with Mr. Reichenbach in handling the publicity.

SELIG ZOO STUDIO DAMAGE BY STORM IS $10,000

The Selig Zoo Studio was damaged to the extent of over $10,000 by the severe rainstorm that visited California recently.

A large dam situated on city property adjoining the Zoo grounds broke and released a large body of water which rushed over the Selig property.

EDWIN PICKED TO DIRECT BILLIE BURKE IN KLEINE SERIAL

Walter Edwin, director-in-chief of the Kleine Studios, will direct the new film novel by Rupert Hughes in which Billie Burke and Henry Kolker will be featured.

Mr. Edwin is remembered as the director who produced the Mary Fuller features for the Edison Company. For the past two years Mr. Edwin has been associated with Kleine.

Among his successes are "The Spendthrift," "The Woman Next Door," "The Green Cloak," "The Sentimental Lady," and "The Danger Signal"—all Kleine five-reel features.

It is said that Mr. Edwin will introduce several photographic novelties in the making of the new film novel which will feature Billie Burke.

NIGH, METRO DIRECTOR, ON VACATION

William Nigh, the Metro director, who recently completed "Her Debt of Honor" and "A Yellow Streak," two notable screen productions, and who will direct Ethel Barrymore in her next Metro production, "The Kiss of Hate," is taking a vacation of two weeks while preparations are being made for this feature.

Famous Players Move to Fifty-Sixth Street Studio

Company Will Make the Old Durland Riding Academy Headquarters Until the Erection of Its Plant on the Site at 225th Street, Near Broadway, New York City

THE executive offices of the Famous Players Film Company have been moved from the Columbia Bank Bldg., 507 Fifth Avenue, to the main studio at 130 W. Fifty-sixth Stret, New York City.

At the time of the great fire, which totally destroyed the old studio at Twenty-sixth Street, on the night of September 11, the Famous Players immediately secured the old Durland Riding Academy on Fifty-sixth Street as its principal studio, using it in conjunction with the auxiliary producing plant at Yonkers, which was in operation at that time.

On Sunday morning, September 12, while the old studio was still a mass of smouldering, smoking ruins, President Adolph Zukor called a meeting of the Famous Players executives at the Hotel Astor and by noon of that day temporary offices had been taken on the third floor of the Columbia Bank Building, at the Fifth Avenue address.

These offices have served the purposes of the executive staff until the present time.

The work of remodeling the old riding academy for studio purposes was pushed with the greatest possible speed, as that was the consideration of chief moment to the producers.

Several big films had been destroyed or damaged in the conflagration, among them "Bella Donna," starring Pauline Frederick; "The White Pearl," starring Marie Doro; "The Foundling," starring Mary Pickford; "The Red Widow," starring Jack Barrymore, and several others.

"Zaza," in which Pauline Frederick starred, was the only production to escape totally unscathed. With all these films temporarily removed from the Paramount schedule, the Famous Players officials were chiefly concerned with the problem of resuming productive operations at the earliest possible moment. It is a matter of record that the taking of scenes actually began on Monday morning following the fire.

The great majority of these were, of course, taken out of doors, but the work of tearing out the tan-bark ring and of reconstructing the old academy building to meet the needs of motion picture production was rushed with all possible speed.

The first scene actually taken in the Fifty-sixth Street building was one from "The Old Homestead," the adaptation of the celebrated rural drama in which Denman Thompson starred for years.

Since the organization of the Famous Players Film Company in 1912 the chief activities of the concern have been confined to the old studio and the Fifty-sixth Street building is the second in which the company has been located.

The Yonkers studio has never been anything but a subsidiary affair, and the only other headquarters ever established were those taken temporarily in California for the production of a few films especially requiring southwestern settings.

It is the intention of the company to make the new buildings its headquarters until the erection of its studio on the extensive site at 225th Street near Broadway, title to which was acquired by the Famous Players last summer.

Jesse J. Goldburg Plans Trip to Principal Exchanges

Vice-President of Ocean Will Dispose of "Life Without Soul," "Fortunate Youth" and "Driftwood" According to His New Plan

FOLLOWING the recently announced policy of the Ocean Film Corporation of disposing of its productions in certain territory on a percentage basis and in other territory on a state rights basis, Jesse J. Goldburg, vice-president and general manager of the company, will leave next week on a tour of the principal independent exchanges of the country.

He will dispose of "Life Without Soul," "The Fortunate Youth" and "Driftwood," the three feature releases of the company.

Contracts have already been entered into for certain territories, and the productions will be sold outright on a state rights basis in the remaining states.

Mr. Goldburg's trip, it is expected, will consume about six weeks.

"We believe," said Mr. Goldburg, "that certain territory will not stand the handling of features on an advance on account of a percentage to the manufacturer, that exchanges in such territory prefer to purchase features outright on a state rights basis, whereas other defined territory proves much more remunerative to the exchange and the manufacturer where productions are released on a co-operative percentage basis.

"We have for the past six weeks withheld from advertising, and made no attempt to dispose of our productions, contenting ourselves with finishing three releases and disposing of them one at a time, in order that the exchanges may properly judge of the class of our productions."

KEYSTONE TO LOCATE IN JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA

Special to Motion Picture News

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 3.

A. Kessel of the Keystone Company was a visitor in the city on the twenty-seventh and spent the day inspecting conditions for the purpose of locating a studio here. Mayor Bowden and some members of the Rotary Club took him around to the different studios and desirable locations.

Riverside and Riverview both suited him and several members of the company are expected to be here this week to make final arrangements for the construction work. One of the companies featuring Mabel Normand will arrive here in two weeks and start producing immediately.

Eugene Moore has just finished "The Oval Diamond," which he has been at work on since his arival in Jacksonville. Mr. Moore will start on another feature next week which will be entitled "The Water Devil."

EDITH ROBERTS, UNIVERSAL'S YOUNGEST LEADING LADY

"Cinders" is the title of a one-reel comedy drama written and produced by Robert Hill with Edith Roberts in the leading role, supported by William Courtleigh, Jr., which will be released shortly on the Universal program.

Miss Roberts is the new little leading lady of the Universal and is now the Universal's youngest leading lady. Although in pictures but a comparatively short while, Miss Roberts has shown to good advantage in several photoplays produced by Director Hill, especially in "The Trail of the Wild Wolf."

"Flock of Skeletons," First "Sis Hopkins" Series

Initial Production of Kalem Featuring Rose Melville, Creator of Famous Character in Original Stage Play, Will Be Released on March 3

SCENES FROM KALEM'S FIRST "SIS HOPKINS" COMEDY, TO BE RELEASED MARCH 3

"A FLOCK OF SKELETONS," the first release in the new line of Kalem comedies featuring Rose Melville, creator of Sis Hopkins, is now ready for release, and will probably be given its advance showing to the trade papers this week.

The initial production is scheduled for release on the General Film program for March 3, following which there will be a single reel release every week, taking the Friday date on the Kalem calendar.

"A Flock of Skeletons" gives a good idea of the type of work that will be found in the "Sis Hopkins" comedies. Sis will be seen in the familiar character that made her nationally known a decade ago on the stage.

The opening scenes of "A Flock of Skeletons" finds Sis at home on the farm. The slavey life tires and she pines for the easy ways of the city.

Her arrival in the metropolis isn't very auspicious, for she has Mr. Newleyritch arrested for "mashing" after he had considerately offered to help her with a bulky green carpet bag.

The fun begins when Sis later finds herself the girl-of-all-work in the Newleyritch home.

She blunders into a knowledge of the secret escapades of each member of the family and soon is the guardian of the family's skeletons. Their efforts to keep her knowledge from the other members of the household make life a whirl of pleasurable excitement to the bewildered Sis.

Mother is a would-be song bird, under the tutelage of a professor who is hard of hearing; daughter is in love with a matinee idol; and the sudden acquisition of wealth hasn't cured the son of the family of his love for the rolling dice. Life on the farm never appealed to Sis as this does.

Frank Minzey, who played the principal role in the play "Sis Hopkins" since its first presentation, has been secured by Kalem, and will make his screen debut in these subjects.

Arthur Albertson, who became popular in Kalem multiple reel offerings during the past year, is another member of the company, as is Richard Purdon, the Kalem "daddy."

Olive West and Henry Murdock are two players drafted from the stage who are well known for their character comedy work for many seasons past.

Miss West will be remembered for her appearances on Broadway in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage-Patch," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," and such attractions.

Murdock is an acrobatic comedian whose work has delighted the critics of the private projection room. Mary Kennedy, a pretty Jacksonville belle, has joined the company.

Paint Pictures Full of Local Color, Spiegel Rule

President of Equitable Declares That Authors as a General Thing Know Much Better Than Anyone Else What Atmosphere and Environment Are Needed for Plots and Characters

THE Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, since the beginning of its newer program, is making an effort for local color and the atmospheric detail so beloved by the exhibitor and patron alike.

President Spicgel of the Equitable Company, beginning with the release on December 6 of "The Warning," many of the scenes of which were staged in Luray Caves, Virginia, where the stalactities and stalagmites added mysterious and sensational effects to the scenes in which Kolker appears as in Hades, has made one consistent effort to obtain and maintain local color. detail and the effects procured through staging pictures in the locale called for by the authors.

"Authors, as a rule," said Mr. Spiegel, "know very much better than anyone else what atmosphere and environment they want to surround their plots and characters with, and we arc submitting to responsible authors, the choice of locations.

"This is resulting in a remarkable improvement in every department of our productional end. C. Haddon Chambers, author of 'Passers By' went all the way to Nassau in the Bahamas to write the scenario for his play, and then went into conference with S. E. V. Taylor and the star of the picture as to the most congenial atmospheric surroundings in which to produce the play.

"Frank Powell and Richard LcGalliennc concurred with Bruce McRae in choosing Havana and the surrounding Cuban atmosphere and the Caribbean Sea for the staging of 'The Chain Invisible' and the company has been there two weeks now.

They are taking their time in a harmonious atmosphcre, selected by all the participating interests.

"Marguerite Leslie, Harry Handworth, Roy L. McCardell and Mr. Stoermer all made a trip to Saranac Lake, two weeks before beginning the production of 'The Question,' and mapped out the precise spots they deemed best for the producing of McCardell's story."

BEAL COMPANY STORM BOUND

Director Frank Beal and his company are storm bound in the mountains above San Bernardino, Cal.

He left a week ago and no word has been received from him since his departure. All telegraph and telephone wires are down and roads are washed out in many places.

PLANS FOR "CRISIS" PRODUCTION PROGRESSING

Plans are progressing for the production of the Selig spectacular drama, "The Crisis." Producer Colin Campbell is knee deep in Civil War atmosphere.

MACMAHON OF TRIANGLE SEEKS NEW CONNECTIONS

Henry MacMahon is no longer connected with the Triangle Film Corporation and invites offers from film companies that want good press service.

Mr. MacMahon's newspaper list, which he personally selected, contains thousands of names of leading publications and represents a thorough acquaintance with journalistic managers and motion pictude editors in all parts of the country

He has likewise many friends in the trade press. His most recent work for the Triangle has been writing up first run houses, which has put him in touch with the publicity needs of many exhibitors.

On the sensational side he managed "The Birth of a Nation" publicity campaign in Boston from April to August of last year, thereby assisting the Epoch Producing Company in securing record-breaking receipts. He can be addressed at 321 West Fifty-fifth street, New York city; 'phone Columbus 2969.

BROADWAY BY NIGHT IN "NEW YORK," PATHE

Some very interesting and unusual scenes of Broadway by night are shown in Pathé's "New York," adapted from A. H. Woods' play of the same name.

The cameraman was stationed on the roof of an office building, and was able to film a long stretch of the "great white way."

The remarkable changing electric signs, which make the street unlike any other in the world, are clearly shown, and the processions of trolley cars and automobile cars, and automobile headlights, make the endless lines of light which shoot up and down like the tail of a comet.

PATHE'S "ANALYSIS OF MOTION" PRAISED IN NEW ORLEANS

R. E. Pritchard, moving picture editor of the New Orleans Item, writes that Pathé's "Human Movements Analyzed" has won the city, and that he has had fully twenty-five 'phone messages about the picture.

Al Christie Raises Scenario Prices to Fifty a Reel

Doubling of Price Due to His Assurance to President Laemmle, on Signing of Contract for Independent Production for "U", That Comedy Quality Is to Be Upheld

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Feb. 3.

BEING a firm believer in the need of securing the best stories possible as the foundation for the improvement of films, as outlined by the editorial in the News, Al. E. Christie, producer of Nestor comedies for Universal program, has increased the price of comedy scenarios from $25 per reel to $50.

When Mr. Christie made a contract with President Carl Laemmle to produce pictures independently for the Universal, he assured Mr. Laemmle that everything would be done to uphold the quality of Nestor comedies, as well as the improvement of the same.

The Christie companies have been located at their own studio, at Gower street and Sunset Boulevard, Hollywood, for three weeks, and telegraphic advice from the New York office of the Universal congratulating Mr. Christie on the excellent comedies he has sent forward since he became an independent producer have been received.

The Christie organization are somewhat crippled at the present time owing to the illness of Director Horace Davey and Cameraman Al. Cawood, and Al. Christie and his cameraman are making up for the missing ones, working with one company in the mornings and the other in the afternoons.

At the present time "He Almost Eloped," a one-reel subject, is being filmed by the Davey Company, composed of Ray Gallagher and Billie Rhodes. This deals with incidents of a girls' seminary.

"The Deacon's Waterloo," with Leo Moran as the deacon, has just been finished. This the players consider one of the best comedies that have appeared under the Nestor trademark for a number of months.

The deacon calls on Eddie Lyons' girl, Betty Compson, and while he is there the lover exchanges the deacon's live horse for a wooden one stolen from in front of a hardware store.

All of the exterior scenes for this were made while the rain fell in torrents, and remarkable photographic effects, combined with the unusual comedy situation, will no doubt place this film above the average Nestor quality.

The poor deacon after many futile attempts to start the wooden beast, is arrested by the sheriff for stealing the dummy. It required two weeks search to find a horse that would double for the wooden one.

"Germany On Firing Line" Officially Approved

War Films, Which Have Been Shown to Large Crowds in Several Cities, Were Taken by German Government Itself, and Viséd by General Staff

"GERMANY ON THE FIRING LINE," which was presented in New York under the auspices of the New York Globe, is said to be the only moving picture taken by the German government itself. In order to insure a faithful reproduction of the thrilling scenes, one hundred and six enlisted camera men are declared to have daily, even hourly, risked their lives.

For six weeks the Park theatre in New York was packed with interested spectators when these films were shown.

Every foot of "Germany on the Firing Line" is authenticated by the German government, who have given with these pictures the visé of their official character by cards signed, sealed and stamped by the German general staff. This mark of identification cannot be shown by any other war picture dealing with the German side of the war.

Every notable character of this war who is identified with Germany and her allies are shown on the front, not in their homes nor on the parade grounds, but in the midst of carnage and conflict.

The pictures have been shown so far outside of New York, in Minneapolis and St. Paul, under the auspices of the Minneapolis Tribune; in Cleveland at the Colonial theatre under the auspices of the Cleveland News; in Pittsburgh at the Pitt theatre under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Press; in Baltimore in connection with the Baltimore News; in Newark, N. J., under the auspices of the Newark Star; in Buffalo under the auspices of the Buffalo Times; in Paterson, N. J., under the auspices of the Paterson News; in New Haven, Conn., under the auspices of the Courier; Bridgeport, Conn., under the auspices of the Post.

Any purchaser or exhibitor of a German war picture should insist on being shown the "Kriegsausgabe" or war cards. Without these the films are not official.

Selig Players Return to Los Angeles from Las Vegas

Locations Near Newhall, Northwest of Angel City, Are Used by Tom Mix in First Picture After Returning from New Mexico

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Feb. 5.

THE Western Selig company which has been located at Las Vegas, New Mexico, has returned to the Coast studios, and are now working on their first picture here using locations in the vicinity of Newhall, northwest of Los Angeles. Tom Mix continues as director and leading player.

A company of Selig players under the direction of Frank Beal and with Kathlyn Williams, Guy Oliver, Lillian Hayward and Vivian Reid as principals, have gone to Bear Lake Valley to make exteriors for the three reel subject from a scenario by Wallace C. Clifton, entitled "The Devil, the Servant and the Man."

In all probability the subject "The Cycle of Fate," being produced at the Selig zoo by Marshall Neilan, will be made in five reels.

There are two episodes of this in which Edith Johnson plays the lead in one which is of the nature of a prologue, and Bessie Eyton will be the star of the other part of the picture.

The male principals of the cast are Wheeler Oakman, Louis J. Cody, Will Machin and Al. Filson. The story is laid partially on the sea and in a tenement district of a large city.

ANNA HELD IN "FILM OF MODES" BEFORE HER REGULAR PICTURE

The Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company has prepared a novel short length film showing Anna Held in various attractive poses and displaying her latest gowns from Paris, to be run in Paramount theatres in advance of the appearance of the Held photoplay "Madame La Presidente."

The film is to be run by exhibitors a few days ahead of the photoplay.

In addition to the various gowns representing the outlay of a fortune, the subject displays the famous collection of pearls worn by Miss Held, together with her $11,000 white ermine furs, her sensational hats and bejeweled slippers, designed by the actress herself.

AL RAY LEAVES NATIONAL FILM

Al Ray, the young director, has just severed his connections with the National Film Corporation of Baltimore, where he has been producing and playing the leading roles in comedies for the past several months.

He is now at his home in New York, where he intends to take a much-needed rest.

"I have been working steadily for the past two years without a vacation," he said, "and I intend to take a much-needed rest before I start to work again."

His comedies attracted considerable attention when in Baltimore, due to the fact that he again took the leading role, that of Louie Smaltz, in the comedies he produced.

MONTEREY MOTION PICTURE COMPANY ORGANIZED BY HEIDRICK

The Monterey Motion Picture Company has been organized at Monterey, Cal., by A. C. Heidrick and O. Thomas and a well-equipped studio has been fitted up there.

Some pictures have already been taken and plans are being made for operations on an extensive scale when the rainy season is at a close.

Large Array of Stage and Screen Stars from World

Dual Releasing Plan Following Consolidation with Equitable Makes Roster of Productions with Diversity of Subjects and Types Appeal to Public

NOW that World and Equitable are combined and the dual releasing plan about to go into effect, the large array of stage and screen talent comes under the direct control of the World Film Corporation.

The greater the roster of stars and players, the greater the opportunity for diversity of types, with the two producing concerns under the direct management of one head, and production activities controlled by the one executive staff.

Under the direction of the two concerns are two score noted artists—Clara Kimball Young, Robert Warwick, Holbrook Blinn, Alice Brady, George Beban, Mollie King, Francis Nelson, Kitty Gordon, Johnny Hines, Chester Barnett, June Elvidge and Douglas MacLean of the World Film staff, and Gail Kane, Bruce McRae, Charles J. Ross, Jane Grey, Marguerite, Leslie, Mary Boland, John Mason, Henry Kolker, Mary Charleson, Muriel Ostriche, Carlyle Blackwell, Frank Sheridan, Arthur Ashley, Gerda Holmes, Clara Whipple and Edna Wallace Hopper to be seen in Equitable vehicles.

Cast in such noted plays and stories as are the property of the World and Equitable, from such producers as William A. Brady, Messrs. Shuberts; authors and playwrights like Rachael Crothers, Rennold Wolf, Channing Pollock, C. Haddon Chambers, Emmett Campbell Hall, Roy L. McCardell, Eve Unsell, Richard Le Gallienne and others, the numerous players can be so allotted as to afford variety

Clara Kimball Young in "The Feast of Life," Holbrook Blinn in "The Unpardonable Sin," Gail Kane in "Her God," Robert Warwick and Francis Nelson in "Velma," Carlyle Blackwell in "The Shadow of a Doubt," Kitty Gordon in "As In a Looking Glass," George Beban in "The Pawn of Fate," Marguerite Leslie in "The Question," Frank Sheridan in "The Struggle," Bruce McRae and Gerda Holmes in "The Chain Invisible," Mary Boland in "The Price of Happiness," Edwin August in "The Social Highwayman," Muriel Ostriche in "Molly o' Pigtail Alley," and John Mason in "The Reapers," are some of the coming offerings.

While this is not the actual order of release, no definite statement having been given of rearranged program dates, the above list represents stars and plays actually at work for the World and Equitable, and the forthcoming program will contain a great majority of the above named.

Mr. Blinn is at Jacksonville staging two plays. Gail Kane is en route back to New York after three months on the Arizona deserts; Clara Kimball Young and Bruce McRae and their respective companies are at Havana, Cuba; Frank Sheridan is at Miami, Florida; Edna Wallace Hopper and Charles J. Ross are in the mountains of Canada; while the various other World and Equitable companies are working interiors at the six studios.

TOPNOTCH TO PICTURIZE DUMAS' "DENISE"

Topnotch Motion Pictures, Inc., a new film organization whose aim, it is announced, will be to supply a variety of subjects, will picturize Alexander Dumas' "Denise" as its first headline offering.

This company intends to supply exhibitors with a diversity of offerings, enabling them to buy a one-reel comedy or drama, a feature or a full nine-reel program at their option.

The Authors' Film Company, 1432 Broadway, New York, is the exclusive agent and distributor for the Topnotch output.

signed by Mr. Richard A. Rowland, the president of Metro, which was clear enough on its face and which was written after a long conference with Mr. W. W. Hodkinson, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, who explained to Mr. Rowland and Mr. Arthur James, of Mr. Rowland's office, exactly what position we proposed to take and just why we proposed to take it. There was no misconstruction on our part, although, obviously, there was a change of heart on theirs."

Producers Back Board of Trade

The Motion Picture Producers' Association of Los Angeles, in the formation of which Jesse L. Lasky had a leading part, announced its active opposition to censorship in the following telegram to the Motion Picture Board of Trade:

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 2.

Motion Picture Board of Trade,
18 East 41st street,
New York City.

The Motion Picture Producers' Association, representing sixteen producing companies, is opposed to censorship. We believe that a proper understanding by the public of the evils of censorship will mean its elimination. We are preparing a campaign of education by means of slides and literature. This we will distribute to the exchanges and exhibitors to be displayed to the public with blank petitions to be signed by the patrons of theatres petitioning the various legislative bodies to abolish censorship. We ask your co-operation in this great educational work by urging your distributors and exhibitors to assist in this propaganda. Address seventeen fifteen Northwestern avenue, Los Angeles.

Binder Wires Appreciation

The Board of Trade, through J. W. Binder, its executive secretary, sent the following reply:

New York, Feb. 3.

Motion Picture Producers' Association,
1715 Northwestern avenue,
Los Angeles, Cal.

We are mighty glad to know that your association is opposed to censorship and is prepared to fight it. What you propose in the way of slides, petitions and literature is along same lines as Board of Trade's campaign. Suggest we exchange copy so that arguments may not conflict. Our campaign is already under way in Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont, New Jersey, and Maryland.

Motion Picture Board of Trade.
Per J. W. Binder, Executive Secretary.

Hearst Thanked for His Efforts

The Producers' Association, in a subsequent telegram to Mr. Binder, said: "We are glad to know of the campaign you have started. We are preparing copy for our slides and will send it to you as soon as completed. In meantime, mail us copies of what you are using so we can get advantage of same."

Producers of Los Angeles have also sent a telegram to William Randolph Hearst, thanking him for his attitude in opposing censorship through his newspapers and in other ways. This message was signed by David Horsley, the William Fox Studios, H. M. Horkheimer, David W. Griffith, Mack Sennett, Thomas H. Ince, Henry Lehrmann, H. O. Davis, Thomas Dixon, Jr., Thomas Persons, L. E. Dougherty, and D. W. Whiting.

"SILAS MARNER"

(Thanhouser-Mutual Masterpicture—Seven Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

GEORGE ELIOT never intended that her famous story should be told in seven reels. It is a good story, of the old-fashioned type, as everyone knows, but there was hardly reason for carrying it out so far beyond the so-called standard length.

There is a lot of preliminary which is really epilogue to the actual story, which need not have been so strongly emphasized, as it serves only to hold the vital action of the piece back longer than is necessary.

Except for this, the picture is deserving of considerable praise. The times of which George Eliot wrote evidently have been carefully studied, and the mounting shows a faithful attention to detail as regards costumes and manners of the late Georgian period in England. There are also some good character studies furnished, the chief of these being Frederick Warde's portrayal of Marner. His acting is strong, convincing and pleasing throughout. He has, for the most part, capable assistance, particularly from Ethel Jewett, who plays Nancy, the village belle, later the wife of the Squire's eldest son with considerable grace and expression, and from Mlle. Valkyrien, who plays the barmaid to whom the young man was secretly married.

The story needs little recounting here. It begins with the disgrace of the weaver, Silas Marner, just as he was about to wed, and his flight from his home town and establishment among strangers. His life then becomes intertwined with that of Squire Cass and his two sons, the elder a steady young man, the younger a profligate. The latter, after blackmailing his brother, whom he has inveigled into marrying the barmaid, steals Marner's hoard of gold, and in fleeing from the hut falls into the well and is drowned. Long afterward, when the barmaid wife, with her little daughter, seeks her husband, the woman dies from exposure, and the little one takes refuge in Marner's cabin. There she grows up and when her real father claims her she refuses to leave the old weaver.

The adaptation of the novel was made by Philip Lonergan, and was directed by the son of Frederick Warde. Morgan Jones, Frank L. McNish, Thomas A. Curran, Hector Dion, Arthur L. Rankin and Elsie Jordan are also in the cast.

INTIMATE VIEWS OF PRISON LIFE FILMED FOR PREMO SUBJECT, "TO HIM THAT HATH"

HARLEY KNOLES, director of the Premo Film Corporation, along with Lionel Belmore, who is the director in "To Him That Hath," Robert Warwick and other members of the Premo Company recently journeyed to Sing Sing and made some of the most intimate prison studies which have ever been taken.

They went into corridors, in the cells, took the men at work, at mess, took close-ups of "lifers," murderers, burglars, went into the death house—all this was to bring out a point of the story, "To Him That Hath," which treats the prison reform question in an unprejudiced manner.

"To Him That Hath" serves as a vehicle for Robert Warwick. In the cast supporting Mr. Warwick is included Anna Nilsson.

LINCOLN SIGNS FOR TWELVE MONTHS WITH LUBIN; FIRST PICTURE "EXPIATION"

E. K. LINCOLN will be seen under the Lubin banner for the next twelve months, having signed a contract to appear as leading man in its feature releases.

Mr. Lincoln has just registered another success in Frances Melbourne's multiple reel feature entitled "Expiation." He will be seen with Ethel Clayton in the near future in a play by Shannon Fife entitled "Ophelia."

MUTUAL PICTURES

Funny?

Most assuredly! That's the very reason for the immense popularity of Cub Comedies, featuring the funniest man in America, George Ovey. Every Cub Comedy calls for a whirlwind of laughter. The fun starts in right at the jump, goes along at a lively gait and then reaches a screaming finish that keeps the audience laughing even after the next film is on.

And Ovey?

He's so welcome that the fans applaud in delightful anticipation when his name is flashed on the screen before the picture begins. Cub Comedies are helping lots of exhibitors win success. They can do the same for you.

A new subject released every Friday through Mutual exchanges.

"THE SOUL'S CYCLE"

(Horsley-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS is one of the most striking and best-produced pictures the Horsley studios have yet turned out. In conception and handling it is novel, and except for one or two crudities in small particulars, stands as an excellent piece of fancy, poetic imagery, and psychic study.

The theme is reincarnation, one which has had its share of treatment recently. Yet none seem to have gone so deeply into the question as has this, nor have the thought and study which this one evidences usually been expended in working out the idea.

The foregoing remarks apply largely to the first three reels, depicting life in the Grecian epoch, about 616 B. C. Some one has made a rigid application of the principles of Attic culture, out of which Isadora Duncan and others of that school make their living, to the actual life of the ancient Greeks.

AGNES SAVES HER ENEMY

It must be confessed, that the gestures and attitudes which we are taught through ballets and expressive dances, to associate with the Greeks of long ago, do not look either convincing or human when applied to everyday conversation and situations.

Nevertheless, the scenes of Grecian fetes, life in the arbors, pergolas, colonnades and exedra of the classic age, is well expressed, and is given a more human touch than anything of the kind we have yet seen.

When Theron, the powerful senator, decrees that the young couple which has flouted him shall be thrown into the seething crater, he himself is condemned to live as a beast until he shall have righted the wrong.

In the next cycle we find him as a lion, and the young couple are a wealthy young broker, and a girl whom he wins as his wife, after sharp rivalry with the villain of the piece. The young man, who is also an African hunter, has captured the lion, and has him at home in a cage.

The lion is liberated by the villain in time to prevent the wrecking of his owner's fortunes. This he does by killing the man who liberated him.

By this act, the soul of Theron is finally liberated from the beast, and passes into its true estate. The picture closes with the impression that the same souls pass on into another cycle.

Whether it is the idea to establish that these cycles are each 2,500 years long does not appear.

Margaret Gibson, John Oaker and Roy Watson head the cast.

"SONS OF SATAN"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THERE is still a formidable array of picture-going folk who revel in an old fashion melodrama of the sort that contains a master-crook whose satanic ability knows no bounds.

William Le Queux furnished such a story in "Sons of Satan." It is a thrilling story, with the suspense constantly at a high pitch because of the involved yet marvelously clear action.

There is never a moment when interest is lacking and it is this which keeps its wild improbability from leaping into prominence.

The particular Son of Satan dealt with in this picture could measure forces and stand an even chance of emerging victorious with any of that body of well known thieves which includes Fantomas, Moriarity, and Nick Carter.

Normand is his name and he conducts a detective agency, a blackmailing establishment, a moving picture company, and a newspaper to propagate his work.

Normand, however, is not the romantic gentleman that any of the above mentioned crooks that occupy important places in the rogues' gallery of detective literature were.

Normand is a deep-dyed villain, the kind of a man that patrons of the second balcony are inclined to hiss at. There are plenty of heroes and heroines in the picture, however, so the melodramatic loving soul will find nothing lacking in this offering.

NORMAND'S CONFEDERATES OVERPOWERED

The picture is a product of the London Film Company, produced by George Loane Tucker, who made such a success with "Traffic of Souls." Tucker and his cast have brought out every sensational point of Le Queux's story.

Added to this there is the continual use of such delighting properties as collapsible fireplaces, elevators hidden between walls, secret doors and passage ways, and last but not least, four substantial walls which shoot down from the ceiling and entrap one of the characters.

The story opens with Normand as a child, quickly and easily treading the well-known path to Perdition. When grown he is at the head of a large band of crooks that operate throughout London.

Then the plot settles down and concerns itself with a single group of people who suffer at the hands of the master mind.

The end, however, discovers Normand conquered at last and forced into a position where he prefers to take his own life rather than face prison walls for the rest of his days.

A clever cast, including Lewis Gilbert as Normand, Charles Rock as his chief pursuer, Blanche Bryan as the heroine, and Arthur Cullen, George Bellamy, Windham Guise, Minna Grey and Douglas Munroe lend advantageously played performances to the picture.

In fact in everything save for photography (this being below the average), "Sons of Satan" is a marvelous crook melodrama.

"NEW YORK"

(Pathe Gold Rooster—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

OPINIONS on pictures differ as widely as do opinions on feminine beauty. It is difficult to find more than three persons in absolute agreement, and this is especially true when a picture is so conspicuously good as to be far above the average.

In this category we hasten to place "New York." After a critical examination from several angles, we have formed the opinion that it is one of the best pictures—say, one of the six best pictures—we have seen this season. This opinion may be influenced sometwhat by comparisons, but so are most opinions.

George Fitzmaurice produced the picture. He worked from a script by Ouida Bergere, which in turn was based on the play by William Hurlbut, which ran successfully in New York a few seasons ago. The mountings are elaborate, the settings true, and the action, which is dramatic in the extreme, is almost always convincing.

Moreover, there is an atmosphere of unusual interest maintained throughout. Thrills also have their share, chief among them being a spectacular fall down a stairway by Fania Marinoff.

The story of New York is known to hundreds. Oliver King, member of an old New York family, falls in love with a chorus girl. His mother objects so strongly to the marriage that he changes his plans, and instead of marrying the girl he keeps the affair secret.

Discovering that she is faithless to him, he casts her off, but as she represents that he is the father of her son, he makes provision for her until she is killed by a fall following a wild revel.

King brings up the boy in the belief that King is only his guardian. Then King marries a young society woman who has made a name for herself as a sculptor. The son, Wendell, begins to show his real inherited tendencies, and when the young wife of his father calls on him to arrange a peace between his father and himself, he attacks her. In self-defense she shoots him, and makes it appear as suicide. She is unable to bear the secret, however, and tells her husband.

He is heartbroken, but more at the thought that it is his own flesh and blood which has been the victim. This is cleared away when it is discovered that the young man was not his son at all.

Florence Reed is featured in the cast. She does not appear until the third reel, but after that she has excellent opportunities to show her ability. Jessie Ralph gives a remarkable character drawing, and John Miltern and Forrest Wynant also do some excellent work.

"THE LOTTERY MAN"

(Comstock Photoplay—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE popular Broadway comedy has been transferred to the screen without losing any of its substance, or any of the comedy which made it a success. In fact, it is a most compact and well-constructed comedy, and the interest is maintained throughout, without resort to slapstick methds or business. In addition, there is some good character drawing, and an atmosphere of healthy, happy outdoor life has been brought into the story.

The leading character is a young college man and football hero. On leaving college he discovers that his mother has lost the little property on which she depended to educate him and support them both. So goes to a wealthy college friend, and through him gets a job as a reporter. Then he gets a great idea.

He induces the paper to start a lottery, with himself as the prize. He agrees to marry the woman who holds the lucky number, or, if she refuses him, she is to have half of the grand prize of $100,000, and he is to get the rest.

Then he falls in love with his chum's cousin, and repents the lottery plan. But it is too late. She, he and his chum both begin buying up papers in the hope that they may get the lucky number and win for him the girl. All the servants in the house are also buying up papers and clipping out tickets.

The drawing is held in front of the city hall, and the square is thronged with an excited crowd of women. They are all disappointed, and follow in a mob to the home of the Lottery Man's chum, where he has taken refuge. He fights them off and goes back into the house, where he finds that the kitchen mechanic has won the prize. She hesitates for a moment, then decides to marry the butler, and take the $50,000 prize instead of the husband. The Prize quickly arranges matters with his chum's cousin to their mutual satisfaction.

FOXEY BUYS UP THE TICKETS

Thurlow Bergen, Lottie Alter, Allan Murnane, Ethel Winthrop, Carolyn Lee and Elsie Esmond compose the cast.

"THE STRANGE CASE OF MARY PAGE"

(Essanay-General—Third and Fourth Chapters)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ALTHOUGH trial scenes have come to be as common in pictures as the villain's cigarette, the producers of "The Strange Case of Mary Page" have managed to make the third and fourth instalments rich in suspense, and through good handling the trial scenes aid them extensively.

The court room with its judge, jury, defendant and counsel is the pivot about which all the action of the two chapters in hand revolves. Witnesses are one after another called to the stand, and each has an interesting story to tell concerning events that led up to the murder of the angel who backed the Mary Page show.

The evidence of each witness sheds even more mystery on the murder mystery, although startling information is given pertaining to the lives of Mary Page, the murdered man and her lover, the lawyer who is defending her.

All of the evidence, of course, stops at a most engrossing point, prior to the murder. What is more, the separate stories corroborate one another—they dovetail in convincing fashion.

Summed up, the following history is gleaned from the evidence: The angel, speaking in the vernacular, "had the goods on Mary Page's father," and consequently was in a position to demand the hand of his daughter.

On the night of the murder Mr. Page was drunk, as he had been on many other nights. He had prevented an elopement of Mary and the lawyer and had afterwards brutally mistreated his daughter, a practice which resulted in temporarily unbalancing her mind.

The angel and Mr. Page framed up some sort of a deal, the details of which were not brought out, on the lawyer, and Mary and her mother discovered the plot. Then one night Mary mysteriously disappeared.

Henry Walthall continues to give a most telling performance in the role of the lawyer. Edna Mayo fulfills the requirements of her role advantageously, save in a few closeups, when her facial interpretation of an unbalanced woman is rather artificial.

The supporting cast is composed of a number of clever Essanay players who lend their best efforts to the benefit of the picture.

"THE CROWN PRINCE'S DOUBLE"

(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon—V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

MAURICE COSTELLO is featured in this story of double identity laid partly in the mythical kingdom of Ostrau, and partly in America.

He is seen as an exiled Prince who, after hastily marrying an American girl, employs a penniless American to impersonate him.

The Prince is being pursued by the secret service chief of his country who has been detailed to get the Prince back to Ostrau for the purpose of forcing his marriage with a Princess whom the Prince does not wish to marry.

Mr. Costello appears in the dual role of Prince and penniless American. He works sincerely to make the parts convincing, but with only a fair degree of success. Norma Talmadge, the feminine lead, is seen to fine advantage as the American girl.

THE PRINCE IS TOLD HE MUST MARRY

Others in a competent cast are: Howard Hall, Anders Randolf, Thomas Mills, Thomas Brooke, Daniel Leighton, Anna Laughlin and Leila Blau.

The production is mounted in good style. Scenes show the interior and exterior of a palace, New York harbor, country estates, and various other locations which give the picture variety of interest. Van Dyke Brooke, the director, exercised care and attention to detail, and in respect to his work the subject is entirely acceptable.

In the early action, extras are used in realistic mob scenes, and later in a ball room set.

The plot contains the elements of a good mystery story, and at times carries suspense. The denouement, however, leaves a good deal to be desired. Summed up, "The Crown Prince's Double" is an average feature.

"THE WOMAN IN 47"

(Frohman-Equitable—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE WOMAN IN 47" was adapted from the book by Frederick Chapin and produced by the Frohman Amusement Corporation under the direction of George Irving. Alice Brady plays the title role and is taxed heavily by its emotional requirements. Miss Brady rises equal to any occasion that the scenario offers her. Her part is not varied; it is keyed at the same point throughout, but it is loaded with sympathy and is powerful for this reason.

Viola Donizetti, an Italian girl, flees to America to escape the persecution of her father and the brutal husband he has selected for her. Her sweetheart is unable to meet the ship, so Viola is conducted to her lodgings by his cousin. The cousin forces his attention upon the girl, and she runs away.

Later she procures a position in the household of Sharpless, but here, too, young Sharpless, a man about town, presses his undesired attentions on poor Viola. As a result of her resistance she is discharged, and next she is taken under the wing of Collingswood, a lawyer. Collingswood gives her a fine apartment, lots of clothes and money, and she innocently accepts. Finally Viola discovers that her "benefactor" is married.

At last she meets her sweetheart again, and they plan to get married. They procure room 47 in a hotel, and Viola makes herself comfortable while Tony goes for a priest. Collingswood, who has sunk to a degrading position since his affair with Viola, takes Room 48, in the same hotel.

Deciding to end it all, Collingswood writes a note to the effect that the woman in 47 can furnish the reason for his death, then he shoots himself. A reporter finds the note and scenting a big story, as he is already acquainted with Viola's suspected past, he tells Tony the entire affair, but the priest prevails upon the young man to forget the note.

The similarity of the various episodes of this photoplay is perhaps the only thing in its disfavor. With so many beastly men in the cast, all of them successively directing their attentions toward Viola, the observer is inclined to forget that the picture is a drama, but then Miss Brady's acting will often prevent this.

The mounting of the subject is done to good advantage, while the photography, like that of all Frohman subjects, is very good. William Raymond, John Warwick, George D. Melville, Eric Blind, Lillian Concord, Tom McGrath and Bert Rooney are in the cast.

"VULTURES OF SOCIETY"

(Essanay-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

AN unusually interesting story, certain, in our opinion, to grip the majority of picturgoers, is told in this subject. In some respects the theme is remarkable. All the principal characters, with a single exception, are engaged in some sort of crookedness. There is not a single genuinely moral person in the whole lot.

Illicit sex relations, thieving, unscrupulousness, and abduction are all worked into the plot, which is a series of adventures. The picture is plainly a satire on high life and low life at their junction point, and as such it is completely successful.

THE ADVENTURESS WINS

The chief vulture is a society thief, who abducts a prince, and turns him over to a band of crooks, while the thief masquerades in high society as the prince. The other half of the story concerns a boarding school girl who, after her first false step, takes the "easiest way," and becomes an adventuress. The third conspicuous vulture is a middle-aged millionaire, whose mistress the adventuress becomes.

These threads of action are knit together in a very clever way, so that as a whole the story is convincing. The suggestive situations are handled without offense, but their meaning will be readily understood by the mature.

The picture is put on in elaborate style. The home of the millionaire, and the apartment of his mistress are shown in two or three very large and ornate interiors. Scenes employing a large number of people are a ball at the home of the millionaire, and a masked ball in the apartment of his mistress. The latter, of course, is a costume affair. Other sets and locations will please the most critical.

The acting also is uniformly finished. Lillian Drew gives a really vivid impersonation of the adventuress; E. H. Calvert does some of his characteristically clever work as the society thief; Ernest Maupain, one of the best character actors on the screen, performs finely as the millionaire; Marguerite Clayton is pretty enough as the millionaire's dissipated young daughter. Others are Florence Oberle, Arthur W. Bates, William V. Burns, Charles Stine, Hugh E. Thompson, Edward Arnold, Jack Meredith, Charles Racey, May Howard, and Virginia Hammond.

E. H. Calvert, the director, has done his work very well. The story was written by Richard Goodall, and adapted by Mr. Calvert.

"Vultures of Society" is a highly sophisticated picture, absorbing, and unusual at several points.

"THE WINNING OF MISS CONSTRUE"

(Gold Seal-Universal—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

HERE is another Robert Leonard feature that is everything a feature ought to be. Strictly speaking it has a dramatic plot, but it results in a high class comedy-drama with the accent on the comedy by virtue of the fact that all save one of its characters are drawn with a humorous pen.

And so "The Winning of Miss Construe" has a number of characters that continually excite laughter by their actions in a dramatic story.

The combination has proved very successful as handled by Robert Leonard and his supporting company headed by Ella Hall, for we have never laughed quite so heartily as we did at some of the situations in this picture, while when it came to a more sober phase of the story we were hugely entertained by the contrasting of the action.

There are bits that demand relation if the originality and effectiveness of the picture are to be understood. Take the scene in which the prigish floorwalker visits the room of a young girl out of work.

He looks at the bottle which contains a feeble portion of milk, he shakes the cracker box and nothing but crumbs are discovered, then he offers her money in an insinuating manner and she tears it up and bids him be gone.

He doesn't go, but here's the point. The well meaning artist from across the hall thinking of being of assistance to the girl, comes to her room and goes through the same actions that the floorwalker had gone through before him. The girl thinks he is just as bad as the rest of them, she tears up his last few dollars and shows him the door.

The contrast of these two scenes is great, and when we see the poor artist unintentionally start to emulate the advances of the floorwalker, we know what is going to come at the end of the scene. This increases the volume of comedy contained in the latter scene to an uproarious degree.

Again, when the artist, taking more pity on his neighbor across the way, leaves a plate of food at her door every morning, only to have it devoured by a hungry canine, the humor rises to unusual heights.

Leonard as the artist, Ella Hall as the girl, and Marc Robbins as an old actor are the principals, and their work is excellent. Kingsley Benedict plays the floorwalker, and Betty Schade is a shop girl. Settings and photography are secondary but entirely adequate.

We have seen many worthy three-reelers during the past year, and "The Winning of Miss Construe" can take its place with the very foremost of them and perhaps it is even to be placed above them all.

"MAN AND HIS SOUL"

(Quality-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

AS this is a picture with both a moral and a story and as that moral exhorts one to heed the whisperings of his Conscience, we have duly conferred with ours and feel not the slightest hesitancy in remarking that "Man and His Soul" is a most gratifying and worth-while subject.

And if that is not enough of a recommendation, the presence of Francis X. Bushman in an ideal role should give it added and multiplied weight.

"Man and His Soul" points out the sordid and grasping side of every day business life and it convinces because that sordidness converts a man with a Conscience into an inhuman money-making machine in a very realistic way.

Then Conscience accompanied by Love returns to the man that Power temporarily ruined and the end pictures the hero as a philanthropist. This latter change is done with equal realism though it is so much more uncommon than the first.

Do not make the mistake of believing that "Man and His Soul" is an allegorical and preachy drama, because of the capitals employed on the nouns.

There art a few allegorical scenes, as introductory, showing the birth of Conscience and its work, while the man is often approached by his good soul, but the story is mainly a drama and one of great power, delightful touches and contrasting situations.

Mr. Bushman appears as John Conscience, at first a college professor who, because of his progressive ideas of reform, is discharged by the capitalists who finance the institution. Then, because he sticks to his ideals of right and wrong he is unable to hold any of his later positions.

During his wanderings he meets Mary Knowles, a girl who, because of her decency has been unable to succeed in business. John prevents her from seeking solace in the river and finally by applying to old friends, the Mights, he secures employment for both of them.

John rises to a position of importance but he loses it at length because his sympathy for those who suffer clashes with the business ideals of his employer.

And John also believes he has lost the love of Mary because he discovers her in the arms of Stephen Might, Jr. He misinterprets the scene and denounces the girl.

Then John forgets his Conscience and plunges into finance, becoming a mighty power in the business world. He is known as John Power. Mary, unknown to both, works in one of his factories. John concentrates all his forces against the Mights and finally brings them to his feet and then he learns from Stephen that Mary always loved him. A fire in his factory reunites the two and then Conscience starts to work again.

So gratifying is the subject that one goes away imagining John going about doing worlds of good, such as reinstating the family he evicted, easing up on his employees and introducing the necessary improvements.

Beverly Bayne makes an appealing character of Mary Knowles, and Jack Davidson does exceptional work as Stephen Might, Jr. Edward Brennan, Charles Prince and Helen Dunbar are others.

Jack Noble's direction is altogether suitable. His large business office settings are particularly realistic and are peopled with players who look as if they were business men.

The photography is not to be adversely criticised. In fact, "Man and His Soul," aside from being an excellent Francis X. Bushman subject is in other respects an extraordinarily good piece of work.

"PARAMOUNT PICTOGRAPHS"

(Paramount—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS is a novelty, and might be described as a decided advance along the lines of dressing the program. It is the news weekly idea carried a little further and given a magazine treatment; in fact, it is an animated magazine, treating the live subjects of the day in the same manner as the news weeklies handle events of actual news importance.

The film is cleverly and attractively arranged. One sees first the cover of a magazine, "Paramount Pictographs," with the American flag prominent on the cover; this is brought down to close foreground, and the pictured flag dissolves into a real flag, floating over an army encampment. Then the page is turned, and we are in the midst of an illustrated discussion of preparedness, by Frederick Palmer and Henry Reuterdahl. Some striking pictures, such as views of destroyers at full speed, taken from an aeroplane, are given in this department.

Other departments are "Putting the Gyroscope to Work," by Elmer G. Sperry, "Testing Your Mind," by Prof. Hugo Munsterberg, "Better Babies," by the Woman's Home Companion, and the New York Board of Health, a fashion department, a political cartoon by J. R. Bray, and "The Birth of the Trickids," a novel act by animated dolls.

ANNA HELD IN TWO STRIKING GOWNS SHE WEARS IN "MME. LA PRESIDENTE," AND A SCENE FROM THAT MOROSCO-PARAMOUNT PHOTOPLAY

"MADAME LA PRESIDENTE"

(Morosco-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY J. C. JESSEN

A PRIVATE showing of "Madame La Presidente" was arranged and given by the Morosco Feature Play Company at Woodley's theatre, Los Angeles, one evening during the past week in honor of Anna Held, star of this subject, who was appearing in vaudeville at that time.

All members of the producing staff including Director Frank Lloyd, and Elliott Clawson, author of the screen version, were present at this showing, together with a number of exhibitors and M. L. Lewis of the Progressive Paramount Exchange and his staff of assistants.

Previous to the projection of the film, Miss Held was introduced and made a very brief talk in which she expressed her pleasure to be able to see herself mirrored on the screen.

This farce comedy will undoubtedly prove one of the most attractive Morosco offerings. The play from which this was adapted has numerous comedy situations that have been very excellently brought out in the screen version.

The settings, and especially the interiors, for this are extremely elaborate. This is particularly true with respect to that of the office of the minister of justice.

Miss Held appears as the star of "The Pet of the Harem" Company, and because she enjoys a wild night with several of the officers of a small French city, the chief executive of the city causes the chief of police to deprive her of the hospitality of the hotel.

Her acquaintances of the night before send her to see the unkind person who had issued such an order, and she finding that his wife is absent for a few days takes possession of the home.

Here she causes the elderly spotless town official to really like her attentions. It is while here she becomes acquainted with the minister of justice, played by Forrest Stanley, which acquaintance after numerous misfortunes to her wearing apparel, results in her accepting the title of Madame Gaudet, wife of the minister of justice instead of becoming the wife of the president of justices.

The part taken by Miss Held is of a decided commedienne vampire type, and her screen work is equally as effective as her personal appearance on the stage. The wee bit missing is that delightful French accent.

Forrest Stanley in this gives his best work for the screen, and Herbert Standing as M. Augustine Galipaux portrays the character part in straight make-up, in his usual good form. Lydia Yeamans Titus portrays the role of Madame Galipaux, bringing out the comedy situations within the role in an excellent manner.

The cast is an exceptionally big one, and all players were well picked for their respective roles. Director Frank Lloyd has in the making of this picture outdone all his former work for the screen.

"THE LORDS OF HIGH DECISION"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS dramatic subject featuring Cyril Scott and made at the eastern Universal studios under the direction of Jack Harvey, tells the story of an idealistic youth, fresh from college, entering the business world and discovering that everything is all wrong with the system. L. Lippert prepared the scenario from the story by Meredith Nicholson.

The young man, Wayne Craighill, enters his father's mining business and is straightway in sympathy with the underpaid and overworked employes. He falls in love with Jean, the daughter of a small mine operator, whom old Craighill is driving to the wall, but later developments bring to light her secret marriage. As time goes on, the miners call a strike, but Wayne stays them off, saying he will help them. The father marries a social parasite, and later it is discovered that he has embezzled bank funds. The miners grow furious. They come to the Craighill home intent to kill, but Wayne pacifies them, saying he has helped them once and he will do so again.

Leaving the house they go to the mines and proceed to blow them up. One of the blasts kills Jean's husband, and one of them strikes a streak of oil, and the day is saved for the mine owner and his bank, while Wayne and Jean are left to themselves.

The story as presented brings several questions to the mind of the spectator and does not answer them. For instance, how did Wayne pacify the miners when they threatened to strike the first time? When and for what reason did Craighill embezzle the band funds? And what was the reason for bringing in the story of the social parasite, and her marriage to the capitalist?

Neither does the picture present Wayne (Cyril Scott) as very much of a hero. He is a man of words and not of action, and his unfulfilled promises to the miners lay emphasis on that fact. His love affair with Jean doesn't arouse sympathy because Jean's husband is a perfectly decent sort of a fellow and his death is tragic. Nor is it likely that Jean would be willing to accept Wayne's affections beside the unburied body of the husband.

THE MINERS PRESENT THEIR PLEA

The mining scenes are, on the other hand, decidedly realistic, and the series of dynamite explosions work up a little excitement, but the studio panorama of a mining town which opens the feature is not lifelike.

The supporting cast includes Joseph Gerard, William Welsh, Joe Daly, Margaret Scervin, Mildred Gregory and Mrs. Brundage.

GENERAL FILM OPENS BRANCH AT CHARLOTTE, N. C., UNDER WILLIAM CONN

THE General Film Company has opened a branch at Charlotte, N. C.

The policy of President George Kleine of the General Film Company in recognizing efficient service has led to the selection of William Conn for the post of branch manager of Charlotte.

Mr. Conn has been with the General Film Company for sometime in the South. His acquaintance with exhibitors in this territory is extensive.

He has familiarized himself with all branches of the film industry from an exchange man's point of view. His recent experience has been in the booking department and also in the selling of films.

ROSELLE AND CARLETON ENGAGED BY KLEINE FOR SERIAL FEATURING BILLIE BURKE

ANNOUNCEMENT is made that William Roselle, star of the speaking stage, and William T. Carleton, operatic star, have been signed by George Kleine to play important parts in the new Rupert Hughes film novel in which Billie Burke will be featured.

Mr. Roselle is a favorite on Broadway, and has appeared in a number of features recently. He will be cast as the brother of the heroine.

Mr. Carleton has been seen in many operatic successes throughout America. He will be cast as the father of the heroine. Henry Kolker will play the male lead opposite Billie Burke.

"MERELY MARY ANN"

(William Fox—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

ISRAEL ZANGWILL'S play has been built into an entertaining comedy drama which exploits the charm of Vivian Martin in the role of the slavey. Certain departures from the stage version have been made, but most of these strengthen rather than weaken the story, and besides afford opportunity for the injection of comedy touches which are among the most pleasing things in the picture.

Director John G. Adolfi, who was assisted by John W. Kellette, has done his work very well indeed, so well that the great majority of picture goers will be distinctly pleased with the finished produet. Adolfi has mixed comedy situations and near-tragic situations with fine discrimination. Little touches, like the invasion of a jam-jar by a youngster, Mary Ann's affection for her canary and similar incidents add immensely to the picture's power to please.

After all, however, it is Miss Martin who is chiefly responsible for that. She shows unusual animation, naturalness and a sort of pathetic charm in the role of the little girl who goes from the humble position of maid-of-all-work in a cheap boarding house to that of a society debutante. The characterization is one of the best Miss Martin has ever done.

Harry Hilliard, as Launcelot Melmont, a young musician, gives a convincing impersonation. Sidney Bracy appears as a shady dance hall character; Niles Welch as a friend of Melmont's; Isabel O'Madigan as the boarding house mistress, and Laura Lyman as her daughter. Others are: E. N. Hoyt, H. Fergus, Florence Ashbrook and Royal Byron. The cast, it may be said, is good throughout.

The sets, like the story, are simple and unpretentious, but they bring out the necessary atmosphere. The fight, in which Melmont saves Mary Ann from Bracy, is realistic to a degree.

"Merely Mary Ann," because of its ability to bring laughter and tears, is a picture with a universal appeal. It will interest any sort of audience and send any audience away in a happy mood.

"LIFE'S BLIND ALLEY"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

THIS picture does not mark a motographic epoch, nor is it the apotheosis of cinematography. It is not a problem play, a sex play or a "timely" play, and it certainly is not a "thriller." It is the corn-beef-and-cabbage kind of a film that your patrons will like—especially if it has been surfeited on chocolate eclairs.

The fun is wholesome, the atmosphere clean, the action straightforward, and the characters nearly always act like ordinary human beings. This naturalness is not humdrum and wearying—the action is always interesting.

The feminine part of your audience will look at Harold Lockwood and be pleased, the masculine contingent will eye May Allison, and also be pleased. These two do considerable billing and cooing in the course of the five reels, but even old married couples won't grin sardonically at their amours.

The fact that the settings are Western, and chaps, sombreros, and other cowboy accessories are used should not class the picture as a Western, in its generally accepted usage. Those who look for the sheriff's daughter, the stage-coach holdup, and the miner's wash basin will watch in vain.

Walt Landis, a ranch owner, is on the verge of ruin because of a protracted drought. Adam Keating, an Eastern millionaire, is hunting in the region, and losing his way nearly dies of thirst before Landis rescues him.

The pair become fast friends, and when Keating later invites his daughter Helen to come to the ranch for an outing Landis falls in love with her. She refuses him, however, and marries a profligate man of her own set. In sheer loneliness Landis writes to a factory girl who had put her address in a box of collars.

He finally marries this girl. Helen is miserable with her worthless husband, and Landis is disappointed in the girl of the slums. When Helen comes to the ranch with her husband she confesses to Landis that she loves him, but they feel that they cannot straighten the tangled threads of their lives.

Others in the cast are Robert Klein, Nell Franzen, Perry Banks, Warren Ellsworth, William Tedmarsh, Carl Morrison, and Pete Morrison.

"THE BLACK ORCHID"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

MRS. OWEN BRONSON, who wrote the scenario of this picture, produced a poorly motivated, but interesting story. It deals with army life in India, and the scenes of a vampire. Kathlyn Williams is the siren, and her wickedness is transparent but successful.

It is necessary for her to overact at times to give some degree of plausibility to the imperfect motivation referred to. When this vehemence is not required she puts her points across with quiet effectiveness.

"WE WILL SEARCH FOR HIM"

This is one of the first pictures produced by T. N. Heffron since he left the Chicago Selig studio. He has realized many of the possibilities of the Jungle-Zoo, and has created a tropical atmosphere with great success. Grace Darmond, who was formerly a lead in the Chicago company, appears in an ingenue role.

Wheeler Oakman, Edith Johnson, Earle Foxe, Lillian Hayward, Harry Lonsdale and other popular Selig players are also included in the cast.

Viola Morton is a charmer of men, and her cottage in the India army post is the rendezvous of the officers. She falls in love with Captain Hastings, but he does not reciprocate her feeling.

He goes back to England on a furlough, and there falls in love with Eleanor Roberts. She gives him a black orchid from her collection, and this he takes back to India with him. In trying to secure a duplicate of the exotic flower he is stung by a snake, and is discovered in a senseless condition by Viola.

She takes him to her hunting lodge and warns him that if he tries to escape she will set her captive tigers on his trail. In spite of this he plunges into the jungle and just reaches a searching party before the wild beasts overtake him. In the party is Eleanor, who has come to marry him. Viola, who had been following the tigers, is attacked by them and torn to pieces.

"TENNESSEE'S PARDNER"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS Lasky drama marks the third appearance of Fannie Ward on the Paramount program. The effect that Miss Ward creates in the role of eighteen-year-old Tennessee can best be summed up in the unvarying repartee of two feminine devotees of pictures who sat behind us.

"Isn't she cute?" was the favorite line of these two. And she is. Miss Ward can look and act perfectly at home in an ingenue's part. She convinces. She always looks the part, and is very attractive.

"Tennessee's Pardner" makes its way to the screen through a roundabout way. The play was by Scott Marble, who procured his material from one of Brete Harte's tales of the West. Marion Fairfax prepared the scenario and George Melford directed.

The subject is admirably suited for the screen. The theme is excellent for Western use. The characters are clearly defined.

The few scenes wherein many characters appear are delightful. We have in mind particularly the one where all the habitues of the Sudden Stop Inn turn out to greet Tennessee.

Tennessee has been brought up in the care of priests. Years before her mother had eloped with the man who killed her father. Jack Hunter had looked after her ever since, calling her his partner. Tennessee believes her father is still alive, and Jack hates to disillusion her.

Her mother and the other man have become thieves. When captured, the mother, not aware of Tennessee's identity, tells her that Romaine, the robber, is her father and consequently Tennessee helps him to escape. The return of Jack clears up the mystery. Romaine is pursued and hanged, while Tennessee is united with her mother and Jack.

TENNESSEE IS FOUND

Tennessee's is a sympathetic character and the involved plot woven about her, has any number of exciting situations and is clearly told. Fannie Ward and the good Western story will, without a doubt, cause the picture to be received with an appreciative degree of enthusiasm.

Melford's direction is in general typical of Lasky's product. Closeups are employed only occasionally, which is wise in the present case. The scenes in general are a cross between a full set and a closeup, with the characters in the close foreground.

A few panoramas show the Western wilds and the prairie schooners. Whether or not the United States boasted of such good roads as were seen in the picture we leave to those who lived and saw in '64. The Lasky light effects are as usual very good.

Next to Miss Ward, the most deserving member of the cast is Raymond Hatton who in character makeup portrays the part of Gewilliker Hay, champion liar of the Coast.

Hatton's characterization of the part is a true delight. Jack Dean is a fair Jack Hunter, although we have seen better heroic types. Charles Clary as Romaine and Jessie Arnold as Tennessee's mother are convincing in their interpretations of the heavy parts.

"THE PRIMITIVE STRAIN"

(Essanay—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

THE pugilistic sky-pilot is not a new figure in literature or the photodrama, and Western dance-hall scenes are familiar to every screen fan.

Since the scenes of this drama are built around a scrappy parson, and laid in a mining-camp version of the cabaret, the essentials of the piece are not novel.

These familiar ingredients are carefully measured, and when whipped to a froth, make a palatable concoction.

The big scene is the catch-as-catch-can, knock-down-and-drag-out battle between the belligerent minister and the saloon proprietor.

While neither of the participants were really maimed for life, this bout certainly gave them a full day's exercise before the pastor cut loose his haymaker.

"YOU HAVE KILLED HER"

The part of the parson gave Edward Arnold a magnificent chance for high-grade acting, and while he fell down on his big assignment now and then, the bulk of his work is of big calibre.

Hugh Thompson plays the heavy with his usual skill, and Nell Craig registers big with her portrayal of a fallen woman who reformed.

John Harris, a minister in a fashionable church, learns that his father once betrayed a Canadian girl, and that his orphaned half-sister is now living in the Northwest frontier. He goes to Canada and builds a mission.

He converts many habitues of Dan McGraw's dance-hall, among them, Marie, the favorite of the place. This puts McGraw in a rage, and in a fit of lust he attacks the girl.

She drags herself to the mission, and dies there. Harris discovers that she is his half-sister, and he goes to the dance-hall. There he has a terrific fight with McGraw, and finally kills him.

"WHEN LOVE IS KING"

(Kleine-Edison—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

ALTHOUGH the reviewer had to stand throughout the showing, he enjoyed this picture immensely. This is intended as a recommendation. The touch of romance, poetry, and above all, of humanity, is deft, and it holds the attention and interest until the end.

Judged by other standards, the picture is somewhat faulty. What would be good comedy and good satire is spoiled by a constant striving to be dramatic, and by certain technical faults in construction, which impress one as being amateurish—or at least as improperly experienced.

Still the picture has a great human appeal. The photography is of the highest order, and the print shown for the reviewers was richly tinted so that both interior and exterior effects were presented at their greatest value.

The picture tells of a young King of Norland, who came to this country with one of his closest companions, and followed by a band of assassins who sought to kill him in order that his cousin might have the throne.

The king and his companion were engaged, through a freak of chance, as extra men at a reception given by the money king of America, and there the king met and fell in love with Marcia, the money king's daughter.

The ambassador of Norland recognizes his sovereign, and introduces him and his companion as a couple of barons. Later a telegram from the ambassador announces that the barons are impostors, and they are driven from the money king's home.

On the way they are attacked by the band of assassins, but manage to kill one of them and make their escape. Marcia, who has come to their aid with a rifle, shows that she is genuinely in love with the "impostor" and he and his comrade steal her and flee in her father's automobile.

The party is found the next morning cooking their breakfast over a campfire in the hills. Marcia tells her father she really loves the "impostor," and soon the ambassador arrives with the news that the man is King of Norland. Here we have several scenes reminiscent of "Beaucaire," but they are effective.

Well, it develops that the king simply must marry the Princess of Avalon, so for the sake of his daughter the money king goes over and buys out the Avalon principality and substitutes his daughter for the princess; so when the king arrives for the formal ceremony he finds the girl of his choice installed in the princess's robes.

Sumner Williams is the author of this story. In the case are Richard Tucker, as the king; Carrol McComas, as Marcia, and Bigelow Cooper, Vivian Perry, John Sturgeon, Harold Metzler, Carlton King, T. Tamamoto, Robert Brower, Charles Sutton, Guido Colucci and Helen Strickland.

POPULARITY OF PICTURES INCREASES IN TEXAS

THE Opera House at Wichita Falls will show pictures in the future. Sol Dan, of Memphis, Tenn., is managing the house and has installed a large orchestra.

The Lincoln theatre, Galveston, under the management of W. C. McFadden, has been transferred from the Lincoln Amusement Company to Charles Trifon, owner of the Cozy and Star theatres.

The Mission theatre, Barnes and King operators, at Sulphur Springs, which was burned several weeks ago, is being rebuilt and will open March 1.

Hartman Brothers have purchased the Empress theatre at Rockwall from C. C. Cobb, and will remodel it.

The Bioscope theatre, Dallas, will soon change its name to The Strand, A. Kornman.

Ground has been broken at Hereford for a modern theatre building which will be used for moving pictures. The contract calls for the building to be completed by April 1.

PARAMOUNT AMUSEMENT COMPANY TAKES SALT LAKE CITY THEATRE

THE Paramount Amusement Company has taken over the Sullivan and Considine holdings in Salt Lake City and operates the Empress theatre as an exclusive Paramount picture theatre.

Louis Marcus, who has been engaged in bringing the parties interested together, states that the Paramount-Empress as the new house will henceforth be known, will be under the management of H. E. Ellison, an exhibitor who was brought to that city from the Princess theatre, Denver. The house is already opened under the new management.

"HELL'S HINGES"

(Kay-Bee-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

IN this subject, William A. Hart still further clinches his position as one of the foremost "western" actors on the screen. His work in a difficult part is most finished, and his mastery of the situations marked.

Mr. Hart has been assisted by a capable company, and, moreover, by capable direction. Scenic effects have been added to the thrills, and these culminate in the burning of a church, and eventually by the burning of a whole village.

As Blaze Tracy Mr. Hart is one of the leading citizens of Hell's Hinges, a western hamlet which has richly earned its name. When the young preacher and his sister arrive and try a little reform work, he falls in love with Faith, the sister, and consequently is of the greatest assistance to the preacher. The flock grows, and soon enough money is raised to build a little church.

BLAZE MEETS THE PARSON'S SISTER

The spread of religion annoys Silk Miller, proprietor of the notorious saloon and dance hall, and he sets about the ruin of the minister. This he does by getting one of the dance girls to work her wiles, and the young man falls. He is found by his congregation, the next morning, helplessly intoxicated.

In an endeavor to save him, Blaze rides to the next town for a doctor. In the meantime, the preacher, wandering delirious, gets back into the saloon, and is plied with liquor until he is again under the influence. Then the whole crowd starts out to burn the church, with the intoxicated preacher in the front ranks.

There is a gun fight in front of the church, and several of both parties are killed, including the minister; then the church is fired. When Blaze returns with the doctor, he finds Faith weeping over the body of her brother, stretched on the church lawn.

Enraged, he makes his way, pistols in hand, to the saloon; there he holds up the whole crowd, shoots a couple, and by shooting the lamps to the floor, sets the place afire. While the terrorized habitues flee, the whole town goes up in flames. Blaze and Faith make their way off together into a new and better life.

The scenes of the fires, taken from considerable distances, are immense in their sweep of atmosphere and realism. Conviction is the key-note of the entire production, and the dramatic work presented is of the highest order.

Louise Glaum, as the dancing girl, and Clara Williams as Faith, give excellent characterizations. Jack Standing, Alfred Hollingsworth, Robert McKim, J. Frank Burke are also members of the cast.

"HAUNTS FOR RENT"

(Bray-Paramount—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS, the second of the silhouette fatnasics produced by the Bray-Gilbert studios for the Paramount program, is another clever combination of silhouette photography by living actors and animated drawings. The two have been combined and are carefully joined so as to mystify the spectator as to just when the drawing begins and the living actors step out.

In the case of this subject, however, there are small technical defects which mar the illusion. For instance, the drawings have not photographed a dead black; they were slightly gray. like the high-lights of a fogged negative, and they contrast a little with the dead black of the shadow figures, so that it is easy to detect the transformation.

The idea, however, is clever and interesting. The story, itself, is neither. Jim and Sam, two negroes, rivals for the hand of the Fair Lilly, both agree to spend a night at the Coontown Roadhouse, a haunted institution, as a test of love. Both hire professional haunts to disturb their rival's repose, but Sam goes to a cheap wizard, while Jim goes to a real one, and gets superior service. Jim takes his turn first. The haunts do not greatly disturb him and he emerges triumphant.

When Sam takes his turn the haunt appears in the person of a beautiful girl. He falls in love, forgets Lilly, and immediately leads the haunt off to the church, where they are married. Then Jim claims Lilly, and they are married. The high-class haunt then gets in her work. She transforms herself into a demon, and then changes Sam into a chicken, and serves him for Jim's wedding breakfast.

A year later Jim has not paid his haunt bill. So the wizard fixes things up with the stork, and the expected pickaninny arrives as three squirming young negroes. Jim hurries off to pay the bill before something worse happens, and the wizard tells him to go home in peace, as there will be only one child. This he finds to be true and everybody is happy again. The drawings are by L. M. Glackens.

NEW CASTLE, BLOOMINGTON, ILL., IS UNDER THE MANAGEMENT OF WILLIAM R. LYON

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., has a picture house that it points to with pride—the Castle Theatre, which opened its doors on January 24. The theatre has been leased by William R. Lyon and Delmar E. Schepp.

Mr. Lyon managed the old Castle Theatre, which was razed to make way for the new playhouse. Mr. Schepp is manager of the Chatterton Theatre, Bloomington.

The new Castle seats 1,100 persons, and a clear view of the screen is had from every seat in the house. The screen is the largest used in the state of Illinois, outside of Chicago.

Besides Mr. Lyon, the house staff consists of Bert Dillingham, operator; Edward Dimmitt, doorman, and Harry Wilson, organist.

NILES WELCH, JUVENILE, IS BACK WITH METRO, IN "KISS OF HATE"

NILES WELCH, the well-known juvenile actor, who was featured in several Metro productions, including "Emmy of Stork's Nest," "A Yellow Streak," and "Her Debt of Honor," and who recently joined the Fox forces to play the leading role in "Merely Mary Ann," has again returned to Metro.

He has begun work on a prominent role in "The Kiss of Hate," in which Ethel Barrymore is starred. "The Kiss of Hate" is an original story by Mme. de Grissac, and is being produced under the direction of William Nigh.

JANE GAIL AND MARY FULLER IN TWO BLUEBIRD RELEASES FOR MARCH

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"Just Gold." (Biograph. Mon., Feb. 14.)—This reissue is of highly dramatic character. Three brothers leave home for the gold-fields. The fourth remains to care for his parents, and is despised by his sweetheart until she realizes the sacrifice he is making.

One of the brothers strikes gold; the second drives a mine and it caves in on the man beneath him, who he later finds was his brother. The third is driven mad by privation in the desert, and attacks the surviving brother; both are killed.

The three have given up their lives for gold, while the fourth lives for love. Lillian Gish, Lionel Barrymore, Charles H. West, Alfred Paget, Joseph McDermott, Charles H. Mailes and Kate Bruce are in the cast.

"Pique." (Biograph. Three reels. Wed., Feb. 16.)—There are some excellent character studies in this picture. Out of pique Mabel weds Arthur Standish, and later discovers that Raymond Lessing, whom she really loves, seeks to marry her stepmother, Lucille, for her money.

She quarrels with her husband's parents and tells them her real reason for having married him. Lucille spurns Raymond, and he turns again to Mabel, but she has meanwhile fallen in love with her husband.

He hires men to kidnap her child, out of revenge, but there is a fight and he is killed. The child is rescued and Mabel and her husband reconciled. The cast includes Thomas Jefferson, William Russell, Gretchen Hartman, Franklin Ritchie and Isabel Rea.

"The Primitive Strain." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Feb. 5.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Man in Him." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Feb. 8.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. When John Stone becomes engaged to Margaret Houston, his rival, Harry Gardiner, plots his undoing. Gardiner steals some gems at a dance, and puts them in Stone's pocket.

When they are found there, Stone is sent to prison for a long term of years. He comes out a haggard wreck, and happens to go to the home of Margaret, now Mrs. Gardiner, to beg an overcoat. She gives him one of her husband's, and in it he finds a letter proving Gardiner's guilt.

He is about to expose his enemy, when thoughts of Margaret cause him to leave without proving his innocence.

In the cast are G. M. Anderson, Ruth Saville, and Lee Willard.

"Gold Dust." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Feb. 15.)—Not shown for review.

"Vernon Howe Bailey's Sketch Book of Chicago." (Essanay. Split reel, with scenic. Wed., Feb. 16.)—This animated cartoon not shown for review.

"Politeness Pays." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Feb. 19.)—Not shown for review.

"A Molar Mix-Up." (Kalem. Wed., Feb. 16.)—A Bud comedy concerning a grand mix-up caused by the flirtatiousness of three couples. It is staged in a dental parlor and the latter scenes, in which Bud crosses the wires, causing everything metallic in the house to be charged with electricity, are the funniest in the piece. However, the entire reel is much too silly to be very funny, and while those who heavily crave comedy will find some enjoyment in it, the person who discriminates will be unlikely to appreciate it.

"The Guiding Hand." (Kalem. Fri., Feb. 18.)—A one reel drama that is really a treat to see. It is based on brotherly antagonism and brotherly love brought about by an old servant in the employ of the two young men. It is one of the best one reelers seen in many a day, being at once sympathetic and strong. Howard Irving Young wrote, the scenario, while Robert Ellis, Arthur Albertson and Richard Purdon appear to excellent advantage in the leading parts.

"The Perilous Swing." (Kalem. Sat., Feb. 19.)—This has a thrill, and a good one, measuring up to the very finest of previous "Hazards of Helen" offerings, but the story is very poorly put on. The action is slow throughout, and some of the important situations are not handled to good effect. The thriller is executed in fine style by Helen Gibson when she swings from the top end of an open drawbridge, suspended by a rope. The bank robbery which opens the reel starts the story off well, but its slowness is marked.

"A Modern Paul." (Lubin. Three reels. Thurs., Feb. 3.)—While this picture has a most satisfying and appealing character some of its phases will fail utterly to convince because the time has past when a modern healer can restore whole arms for broken ones by the mere touch of the hand and make his action appear anything more convincing than a passing whim of the author. However, "A Modern Paul" is most pleasing, due to the change which religion works on a murderer, a thief and a woman of the dance hall. Melvin Mayo, director, also appears in the title part and acts well, but his wig is bad. Others are Helen Wolcott, George Routh, Alan Forrest and Jay Morley. Julian Louis Lamothe prepared the scenario.

"The Election Bet." (Lubin. Sat., Feb. 5.)—Billie Reeves rolling a walnut down Broad Street, Philadelphia, in payment of an election bet is a funny enough sight to cause this comedy to rank way above his usual output. The story, cleverly evolved, is by Mark Swan, and Reeves and James Cassady carry the burden of the action.

"The Diamond Thieves." (Lubin. Mon., Feb. 7.)—A story of diamond thieves and how they were captured in time to keep the good name of a physician secure. The story is rather elementary, although its excitement runs high many times. It will appeal strongly to the lovers of crook stories. L. C. Shumway, Ronald Bradbury, Helen Wolcott, Francelia Billington and George Routh are the principals.

"The Last Shot." (Lubin. Two reels. Tues., Feb. 8.)—George Terwilliger has added a novel incident to the story of the defeated rival, being moved at last by his former sweetheart's little children, but the novelty of it refuses to convince one of its possibility. However, the two reels are well acted, gorgeously set, and decently photographed, while the acting of Earl Metcalfe, Ormi Hawley and Arthur Matthews is pleasing. William H. Turner registers effectively in the Italian's small part.

"The Black Orchid." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., Feb. 14.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere.

"Making Good." (Selig. Sat., Feb. 19.)—This is a typical Western of the Tom Mix variety. The outstanding feature is the excellent horsemanship of the players. The story is not unfamiliar.

Old man Wilson will not hear of a marriage between his daughter Vicky and Tom, a cowpuncher. He changes his mind when Tom, with Vicky's assistance, captures some bandits who have robbed him.

Supporting Tom Mix are Victoria Forde, Joe Ryan, and Pat Chrisman.

E. Powers, and other interesting views.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Jerry's Millions." (Cub. Fri., Feb. 11.)—George Ovey is given another fast eighteen minutes in this comedy. As Jerry, he finds himself unable to square his boardbill, and in trying to escape becomes involved with his landlady and two policemen.

He vanquished the policemen, but not the landlady. Then a letter comes. The landldy opens it, reads that Jerry is heir to $3,000,000, and immediately proposes to him. Jerry grabs the letter and flees.

He reaches his sweetheart's home, but papa is on the job, and he hides in a closet, where he finds a burglar also hiding. Papa fires through the closet door, and runs squarely into the arms of the two policemen aforementioned.

"Life's Blind Alley." (American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe. Five reels. Mon., Feb. 14.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Ruth's Remarkable Reception." (Falstaff. Tues., Feb. 15.)—This is a somewhat unusual comedy, in which the action is supplied by a crowd of boys, and they furnish plenty of it.

The boys are from the toughest part of the city, and are the guests of a spinster, who has given them a party at her home in spite of the warnings of all her acquaintances, and the police.

The boys have a good time, the aged butler is plugged behind the ear with a slung-shot, some valuable statuary is broken, and the chandeliers are pulled from the ceiling, when the little toughs spy on the steps of the adjoining house a studious, bespeckled lad reading Ruskin.

They lasso him and drag him over to the party, where, in a burst of anger, he trounces the whole crowd. The little desperadoes are quickly converted into admirers of Ruskin.

"A Modern Sphinx." (American. Three reels. Tues., Feb. 15.)—Reincarnation is used in this drama with very good effect. The settings are in good taste, and the players seem to enter into the spirit of the times they are supposed to live in.

Winnifred Greenwood is unusually good, and her support is praiseworthy. The allegory is not only effective as such, but it also serves to introduce a ballet of attractive girls in classical draperies. This is a very good program release.

Asa, the daughter of a sorcerer, lived three thousand years ago. She was willful and selfish, and so her father decided to put her in the twentieth century to learn the secret of unselfish love.

For years she lives without knowing the meaning of love, but finally a young musicians wins her affection. But she learns that he is married, and so must give him up. When she discovers this, she takes poison, and her father recalls her soul back to its former existence.

Supporting Winnifred Greenwood are Charles Newton, Nan Christy, King Clark, Edward Coxen, Ella Morrison, and George Field.

"Outwitted." (Thanhouser. Three Reels. Wed., Feb. 16.)—This is a cleverly-conceived drama, but in its development it has been carried beyond the bounds of possibility, and is not convincing. A dog is the hero and principal actor.

He is a collie belonging to a young clerk, who is about to marry a young telephone operator. The cashier of the office is in financial difficulites, and plans to embezzle a large amount of money and throw the blame onto the clerk.

When the latter is about to start out into the suburbs with a satchel of money for the factory pay-roll, the cashier substitutes another satchel for the one containing the money.

Later, when the clerk is held up by a bandit, the dog rescues the satchel, takes it to the factory, and helps trace the crook.

The cashier then makes another try, and by raising his employers check from $20 to $20,000, he gets the extra money, which he mails to himself at his home.

The clerk is arrested and is on the point of conviction, when the dog discovers the money in the cashier's apartment, and left by himself, knocks the telephone over, and by barking into the transmitter, calls the telephone operator, whom he leads to the hiding place of the money.

Wayne Arey, Hazel Kirk, Morgan Jones and Justus D. Barnes are in the cast.

"Ella Wanted to Elope." (Beauty. Wed., Feb. 16.)—This is one of the light, romantic comedies usually turned out under this brand. The cast have played hundreds of similar pieces, and are exceptionally adept at getting the most fun out of them. The players are Neva Gerber, Lucille Ward, William Carroll, and Richard Rosson.

Ella longs for a romance, but spurns the callow love of her schoolmate, Dick. The family attorney finally consents to be the goat, and decides to elope with Ella, and then desert her, thus hoping to cure her love-sickness.

He woos her in whirlwind fashion, and they finally elope, pursued by Dick. The boy has the elderly man jailed, and before he can obtain his release, elopes with Ella himself.

"At the End of His Rope." (Vogue. Thurs., Feb. 17.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Rube and Madge want to marry, but haven't the money. Rube decides to catch a criminal, and earn a large reward. He finally manages to do this, after slapstick chases, mallet fights, and brickbat battles.

In the cast are Rube Miller, Madge Kirby, Alice Neice, and Arthur Tavares.

"Perkins' Peace Party." (Falstaff. Thurs., Feb. 17.)—One suspects that this comedy was inspired by recent expeditionary attempts against the war in Europe. Henry Perkins, of Jacksonville, has trouble with his very masterful wife, and finding no peace at home, starts out with a friend to stop the war in Europe.

Once at sea they find they have been shanghaied, and are not even bound for Europe, but are on their way back to Jacksonville.

Mrs. Perkins is waiting on the pier; she thoroughly horsewhips the crew of the ship, and takes Henry home. Walter Heirs, Louise Emerald Bates, and Riley Chamberlain head the cast.

"When the Light Came." (Mustang. Three reels. Fri., Feb. 18.)—This is a Western picture of the old school, with lots of melodrama, strange coincidences, and familiar situations.

The cast is exceptionally good in putting over Western stuff, and succeed in giving interest to the story. Thomas Chatterton, John Farrell, Anna Little, Jack Richardson, and George Rainey are the players.

Jim Morton, a successful but lonely ranchman, needs a partner. He finally signs up a man named Merrill, whose daughter Martha soon wins Morton's heart.

Burton, an actor, compliments Martha's voice, and promises to secure an operatic engagement for her in New York. She believes his statements, and goes with him to the city. Meantime Morton has been injured in an explosion, and goes to the city for medical treatment.

The doctor's office is across the hallway from Burton's appartment. Morton hears the sound of a struggle in the apartment, and breaking the door, discovers Burton attacking Martha. He uppercuts the actor and takes the girl in his arms.

"The Battle of Cupidovitch." (Beauty. Sun., Feb. 20.)—Another elopement is added to the already formidable list piled up by this "Beauty" company. This polite comedy is amusing, and the players do in a finished manner all that is required of them. The cast is made up of Dick Rosson, Carol Halloway, John Steppling, John Sheehan, and Mary Talbot.

Billy and Cutie are lovers, and their fathers are war veterans and friends. In an argument over the European war, the parents sever diplomatic relations, and demand that their offspring do likewise.

The couple refuse, however, and elope. Finding that they have become relations by marriage, the fathers decide to call a truce to their enmity.

"Heaven Will Protect the Woiking Goil." (Vogue. Sun., Feb. 20.)—This is a slapstick burlesque on the ten, twent', thirt' melodramas. Most of the humor is furnished by the colliding and falling down of the actors.

The action runs at a mile-a-minute clip, and while there are no subleties, the broad farce is always amusing and occasionally hilarious.

In the cast are Russ Powell, Priscilla Dean, Arthur Moon, Paddy McQuire, and Louise Owen.

A country gal goes to the wicked city, and is there annoyed by horrid villains. She slaps their wrists, and in other strenuous ways repulses their odious advances.

Their persecution becomes more and more unbearable, but her rural lover enlists in her service. Together they finally manage to circumvent the heavies.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"The Red Circle," No. 9. (Balboa. Two reels.)—June Travis, the wealthy girl, who secretly bears the red circle brand of a criminal family, finds herself in even closer quarters with the police in this episode.

Charles Gordon, an attorney falsely accused of embezzlement, is sought by the police. While walking on the beach with Lamar, the detective, they see Gordon making his way to a deserted shack in which he is hiding. The man has assisted Lamar, and the detective in return puts the police on a false scent.

They eventually find the shack, but June warns Gordon, who escapes while she hurls a lighted lamp at the officers, setting the shack on fire. She also escapes, but not until the police have seen that red circle on her hand. Ruth Roland and Frank Mayo are featured in the cast.

"New York." (Gold Rooster. Five reels.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Pathé News," No. 10. (Pathé.)—W. J. Bryan at his winter home at Miami, Fla.; Louis D. Brandeis, appointed to Supreme Bench, is congratulated by his neighbors at Boston; Canadian regiment gets taste of winter conditions in camp at Quebec; canoe football at Venice, Cal.; Carranza welcomes Obregon at Celaya, Mex.; President Wilson speaks for preparedness at Pittsburgh; latest fashions shown by Pearl White; eight-mile petition to Congress to prevent shipment of arms abroad is shown at Washington; cyclists practice on Chicago Hotel roofs for six-day race; incidents in President Wilson's visit to Cleveland; Charlestown Navy Yard, whose fate is now being debated by Congress.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

Universal Animated Weekly," No. 6. (Wed., Feb. 9.)—Canadian House of Parliament destroyed by fire; several pictures of the Appam, the German war prize; war steeds shipped from Watertown, Mass.; winter sports in Truckee, Cal.; alligator farm in Florida; Mexican generals Jose Rodriquez and Baca de Valle; hockey contest at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.; Filippinos aid war sufferers by charity show; advance spring styles in American gowns; a view of some of the U. S. submarines; Henry van Dyke, minister to Holland, returns to U. S.; James Whitcomb Riley and Col. Henry Watterson bathe at Palm Beach; Boston returns confederate banner to South; Hong Kong policemen arrive in London to enlist; English cavalrymen in training; Hy Mayer's cartoons.

"When the Looser Won." (Nestor. Mon., Feb. 14.)—One of Al Christie's that sets the record for the number of kisses ever given and received in the short space of one thousand feet of film. The comedy commences with a rather disagreeable situation but works out to a funny finish. It is by Warren and Mae Frost, and Betty Compson, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Ethel Lynn, besides a number of other familiar Nestorites appear.

"Mrs. Alston's Butler." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., Feb. 15.)—There is delightful comedy in this, when the young society man poses as a butler and gets a job working for his father's fiancee, and there is suspense and love interest furnished respectively by his act of frustrating a blackmailer and winning the hand of the widow's daughter. The scenario, one of the best of recent Universals, was prepared by James Dayton, and transferred to the screen by William Worthington. There are Herbert Rawlinson, Agnes Vernon, C. Norman Hammond and others who contribute good work to one of the best comedy-dramas from the West Coast studios.

"The Lumber Yard Gang." (Rex. Tues., Feb. 15.)—This detective picture is intended to hinge on a hot series of fights between gangsters and policemen, the sort of stuff that Francis Ford knows well how to put on, but in "The Lumber Yard Gang" his fighters attack each other with less spirit than is customary. The action is rather stilted besides, because the ending and the entire story for that matter is so obvious. Grace Cunard wrote the scenario, in which Ford appears, supported by Jack Ford, and Elise Maison.

"Cinders." (Imp. Tues., Feb. 15.)—A comedy-drama on ancient lines, but Edith Roberts as the little waif who suddenly comes in contact with luxury, creates a portion of humor that is really delightful. William Courtleigh Jr., Frank Smith and Sydell Dowling give good support. Robert Hill wrote and directed.

"Elevating Father." (L-Ko. Two reels. Wed., Feb. 16.)—The work of Ray Griffith, Dan Russell and Louise Orth is as usual very good, but "Elevating Father" makes entirely too much of the same incidents to really amuse. It has some novel stuff in it, at that, but virtually the story is a one-reeler.

"As Fate Decides." (Laemmle. Wed., Feb. 16.)—One might term this an excellent dramatic number. It has a good story, strong in suspense, well acted and void of the unnecessary. We mention this last because the story presented many opportunities to employ the vision scene, fading out into preceding action, but the cast has brought out the significance of such thoughts by facial expression. Rupert Julian, Ernest Shields, Elsie Jane Wilson and Edward Brown are the leads. The picture moves with rapidity, and recalls in this respect as well as in many others of a Griffith-Biograph release.

"In the Night." (Victor. Three reels. Thurs., Feb. 17.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of Feb. 12.

"Building Up the Health of a Nation." (Powers Split reel. Thurs., Feb. 17.)—Number 4 takes up the measurements of Bernarr MacFadden, his chest and muscular expansion, etc. There are also some instructive views of a heart in action, showing the effects of alcohol in moderation, used excessively and the result of constant smoking. A cartoon divides the reel.

"Plot and Counterplot." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., Feb. 18.)—A simple and obvious version of an old melodrama, in which the heroine through sheer pluck proves her sweetheart innocent and the villain false. It is handled in a way that accounts for suspense despite its minute familiarity. Matt Moore, Howard Crampton and Jane Gail are the leads. There is a comedy role, that of the swindler which is handled quite amateurishly.

"Borrowed Plumes." (Rex. Fri., Feb. 18.)—A well pictured story depicting the struggles of a cloak model to go straight and the ingenuity of her valiant employer in refuting the advances of her villainous employer. Ben Wilson directed a cast including himself, Dorothy Phillips, Joseph Girard and Charles Ogle.

"Flivver's Dilemma." (Nestor. Fri., Feb. 18.)—Charles Evans disports himself here in a very humorous reel. Its plot and situations have done yeoman service for several years but handled capably as it is here the story still amuses.

"A Recoiling Vengeance." (Bison. Three reels. Sat., Feb. 19.)—This is purely a melodramatic clash between a gentleman possessing papers of great importance, and a group of villains who desire them for a foreign government. The action is a bit tiresome in the first half of the picture, because of the constant repetition of events, but the climax in which wild animals are introduced is a thrilling one of its kind.

"Uncle Sam at Work," No. 9. (Powers. Sat., Feb. 19.)—This number is the best of those hitherto shown for the reason that it introduces scenes which, so far as we know, have never been before the camera lens. The Bureau of Standards with its work on weights, clocks, watches, scales, thermometers, cements, stones, fabrics, metals and radium occupies the entire reel, and interesting is no word for its effect.

"Dolly's Scoop." (Rex. Two reels. Sun., Feb. 20.)—To the general public newspaper stories always have a certain fascination, and so "Dolly's Scoop," a melodramatic number of that sort will doubtless appeal, despite the fact that judged from a reportorial standpoint it is unreal. The editor wants sensational stuff for his front page, and his special writer, a young lady, gets it, but it reflects on the editor's wife. Thanks to her brains she prints the story, leaving out the names, and runs another woman's picture, so all's well. Louise Welch (Carbasse), does well in the star part while Hayward Mack, Lon Chaney and M. K. Wilson are the other leads. The actress who plays the part of the editor's wife is not very good.

"Twenty Minutes at the Fair." (L-Ko. Sun., Feb. 20.)—This reel was made at the Fair, and shows some interesting views of it, but the action is altogether much too risque for a mixed audience. A model leg is brought into play, and it introduces much that is a little offensive. Billie Ritchie, Gene Rogers and Peggy Pearce are the leads.

A Plain Statement of Facts Pertaining to the Development of Your Business

There isn't an exhibitor in the business to-day who has not, at some time, felt the injustice of the demands made upon him in regard to the prices he has been compelled to pay for his pictures, be they good, bad, or indifferent. Such a state of affairs is all wrong! There should be no compulsion regarding what the exhibitor should or should not show, when he is paying good money for his merchandise.

OPEN MARKET

AT LAST THE DAY HAS COME when he can go into the open market with every confidence of finding the particular kind of pictures that will meet the demand and merit the approval of his patrons.

Triangle Theatres Are Playing to Big Business

When the Triangle Theatre of Detroit, Michigan, was opened the crowds were enormous.

Mr. P. P. Craft, of this theatre, reports on the business of January 26th last: "In spite of inclement weather, the crowds lasted all night, and hundreds were turned away on the final night's showing of "Let Katy Do It."

There is a reason for the success of "Triangle" Plays.

The reason is—

Because—

Triangle actors and actresses like Mabel Normand, the popular Keystone Star, draw the crowds into your theatre like a magnet.

Because—

People appreciate and are willing to pay money to see stars of the Triangle calibre—

And—

Triangle plays give you the class of stars and the kind of picture that make your audience leave with the thought that they have received more than their money's worth.

This is the reason TRIANGLE Theatres are continually playing to capacity houses.

But, TRIANGLE Service goes further and offers more than just the best talent, and the best pictures—

It means—

That you have at your disposal all the facilities of a thoroughly equipped organization that can help you solve your individual problems.

The Publicity Department is ready to supply you with advertisements of current releases for your local newspapers, which will take into the homes of your patrons the message of TRIANGLE Plays.

It will help you meet local conditions and has ready for use all manner of attractive slides, heralds, lobby display and other advertising material.

All over the country TRIANGLE Theatres are a success. Why don't you communicate with

Triangle Film Corporation

1457 Broadway, New York

BRANCHES: Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver, Atlanta, Chicago, Boston, Minneapolis, Kansas City, St. Louis, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Dallas, Seattle.

Because—

"Let Katy Do It," a typical TRIANGLE Production, in which JANE GREY and TULLY MARSHALL appear, is the kind of a play the moving picture public love—and talk about.

And—

The Corner
—the gripping TRIANGLE Play, with Willard Mack and George Fawcett, touches the very heart strings as you watch the tense and exciting moments of this wonderful play.
So true to life is the story, so realistic is the acting, and so strong are the personalities flashed on the screen, that you almost feel yourself an integral part of the thrilling drama as you watch the powerful financier build up a wonderful money making machine only to crush himself beneath its weight.
The powerful theme, the gripping manner in which it is told, and the marvelous acting combine to make one of the strongest TRIANGLE Pictures. See it tonight without fail!

Everything for Theatre, Exchange and Studio

Motion Picture Projection Simplified

By J. H. Hallberg

54—What precaution must then be taken in guarding against rupture of the arc or unsteady burning with the higher amperages?

Ans.—In the first place you must use a larger diameter carbon to maintain the higher amperage, and in the second place, you must use a different carbon setting, that is, when the arc has a tendency to blow forward, due to the magnetic pressure back of it, as illustrated by the lines of force in Fig. 38, in which the centre of the magnetic circuit is at point "A." With 30 amperes, the upper carbon may sit slightly back of the lower, whereas with 60 amperes flowing through the arc, the number of lines of force through the centre "A" have been doubled, therefore, the pushing effect on the arc is double and the upper carbon must be moved forward, sometimes ahead of the lower carbon, in order to prevent the blow out effect, pushing the arc out of the upper crater which will destroy its illuminating effect.

In Fig. 39, I illustrate the arc looking at it from the condenser side of the lamp house and line "A," is the centre of the magnetic field, showing the lines of force emerging from the centre line, creating the magnetic field which has already been referred to.

55—Please go back to Fig. 35 and give further explanation to the difference in effect with the transformer and the rheostat.

Ans.—With the understanding which you must have gained from the foregoing references to the magnetic blow out effect on the arc, you realize that if we can increase the lines of force, acting magnetically upon the arc as we shorten the arc separation, the tendency will be to crowd the arc forward, burning off the front edges of the carbons so as to expose the upper and lower crater even though the rear part of the carbon points should be considerably cooler and consume slower, almost touching each other.

With the ordinary rheostat and also with the ordinary choke coil which was commonly used up to a few years ago and often sold as a transformer, which it is not, this increase in magnetic effect cannot be obtained, due to the fact that the choke coil and the rheostat will absorb more readily the voltage reduction at the arc.

The transformer increases the amperes within a reasonable limit and gives additional ampere turns, back of the arc to push it forward, still consuming the carbon points and maintaining the same or slightly higher wattage, across the arc to do the work of heating the carbon points, thus giving perfect combustion.

MOTION PICTURE POSTER BUSINESS FOR PAST YEAR REACHED $300,000 MARK

THOMAS QUILL, of the Goes Lithographing Company, of Chicago, states that during 1915 its motion picture poster business amounted to $300,000.

One of the largest individual orders received during this time was the one given it by Col. Selig for paper on the "Ne'er-Do-Well." This contract was taken over by Sol. Lesser when he secured the United States rights for this picture.

The Goes Lithographing Company is furnishing four different styles of one-sheets, two different styles each of three, six and twenty-four sheets, one style of eight sheets, and window cards for the "Ne'er-Do-Well."

These are all taken from real scenes and likenesses of the stars and are shown in four and five colors.

The Goes Lithographing Company have recently opened offices at 266 Broadway, New York.

EXHIBITORS WITH 600 SEAT HOUSES IN DETROIT CONFRONTED BY $75 INCREASE IN LICENSE FEE

PROPRIETORS of the larger motion picture theatres in Detroit, seating upward of 600, are strongly opposing the passage of a city ordinance recently introduced into the council, which would require them to pay a license fee of one hundred dollars. The present fee is twenty-five dollars and covers all theatres, irrespective of size.

VIEWS OF THE EXTERIOR, LOBBY AND STAGE SETTING OF THE LIBERTY THEATRE, PITTSBURGH

ONE of the most attractive theatres in Pennsylvania has recently been completed and opened in the East Liberty business district of Pittsburgh. It is appropriately named the Liberty, and is owned by the East Liberty Theatre Company.

The exterior of the theatre is imposing, the dimensions being one hundred feet wide by one hundred and seventy-nine deep. Fireproof materials were used in the construction throughout. The front is of terra cotta. H. E. Kennedy was the architect.

Every detail for the convenience and comfort of patrons has been looked after. The Sturdevant ventilating system was installed, affording an intake of fresh air every few minutes.

For heating, the hot and cold blast system was selected, and this has been found to give excellent results. The seating capacity of the theatre is 1,467, divided into a main floor and balcony. The seats were manufactured by the Wisconsin Seating Company. The theatre is lighted throughout by electricity.

In arranging the seats, the architect had in mind one of the prime necessities of motion picture theatre construction—a clear view of the screen from any part of the house. Care was also taken that the elevation of the seats was correct with regard to the position of the screen, so that eye strain might be eliminated.

The Liberty management prides itself upon the cleanliness of its theatre, and caters to patrons who appreciate a clean, well conducted house.

The general interior decorations are Italian in effect, and a harmonious color scheme lends dignity to the auditorium and various departments of the house.

In this regard, the Liberty compares very favorably with the best type of modern picture theatres, where beauty of surroundings receives as much attention as the selection of pictures and their proper projection. When the picture-goer enters the theatre he is struck at once by the quiet dignity and good taste of the interior.

Music receives special attention, the equipment consisting of an Austin organ, which was installed at a cost of $10,000, and a Parlor Grand Chickering piano.

The musicians are thus able to provide effective accompaniment for any kind of pictures, whether dramas, comedies, travel films, or what not. This feature of the conduct of the house is emphasized by the management, and is proving a distinct drawing card.

Projection is also carefully looked after. A Baird machine is used, the pictures being thrown on a Gold Fibre screen. The length of the throw is sixty feet.

Realizing that no matter how good the pictures, or how attractive the house, the greatest number of patrons can be attracted only through advertising of the right sort. The Liberty employs newspaper space freely, and this has been found to give excellent results.

It does not confine itself to newspapers alone, however, but issues circulars, heralds, and a house organ. Other publicity schemes will also be used from time to time.

The lobby also comes in for its part as an attendance promoter. Posters of current and coming attractions find their place in it, and other methods of display are utilized.

Triangle films are shown, each showing consisting of seven reels. Because of its location in the East Liberty business district, the Liberty has found it most advantageous to run six shows a day. Ten cents admission is charged for matinee performances, while the night prices are ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents.

The theatre opened on December 27, and has already attracted a large following. Raymond H. Allen is the manager.

MOTIOGRAPHS PLACED IN BROADWAY-STRAND, DETROIT, AND THE TRIANGLE, DETROIT

THE Broadway-Strand Theatre, one of Detroit's finest and largest photoplay houses, and also the Triangle Theatre in Detroit, have recently installed 1916 model Motiographs.

These two theatres were equipped by the enterprise Theatre Equipment Company, of which Ray Branch is manager.

WHEN ENGINE IGNITES, VOLTAGE GOES UP, CAUSING LIGHTS AND ARC TO GET BRIGHTER

E. C. S., Laurel, Iowa:—We are using a 60 volt 42 ampere D. C. dynamo driven from a balanced jack shaft, which is driven by a 6 h. p. hit and miss type of governor gasolene engine.

The trouble is here every time the engine ignites the charge the voltage goes up, causing lights and arc light to get brighter for an instant. This in turn causes an unsteady light for the pictures.

Is there a device such as a coil of some kind on the market that could be connected in the line to hold the voltage steady? Possibly I could use storage batteries of about 40 volt capacity and by sending the current through them it would do away with the rise in the voltage.

I can get several 6 volt 80 ampere hour automobile batteries that are in good shape, and connected up to 7 or 8 of these in series it would give me voltage enough possibly, but as they are generally charged at about 5 to 15 ampere rate I don't see how I could use these as amperage, as it would be twice as much.

Of course, we only run an arc for about one and a half hours at a time, so possibly a heavy charging current would be all right.

Understand that I don't mean to run the arc light from storage batteries, but by having the current sent through them to the arc it would do away with the flicker.

The picture machine is an Edison of 1913 design. I find it will jerk the lower loop out quite often, causing the picture to jump all over the screen until the loop is again. set.

I don't know just where this trouble is, and I find by holding my fingers on lower tension device which works on to lower sprocket that it will not jerk out the loop.

From this I think the sprocket is worn so as to allow too much space between the roller and the sprocket, letting the film jump over the teeth and lose the loop.

Kindly advise your opinion of the trouble with the machine and a possible remedy for voltage rising.

Ans.—The operation of an electric generator by a "hit" and "miss" type governor control gasoline engine is under the best conditions an unsatisfactory arrangement.

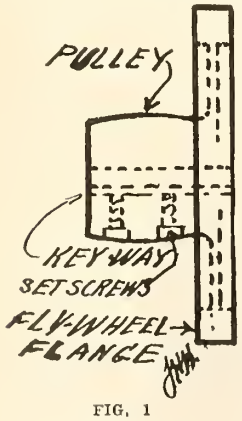

FIG. 1

I am not surprised that you notice a decided increase in the voltage and consequent brilliancy of the illumination at the instant of ignition.

This is a common fault with all plants of this kind, but your suggestion of the use of a storage battery in connection with the installation is a very good one.

Most parties are not so fortunately situated that they can get hold of the storage batteries without considerable expense.

In fact, the expense for storage batteries under ordinary circumstances would be almost as great as the expense for a new engine with throttling governor.

However, before discussing the battery condition I want to offer one suggestion which is cheaper and simpler, which may help you if you have not already tried it.

The variation in the illumination is due to the increase in the speed of the engine at and after the explosions. If you provide a mechanical arrangement whereby the engine, generator and shafting is maintained in motion during the period when the engine has no explosions, your trouble can no doubt be minimized.

is to provide a pulley with a flanged type fly-wheel for your dynamo.

If your dynamo shaft and the pulley end bearing is substantial and heavy you may replace the present pulley with a new one provided with a flange and a rim measuring approximately 12 to 15 per cent. in diameter and weighing between 50 and 60 pounds.

This pulley and rim must be cast in one piece, carefully turned and balanced and bored out, and fit in the shaft exactly; then it must be securely keyed and fastened to the dynamo shaft.

This arrangement will act as a storage of power and will materially assist the engine in maintaining more constant speed.

An improvement can be effected by making the fly-wheels of the engine heavier, or you may place a fly-wheel on the jack shaft, but the most effective position for the fly-wheel will be on your dynamo, as there the speed is higher, and that is the part of the equipment which carries the load.

Figure 1 illustrates the fly-wheel suggested above, but the size of the rim can be decided upon by your local mechanic, and the weight should not be over sixty pounds, and most of the weight should be at the rim of the wheel, as the weight near the shaft is of disadvantage, increasing the weight without proportionately increasing the fly-wheel effect.

Your storage battery proposition, while costing more money, would undoubtedly be the better one. You are wrong in thinking that it is necessary to run the storage batteries in series with the arc or the other lamps.

The storage battery must be connected across the line, and if you use 6 volt, 80 ampere hour automobile batteries you should provide ten of them, if your circuit is 60 volts, connected in series with each other but across the wires coming from the generator, as illustrated in Figure 2.

This system of connecting the battery is the same as used in the large power stations throughout the country, and a battery so connected is said to be "floating" on the line.

The action of the batteries, which should be charged before you connect them, is as follows:

When the engine is running at proper speed and producing 60 volts the batteries are practically floating on the line, maybe discharging slightly, because a normally charged storage battery gives about 6.2 volts, and when ten are connected in series they would deliver 62 volts.

Now, when you put the load on the generator, the tendency of the load is to lower the voltage. The battery will then pick up part of the load, but when the explosion takes place in the engine the generator will speed up and would probably deliver 62 to 70 volts for a second.

Then the battery takes the extra current, and the next instant, when the engine misses the battery, will again deliver the current to the arc or incandescent lamps, relieving the generator.

You will understand that this makes a perfect balanced system, the battery taking a charge the moment the voltage goes above 62 volts or so and discharging the stored current the moment the voltage falls below 60 volts or thereabout.

There is no danger in the use of this kind of a system, but you must provide an automatic cut-out to be connected in a similar manner as the cut-outs used on automobiles and motor boats, where small generators are used for charging the battery.

The function of this cut-out is to disconnect the battery when the generator is stopped so that the battery will not discharge itself through the generator when it falls way below speed or when the engine and generator are shut down.

Automatic cut-outs of this kind can be had from any storage battery concern or a circuit breaker of 10 to 25 amperes capacity may be used, as shown in Figure 2.

The loosing of the lower loop on your Edison machine may be due to the sprocket being worn, or probably the spring which pushes the idler roller on to the sprocket not being stiff enough, having lost some of its tension.

Another reason may be that the lower loop is too long. It is not good to carry the loops too long, because if you do there will be a snapping or whip effect which will kick the idler away from the sprocket.

I suggest that you place a new sprocket, new tension spring on the roller and keep the loop shorter, and also, last but not least, make sure that your take-up is not adjusted too tight.

If it is, it will pull too hard on the film and pull it right off the lower sprocket teeth, especially during the first quarter or half run of the reel, when the tension is the greatest.

PICTURE THEATRE PROGRESS IN CALIFORNIA

THE Globe theatre at San Pedro, which was closed for a short time, has been leased by Frank Dorner, who has made a number of improvements and reopened it. Included in the new equipment is a Baird projecting machine, furnished through the Los Angeles branch of the George Metealfe Company.

Work is being rushed on the remodeling of the old American theatre on Market street, near Seventh, and it is anticipated that this structure will be ready for occupancy early in March, adding to the list of first-run houses in San Francisco. This property has been leased for twenty years to a new corporation, the Western Theatre Company, and the new house will be known as the Rialto theatre. It is planned to show high class feature productions in conjunction with a symphony orchestra.

The Commercial Central Realty Company has leased the Washington Square theatre on Stockton street, facing Washington Square, San Francisco, to the Washington Square Theatre Company, a newly organized corporation, for a period of ten years. This house is the largest in the North Beach district, having a seating capacity of 1,620, and the present policy of showing feature motion pictures will be continued.

M. A. Gallagher and Bert Steward have leased the Majestic theatre at Porterville, and will open this as soon as it can be remodeled and renovated.

W. Eliget has disposed of his one-half interest in the Francis theatre at Corcoran to his former partner, A. J. Cates, who is now manager and owner.

Contracts have been awarded for the erection of structural steel for the addition to the Lorin Photoplay theatre at Berkeley. L. F. Hyde, of Oakland, is the architect. It is expected that the house will have to be closed for a short time during the rebuilding operations.

A. Rattenbury, of Dixon, who recently purchased the moving picture theatre of J. F. Ormiston at Winters, is having the front remodeled, and will install new chairs, a new projection machine, and make other improvements. The house has been conducted by Mr. Ormiston for the past six years.

Frank Lacy, of San Francisco, was a recent visitor at Watsonville, and contemplates taking over the Lyric theatre at that place if arrangements can be made for the desired improvements.

A moving picture theatre has been opened at Hobart Mills by O. Barton.

The Masonic Temple at Truckee has been leased by W. M. Englehart, of that place, and will be opened shortly. This mountain town is the headquarters for winter sports in California.

L. B. Sovy has taken over the interests of C. Hillard in the moving picture theatre conducted in Cory Hall at Etna.

C. F. Roberts, manager of the Hanford Opera House at Hanford, appeared before the city council recently and asked for the privilege of installing an airdome at Redington and Seventh streets during the summer. He was instructed to make a plan of what he proposed to do, and to submit it to the fire marshal.

The Star theatre at Colusa is now being conducted under the management of Nicholas Chiuras.

City Superintendent of Schools C. C. Hughes has purchased a motion picture screen to be installed at the William Land School at Sacramento.

MICHIGAN FIRE DEPARTMENT MAKES SEMI-ANNUAL INSPECTION OF THEATRES

THE Michigan state fire marshal's department has started on its semi-annual inspection of motion picture theatres to see that the buildings conform with the new requirements governing fireproof construction and exits.

The inspection started in Detroit, February 1. There are over seven hundred theatres in Michigan to be inspected.

EMPIRE STATE IS SCENE OF MANY THEATRE ACTIVITIES

THE Allendale theatre in Buffalo will close in the near future, it is unofficially stated. This closing is one of the results of fever-heat competition, larger houses and too many of them in Buffalo. The Sun theatre has also closed during the past week. This theatre is on Broadway and has not been open a year.

Frank L. Mueller, a civil engineer of College Point, L. I., has purchased the Besio Theatre Company, the Regent theatre, a motion picture playhouse in Thirteenth street, College Point. The theatre was built five years ago and seats 600.

Heyman Schnitzer and Louis Goldberg have purchased the Bon Ton theatre on Colden street, Newburgh. They will make changes which will increase the seating capacity to 425, 100 more than at present. The price paid was stated as $1,000.

The recently completed New Hartford moving picture house at Utica has opened. The seating capacity of the house is 450 persons. W. A. Hooks, of New Hartford, is the manager.

A big New York theatrical syndicate, operating theatres in fifty of the large cities of the country, has secured options on two large business properties on lower State street, Schenectady, with the intention of erecting thereon a magnificent new theatre, the estimated cost of which will be about $200,000.

The Cumberland theatre, Greene avenue and Cumberland street, Brooklyn, reopened its doors recently as an up-to-date photo playhouse under direction of Francis A. Mangan, who is also director of the Dyckman and Crescent theatres in Manhattan. The house has been thoroughly redecorated and an organ installed at a cost of $4,700.

The Wardwin Realty Company, John Shelberg, secretary, has filed plans through Julius Harden for a theatre and store building, 149.7 x 149.9, at the southeast corner of Webster avenue and 167th street, New York. The improvement will cost $35,000.

Belfast is to have a new motion picture theatre. Frank James and W. W. Dealing and families of Shinglehouse, Pa., have leased the Grand Army hall for one year for that purpose, where they have installed a $1,500 electric plant.

A picture theatre to cost $30,000 will soon be erected in the vicinity of Averell garden, Ford and Caroline streets, Ogdensburg.

SOCIETY WOMAN IS GENERAL MANAGER OF EIGHT THEATRES AND RUNS THEM WITH THE EFFICIENCY OF A MAN

MRS. STEPHEN MORRIS, the young society woman who entered the motion picture field a short time ago, was recently made general manager of the Central Market Street Company which controls the Stanley and Broadway theatres in New York as well as the Globe, the Victoria, Savoy, Princess, Market and Auditorium in Philadelphia.

The managers of the Philadelphia theatres are in the sequence above, David Sablosky, William K. Goldenberg, Morris Solomon, Fred Hammond, E. C. Long, Emory Austin.

All of the offices of the company are now housed under one roof in the Globe Building at Juniper and Market streets.

The offices occupying the whole floor are furnished throughout in handsome golden oak, attractive rugs and substantial fittings.

Such accessories as an aquarium and growing plants give a "homey" touch without interfering with the efficiency of the spacious private office of the "lady manager."

A systematic campaign of renovation is being carried on in all theatres of the syndicate.

The Savoy has been completely overhauled, the walls decorated in soft tints of grey and rose, stencilings of silver completing the artistic scheme.

Harmonious hangings have been used and American Seating Company's chairs put in at a cost of over $1,000. A new screen, new lighting system, new projection machines form part of the equipment, while the outside has been made new by fresh paint.

The Victoria is still in the throes of its transformation. A Kimball organ has been ordered and will soon be installed.

The first run of the Blue Bird's "Undine" with Ida Schnall held the screen a week at the Victoria. The Central Market Company books all houses through the Stanley Booking Company.

Frank Buhler, right hand man to Al. Boyd of the Arcadia and Bijou Dream is now right hand man to Mrs. Morris.

The Bijou Dream will soon pass out of existence as a theatre. It has been purchased by a "Five and Ten" company and will become part of the latter's store when its lease is up.

Building and Furnishings

Edited by Nathan Myers

Work Begins on Circle, Indianapolis, 3,000 Capacity

Picture House Controlled by Business Men of the City Is Expected to Become Show Place—Novel Features of Construction Include a Plate Glass Railing in Rear of the Main Floor—Interior Decorations in Style of the Brothers Adam

PLANS for the new Circle Photoplay theatre, which is to occupy the site of the Horace Wood site in the southeast segment of Monument Place, Indianapolis, have been completed and work on the razing of the old buildings has begun.

The new theatre will be novel in many details and the promoters have given much thought to eliminating all the defects of previously built auditoriums.

The Circle, when completed, will represent an investment of approximately half a million dollars and have a seating capacity of 3,000. There will be broad aisles, exits to three streets and a heating and ventilating system modern in every detail.

The building and operating company is styled the Monument Realty Company, with A. L. Block, president; Robert Lieber, vice-president; Meyer Efroymson, treasurer, and Ralph Norwood, secretary.

Added to these in the board of directors are Isidor Feibleman, A. L. Strauss, Morris Cohn, the latter of Denver and the only out-of-town member of the board. The theatre is to be ready for opening about the middle of June.

Indianapolis Business Men Asked to Make Bids

Much interest centers in the new amusement house, a feeling based largely on the fact that Indianapolis men are the builders and the majority of the contracts have gone to constructors in that city. Indianapolis merchants have been asked for bids on the furnishings. The basic construction materials will be steel and concrete.

The new theatre will have a frontage of eighty feet in the Circle and will run back to Court and Scioto streets, a distance of 154 feet. The general width of the house will be 110 feet. The front will have an entrance lobby forty feet wide.

The lobby will be bordered by two storerooms. The entire facade is to be of white terra cotta ornamented at the crest with a frieze of allegorical figures in Rookwood pottery.

Four firepots, which will serve for electrical illumination, crown the structure and will be one of the novel electrical features of Indianapolis theatres.

A marquee, practical in design, will give the theatre entrance an added charm. Panels inclosed in glass are to ornament the lobby and serve to advertise the attractions.

There will be a box office for general admission in the center of the lobby. On the side will be another box office for reservations. The lobby is to be inclosed in storm doors of the automatic closing type, thus insuring the prevention of much-dreaded drafts through the theatre.

On entering the main floor the visitor will be confronted by six broad aisles, which will make the large main seating section easy of access.

Across these aisles will run a transverse aisle that will enable persons entering or leaving the theatre to do so without scurrying through the seats. There will be about 2,000 chairs on the main floor.

Plate Glass in Rear of Main Floor

A feature that will be popular is the plate glass railing in the rear of the main floor. This will be constructed so that no drafts will strike the audience as the glass will run sufficiently high to prevent that disagreeable feeling. The glass will be tastefully hung with draperies. There will be no boxes on the first floor.

The balcony is to be deep, but easy of access because of stairways that will lead from a mezzanine floor. The balcony also will have a transverse aisle that will separate the loges from the main seating section.

There are to be seven loges, each with a seating capacity of eighteen persons. Six boxes, also reached from the mezzanine, will seat six persons each.

A delightful surprise in theatrical attractiveness is promised in the various novel details of the mezzanine floor. Here will be the rest rooms, specially designed for the comfort of the patrons.

On one side will be an adequately equipped retiring room for the women, the same to be in charge of a matron. Opposite will be the lounge and smoking room for the men.

This, too, will be equipped for the full enjoyment of men patrons of the house. The lounges will be easily reached from any part of the theatre.

The architects have tried to give the Circle every good effect. The loge section, for instance, has been designed to resemble the famous diamond horseshoe of the Metropolitan theatre of New York.

The boxes also have been devised to give full comfort to the occupants and a perfect view of the stage. One of the beautiful architectural effects of the mezzanine floor is to be a big, old-fashioned fireplace.

Proscenium Arch Forty-Two Feet Wide

The stage will have a proscenium arch 42 feet wide and 30 feet high, with a stage depth of 35 feet. It is the intention of the builders to equip this stage so that it will be able to accommodate any metropolitan theatrical attraction.

It will have a steel gridiron in the loft, and the dressing rooms are to be adequate and numerous. In the section below the stage the company will have clubrooms for those employed as entertainers.

In front of the stage will be the console for the great organ that is to be one of the splendid features of the new amusement house.

Much care has been exercised in considering the heating and ventilating equipment. A department has been created to give special attention to these details. It will occupy a large room to the right of the stage.

In it will be machinery for washing all air, both in summer and winter. Electrical devices will serve to keep the pure air constantly driving out the bad.

One fine ventilating feature is an air well that will keep the air pure and wholesome under the balcony ledge. This well opens into the roof, and will keep a constant current of fresh air working under the balcony. Pneumatic cleaning devices have been provided for throughout the house, and these will be used daily. There will be no electric fans.

Decorated in Style of the Brothers Adam

The decorative effects are to be in the Adam style, shading from canestone to a light gray and finally assuming a beautiful ivory tone in the ceiling. Rose effects will be used in the hangings, and the seats are to be upholstered in velour of that shade. The seats will be of the same standard throughout the house.

The projection room is to be on the main floor at a point directly opposite the screen, thus making it possible for the operator to project the picture squarely on the screen and giving a square-set effect from all parts of the house.

It will require 1,800 yards of carpet to cover the main floors, foyers and stairways, a fact that gives some idea of the scope of the theatre. The stairways are to be of concrete and steel. It was the intention to use marble on the stairways, but, in order to produce quiet effects, the architects recommended carpets.

The builders say they will be ready for the opening of the new theatre not later than June 25 and that the attractions will be of a high order.

STAGE SETTINGS OF STRAND IN INDIANAPOLIS MAKE THEATRE DISTINCTIVE

NOTHING has ever been attempted in the way of a stage setting in any Indianapolis theater, like the stage setting of the Strand theatre, which originally was intended for the Chicago Strand, but which has been put in the Indianapolis Strand.

No other Indianapolis theatre has a stage setting, and the Strand, which is the old Lyceum theatre, and previously the Park, is the largest theatre in the downtown district which is devoted to a musical and photoplay entertainment.

The stage setting was built by the scenic art firm of Sossman and Landis, of Chicago. It represents an Italian pergola, with massive pillars on each side and a view overlooking the bay in the rear.

The lighting effects are by Raymond Q. Dalton, and the stage setting gives Dalton's lighting scheme full scope.

The curtain rises on a moonlit stage, clouds float slowly across the sky, where the moon and twinkling stars reflect their light on the rippling water.

Slowly, as the symphony orchestra plays the overture, the faint light of dawn steals over the horizon, the moon and stars fade, and the day blooms into brilliant sunshine. All these light effects are produced by Mr. Dalton's light scheme.

STAGE SETTING OF THE STRAND THEATRE, INDIANAPOLIS

Effective Revelation of Screen with Music

At the end of the overture, plush curtains in the center of the stage setting draw together, the picture screen is dropped and, as the curtain unfolds, the first photoplay of the performance is revealed.

As the musical numbers are presented from time to time, in the entertainment, the screen is removed and brought on just as in the opening, and during the various solos and musical features, full scope is given to the varied and rare lighting effects Dalton has worked out.

All the old lighting equipment in the theatre was removed. The principal means of illumination on the stage is a huge "U" shaped metal trough or reflector, studded with hundreds of electric bulbs of various color, which are dimmed or brightened to produce the desired light.

Three large cloud projecting machines and an ingenious water ripple projector, are among the unusual equipment.

The members of the Symphony orchestra are grouped on the apron in front of the stage setting and the soloists stand at the back of the stage setting, on the landing, in the center of the picture.

PARAGON THEATRES CORPORATION ORGANIZES CHAIN OF THEATRES FOR TOWNS IN NEW YORK

THE Paragon Theatres Corporation, incorporated under the laws of Delaware, has begun active work in organizing its chain of theatres.

The plan, if followed to logical conclusions, is a good one for it means co-operation in every town where a theatre is located by the people in the town.

They will be actually financially interested in their own particular house, while at the same time they are interested in the other houses in the chain. In other words, each theatre is not incorporated separately. Every stockholder in the corporation is interested in every theatre.

It is a co-operative scheme, very similar to that in force in the United Cigar Stores Company, Riker-Hegeman drug stores, Woolworth stores and others where the entire organization is actually run from one central office.

The owners of the corporation will comprise people living in the various cities where the theatres are located, thus making each one a living, walking and talking booster for his own individual theatre.

By this means each theatre has a guaranteed clientele before it opens its doors, and the influence which can be exerted by the numerous owners is practically a guarantee of success.

Another feature which is particularly interesting is the fact that the board of education in various cities where theatres are projected have been offered the use of the house on Saturday mornings for educational purposes for the benefit of the school children. This should be a means of helping the various boards solve the perplexing question as to how pictures can be used in connection with various courses of study.

The officers of the company are:

President, Louis B. Jennings, who is also president of the American Film Laboratories, Inc.; vice-president, George T. Sharp, who has had several years' experience in the actual running of motion picture theatres; secretary and treasurer, Edward Everett Chase, who is also secretary and treasurer of the American Film Laboratories, Inc.

The engineer and architect is James P. Whiskeman, formerly chief engineer of the building department of New York City and also formerly chief engineer of the New York state factory commission, and a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers. The attorney is Roderick Begg, of the law firm of Begg, Begg and Begg.

The company has thus far taken title to a plot of ground on Main street, Beacon, New York, and has contracted to purchase a plot on Grand street, Newburgh, N. Y. Sites are also under consideration in North Newburgh, Kingston, Waldon, Port Jarvis, Haverstraw and West Wappinger's Falls in the Hudson Valley.

The present offices are in the American Film Laboratories building, 69 West Ninetieth street, New York City.

OPERATORS IN WACO, TEXAS, DEMAND INCREASE

FOLLOWING a strike at Waco, Texas, on January 24, of the union operators employed at a moving picture show, Edgar Momand, proprictor of one of the theatres was tried in the Corporation Court on a charge of operating a moving picture machine without a license.

He was acquitted after testimony had been introduced to the effect that operators are required to give two weeks notice before quitting, in accordance with their contract, when higher wages are asked. The operators who struck demanded an increase of from eighteen to twenty dollars per week.

MINUSA PLACES SCREEN IN HAVANA THEATRE

THE Minusa Cine Products Company reports that through George C. Gates, director of the Universal Film Company in Havana, Cuba, it has placed a screen 18 x 24 feet, to be used in the Teatro Maxim, in that city.

O. F. SPAHR, general manager of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, has just returned from a short trip, having visited the dealers in Detroit, Mich., and Cleveland, Ohio.

BILL INTRODUCED IN KENTUCKY TO PREVENT USE OF BUILDINGS WITH COMBUSTIBLE WALLS FOR THEATRES

A BILL providing that no picture show shall be given in any building in Kentucky having combustible exterior walls and regulating the installation and operation of picture machines has been introduced in the Kentucky General Assembly.

The bill also provides that no public exhibition of motion pictures shall be given in a building which does not abut directly upon a street nor where the main floor is more than four feet above or below the street level.

Relative to the machine booth, the proposed law specifies that it must be not less than six by eight feet, and seven feet high, the frame of which shall be composed of angle iron.

Other provisions relating to chemical fire extinguishers and exits are similar to those now observed in all the large cities of the state in compliance with the fire laws.

The State Fire Marshal is empowered to inspect all theatres for the purpose of ascertaining if they are equipped and operated in accordance with the provisions of the act.

For a certificate of approval, the bill provides, that a fee of twenty-five dollars be paid by the exhibitor to the State Fire Marshal to be applied to the funds of that office.

A violation carries the penalty of a fine of not less than five dollars nor more than fifty dollars.

COMMITTEE FROM DETROIT LEAGUE PROTESTS AGAINST ELECTRIC LIGHT RULING

AT a recent meting of Detroit motion picture exhibitors, a committee was appointed to call on the members of the public light commission to point out to them that it would be unfair and would put many of them out of business if they enforced their new ruling that all theatres must have their electric wires in underground conduit.

To do such a thing would cost about seven hundred dollars—more than most of the small theatres can stand.

The film that first made motion pictures practical remains, to-day, through its consistent excellence, a big factor in their success.

It is easily identified by the stencil mark in the film margin.

"EASTMAN"

Directory of New Theatres

This department is designed to be a weekly guide to all sales, leases, construction and remodeling of photoplay theatres. If you are building, selling, leasing or renovating, kindly communicate it at once for publication.

ALABAMA

THE Majestic Theatre, one of the largest legitimate houses in Alabama, in Birmingham, was sold in January to Lewis Pizitz for $150,000. The purchase was in the nature of an investment, and it is understood that the house probably will become a motion picture theatre.

H. M. Newsome's new theatre in Third avenue, Birmingham, Ala., has been named the Rialto.

ARKANSAS

W. C. Floyd is the new manager of the Nusho theatre at Leslie.

The Princess theatre at Batesville has been leased by W. L. Landers. This gives Mr. Landers control of the two theatres in that city, as he was manager of the Gem.

A motion picture house is being erected at Pine Bluff by O. C. Hauber.

W. L. Landers, manager of the Gem theatre at Batesville, has leased the Princess theatre from William Hardy and will run the same in connection with the Gem. The Princess has been closed temporarily for repairs.

J. A. Jamison has taken over the lease of the Dunlap theatre at Clarksville from Laster Brothers.

Louis Rosenbaum opened the new Princess theatre at Argenta February 1.

CALIFORNIA

The Mason Street Theatre Company is arranging to erect a moving picture theatre, with a seating capacity of about 1,200. on Mason street, near Market, San Francisco, at an estimated cost of $65,000.The house will be ready for use about next August.

The Market street theatre announces a change in its long-established policy, and henceforth feature productions will be shown in this popular San Francisco house in place of a regular program.

The Hayward theatre at Hayward has been purchased by G. Madsen, who conducts a theatre in the Richmond District of San Francisco.

Because of the expiration of a lease for their present location on February 1, the Palace theatre, at 638 South Broadway, Los Angeles, will move their theatre to a location on Seventh street, between Broadway and Hill. The building at this place is being remodeled for the theatre and will afford space for 700 seats.

CANADA

Edward Glassco has leased the Empire theatre, Windsor, Canada, across the river from Detroit, and has spent several thousand dollars for improvements. He will run it strictly as a motion picture house.

The Bijou theatre in Edmonton, Alberta, is now called the Strand, and reopened a short time ago with numerous improvements. The whole house has been painted and brightened up, and several minor changes have been made. Mutual pictures are now being shown, and the management have since the opening been drawing particular attention to the projection.

COLORADO

Harold N. Desky is now in active charge of the recently completed Emerson theatre in Brush. While the population of the town only totals 1,500, Mr. Desky's theatre seats 400, while a small balcony providing a hundred more seats is installed and will be thoroughly equipped when necessary.

The house is equipped in up-to-date style, with a first-class ventilating system in addition to other worthy features.

CONNECTICUT

Another moving picture theatre ouened to the public of New Haven on February 3. It is the new Winchester avenue theatre, located on Winchester avenue, near Starr street. This theatre is built of fire-proof material throughout and measures 50 feet by 100 feet. It has a beautiful stone front and seats 800 persons, and will be under the management of Adolph Juul.

Bert E. Hatch, who has conducted the Scenic theatre, Willimantic, since August 31, 1914, has sold the equipment to Joseph R. Goldsborough. Mr. Goldsborough took possession Monday, January 31.

James F. McLean, one of the former managers of the Delphi theatre, is planning to re-lease A. O. U. W. hall in Groton and to reopen a moving picture theatre there. Arrangements are practically completed and the theatre will open within a few days.

The new Palace moving picture theatre on Grove street, Windsor Locks, opened for business Saturday, January 22, under the management of George J. Rice.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

John H. Miller has assumed the management of the Leader theatre, Washington, since the resignation of Nat Glasser, who is now located in Philadelphia.

The Paramount program has been installed with changes three times a week, and success has been showed by capacity houses. Under George Emmens an orchestra of three pieces gives excellent accompaniments to the pictures. The Leader has recently put on a new pearl-colored dress, with the decorations outlined in black, making a very distinctive front to this popular photoplay house.

The lease on the moving picture theatre at the southeast corner of Ninth and O streets northwest, Washington, known as the Raphael, has been transferred from James Holloway to Mrs. Lena Haga, who will hereafter conduct the business. The structure has a seating capacity of 500.

ILLINOIS

The Majestic theatre at Peoria, after being completely renovated and remodeled has reopened. The stage was changed and a big screen of the latest type was installed. A new operating booth was installed on the lower floor and the projection department otherwise improved. The entrance was rebuilt and a new ticket office constructed. Girl ushers in uniform are employed.

Manager J. B. Smith, of the opera house at Cuba, plans to show motion pictures on Wednesday night every week.

Mrs. E. E. Endicott, who operated an airdome motion picture establishment last summer, is having a motion picture theatre constructed at Woodriver.

INDIANA

Hugh Rapp and Walter Kyle have leased the Ladoga opera house, Ladoga, and will move their theatre to the new location. James Mangus, who has been manager of the theatre for the last three or four years, will retire. Rapp and Kyle have been operating a show in the Kyle building and the change means that only one picture show will be run in Ladoga.

Triangle pictures are being shown now at the Princess theatre, Frankfort, by manager J. C. Lockwood.

H. F. Burk, of Newcastle, is planning to build a new theatre on the site of the Phillips building in that city.

J. Shaw Grimes, of Leavenworth, Kansas, has bought the Corydon theatre, at Corydon.

The Starland theatre, of Anderson, has been bought from Earl Martin, of Cleveland, by a company composed of Judge T. F. Heiney, of Fort Wayne, and Frank Heller, who are the principal stockholders. It is known as the Meridian Amusement Company. The price was $25,000. The Starland is one of the newer theatres constructed in the last few years.

Arthur Haggerty has sold the equipment of the Habit theatre, at Tipton, and the house has been closed, leaving the Matz theatre, managed by Mr. Jackson, as the only theatre operating in Tipton.

INDIANA

A new silver fibre screen has been put in the Violet theatre at Brookston.

B. F. Metcalf, proprietor of the Luna Lite theatre at Marion, heads the Washington Theatre Company, which recently filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state for $35,000.

A number of Marion capitalists are interested in the company which plans to build a theatre in West Fourth street, on the site of the Mecca club. All the stock in the company has been subscribed.

The Tokio theatre at Flora has been reopened by Carl Voorhees, the new owner, after being closed for two weeks for repairs and alterations.

Frank S. Smith and Fred J. Tangeman have sold the Grand theatre building at Bluffton to Harry Lindley and Fred McGonigal, of Greentown. In the transaction Tangeman and Smith take a farm of 154 acres in Jay county. The deal involves property worth about $40,000. The Grand has been owned and operated by Smith and Tangeman for many years, and in the last few years has been used for moving pictures in addition to the road shows.

IOWA

The Anderson Brothers' company have taken out a permit at the city hall for the remodeling of the old Dohany opera house at Sixth street and Broadway, Council Bluffs. The cost of the alterations were fixed at $40,000 in the permit.

One of the finest and most complete moving picture theatres in Marshaltown threw open its doors January 22 at 112 East Main street.

The theatre is the Strand, and is located where Strub's cafe formerly was situated.

The remodeling and improving of the building, done by F. L. Meeker, the owner, F. J. Ingledue and S. I. Boysen, the latter of Carroll, lessees, cost approximately $9,000, but this does not include the furnishings added by the lessees, as well as new motion picture machines.

KANSAS

The Princess theatre at Neodesha is now owned and managed by Wilson and Williams. Both are experienced showmen.

LOUISIANA

G. B. Mars, owner of Mars theatre, New Orleans, has recently increased the seating capacity to 1,000, installed opera chairs and is featuring an occasional act of vaudeville.

Jimmy's theatre, James Van Lotten owner and manager, opened in Donaldsonville on January 23. The theatre occupies a prominent corner in the People's Bank building in Mississippi street.

MAINE

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Welch have leased the Universal, formerly the Nickel theatre, Belfast, of Charles B. Eaton. The theatre had been run by H. H. Maddocks. Mr. Welch is a cornetist and Mrs. Welsh a pianist, and they can furnish their own music.

MASSACHUSETTS

Lexington hall, at the corner of Myrtle and Lawrence streets, Lawrence, formerly the meeting place of the local branch of the I. W. W., has experienced a change and has been opened to the Lawrence public as a moving picture house.

A new moving picture house is to be built in Lawrence. It will be located on Broadway, just north of the old Park hotel, and it will be erected by the Bicknell estate. James E. Allen is at work on the plans. The playhouse will be run by Jones and Colemen, the present owners of the Post Office bowling alleys.

William E. Furber, of Boston, general publicity representative of the Metro Pictures Corp., of Boston, the American Feature Film Co. and the Louis B. Mayer Enterprises, was recently in Lowell in the interests of the latter company, which will erect a new theatre in Middlesex street for the purpose of motion picture exhibition. The company has secured land at 72 Middlesex street. The theatre will seat about 1,500 and will have one balcony.

Mrs. W. S. Kimball is remodeling the interior of her monitor block property, Springfield, to provide for a moving picture theatre, which will be carried on under local management.

The Park theatre, Attleboro, has reopened under new management. Louis Gerardi will be in charge and the new policy of the house will bring to Attleboro some of the best film features available.

James A. Brady, of Athol, has leased adjoining church property near the residence of St. Leos Parish, and it will be transformed into a moving picture theatre.

MICHIGAN

Pontiac is to have a new theatre that will seat 1,700. It will be along amphitheatre style, similar to the Majestic in Detroit. The property has already been secured at 1537 Gratiot avenue. Frank Farrington will build it and C. Howard Crane will design it.

The men who will own the theatre are Harry Goldstein, who was one of the original organizers of the Detroit-Majestic theatre; James O'Donnell, Detroit capitalist, and A. I. Marentette, of the Detroit-Palace theatre.

The property is 160 by 100 feet. Work will start in March and same is to be completed not later than the last of July.

F. A. Pelley, the new lessee of the Fuller theatre, Kalamazoo, is running motion pictures, with an occasional legitimate road attraction.

The new Robbins theatre, Grand Haven, is well under way and will be completed by spring. It will seat 500.

A theatre is to be erected at the corner of Mack and Holcomb avenues, Detroit, on the east side. It will have a large seating capacity accommodating at least 1,000. The architect who is now working on the plans is Christian W. Brandt.

Harry Nichols, formerly of the Majestic theatre, Washington, D. C., has been appointed manager of the Forest theatre, Detroit, recently leased to P. P. Craft and Fred Randall.

MISSOURI

The Pendleton theatre, on Pendleton avenue, in St. Louis, has been reopened by J. W. Cotter, former manager of the Kriterion exchange on Locust street.

The Arsenal theatre that opened last week on the corner of Grand and Arsenal streets, is the third of the Triangle houses to open in St. Louis.

The American, in the business district on Market street, shows the first run of Triangle pictures, after which they move out to the King's, on Kings Highway near Delmar, out in the west end of the city.

The Arsenal divides the big program, showing half of it at a time and changing twice a week.

John Ernie, who has just finished building his $12,000 theatre at 2841 Pestalozzi street, St. Louis, opened for business the last week in January. The new house is very modern in its equipment, with its two new motor driven Motiograph projecting machines, and its seven hundred comfortable seats for the patrons. In the spring Mr. Ernie proposes to build an airdome near the theatre.

H. S. Jewell, owner of the Jefferson theatre at Springfield, has let a contract that calls for extensive improvements in the building.

Soft Music, Not Noise, Effective in Picture Playing

By EUGENE F. LICOME

Temptation to Introduce Ten or Twelve Climaxes in a Four of Five-Reel Feature Should Be Avoided—Orchestra and Organ Form Best Combination—Music Should Be Continuous—Cornet Should Not Be Used with Less Than Fifteen Musicians.

FOR a long time I have watched your music page hoping that some exhibitor would let us have his ideas regarding his music. I do not remember any exhibitor ever writing his opinions, although he is so vitally concerned. I presume it is because the exhibitor doesn't know much about music, yet he is engaging a certain orchestra, pianist or organist.

If his patrons do not make too strong complaint he thinks the pianist all right, but at the same time if he sought some really intelligent advice, he would have good music; so good that people would talk about it, and it would be the means of increased business instead of being met with indifference.

An exhibitor presumes that the music is good if his public does not complain frequently. That is not true; the average person does not like to register complaints—he simply goes to some other house.

Now it is most peculiarly characteristic of the exhibitor rarely to accept any advice regarding his music. All he thinks of is—how cheap can he get somebody to play the piano? Occasionally one hears of a musician being employed because he is artistic and can play the pictures; but this condition happens far too infrequently.

However, since organs and orchestra are being used so much, the music has improved in the better houses, but the ideas of either the manager or musicians are usually such that they do not help the picture, and we all know the pictures frequently require help.

Orchestra and Organ Form Effective Combination

The orchestra and organ form the most effective combination for pictures, for the reason that music can be selected to portray properly the action on the screen. When the orchestra is compelled to rest the organ can continue the main theme or a similar figure and the absence of the orchestra will not break the continuity of the music.

Music for the picture should be continuous. How disagreeable is a break either to complete silence or silence followed by the piano alone; how thin and weak the piano sounds after the orchestra; how perfectly the organ comes in.

I should like some orchestral conductor in a picture house tell me why he uses a cornet and frequently a cornet and trombone in a ten piece orchestra. Some music arrangers may be at fault. In my opinion the cornet should not be used in an orchestra of less than fifteen men.

The cornet stands out too boldly and is to me a disturbing element in a proper musical accompaniment for pictures. The brass of an orchestra is too apt to play above the picture, thereby making the music too prominent.

At the Strand theatre I sometimes feel that the pictures are secondary to the music and I have heard others express the same opinion.

At the Knickerbocker theater we heard some ludicrous music for a high class house. Think of paying one or two dollars to hear only a piano accompany a comic picture. This has been changed since Mr. Rothapfel has taken charge.

At the Broadway theatre the combination of organ and orchestra is most satisfactory. The organist and orchestra really follow the picture and the ability of the musicians is such that I am certain I voice the opinion of many music lovers that this is one of the best examples of playing for pictures.

Four Musicians and an Organ Satisfactory

What is accomplished at this theatre can be done just as satisfactorily in smaller houses. Three or four musicians with an organ can play the picture satisfactorily and make the entire performance artistic and entertaining to every patron.

Playing pictures properly does not allow noise. Soft music is most effective except for climaxes, but the musicians should resist the temptation of playing ten or twelve climaxes during a four or five-reel feature.

I have heard and seen some very peculiar ideas of musical accompaniment for pictures. Attending a performance recently in a theatre in Vermont, I was amazed the hear the orchestra of five, including a piano, play a selection of three minutes and then stop for two minutes; no music whatever during the two minutes. This continued throughout the evening.

I spoke to the manager about it and he frankly told me: "The leader says there isn't enough music to play for the pictures all the time." And the leader got away with it.

This manager comes to New York once a month and in most ways keeps abreast of the times and apparently knows when the music is good. He attends all the good plays and theatres in New York. But can any one explain his indifference to the value of a proper musical accompaniment for his pictures?

I presume if you sat down with him and talked it out his final remark would be: "Well, you don't know these people up here. They come to see the picture and would come even if we had no music."

How many times have I heard this from exhibitors? What a commentary on the intelligence of their public. When will the exhibitor get out of this class?

Who is going to help educate the exhibitor to a proper appreciation of the value of proper musical accompaniment? I am sure any of us who understand the music question would give advice to all those seeking it.

PHILADELPHIA PICTURE THEATRES MAKE STRONG BIDS FOR POPULARITY—WURLITZER AND AUSTIN ORGANS INSTALLED

THE Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia, has for the past few weeks been under the management of S. H. Talbott, while Steve Talbott has charge of the publicity work.

Gentlemen:

I have been using my Seeburg Pipe Organ-Orchestra fourteen hours daily since May 1, 1914, and it has always given perfect satisfaction. My theatre opens at 9 a. m. and closes at 11 p. m.

I purchased the Seeburg because I considered it the best and still consider it superior to any.

Yours truly,
J. D. OLINGER.

the past year or more been definitely committed to the picture policy with more or less success.

Since the Talbotts, father and son, have taken hold a marked increase in attendance has been noted, due to consistent and persistent advertising combined with wide-awake publicity methods.

The orchestra has given way to a $10,000 Wurlitzer organ, made especially for picture houses, combining a complete orchestral equipment with a large pipe organ.

The Opera House used this organ about a year ago. Last autumn it gave way to the orchestra when Triangle pictures came to the theatre. Again, after complete reconstruction does the pipe organ come into its own. The music is in the hands of Professor John B. Hartranft, who made such a success of the Hope-Jones-Wurlitzer at the Germantown theatre.

The Fox feature, "The Serpent" had to be cancelled at the Opera House as the Censors banned it. "Carmen," with Theda Bara, was put in the breach and scored a hit.

Beginning next week "Behind German Battleship Lines" under the auspices of the Philadelphia North American is booked for a long run at this theatre.

W. H. Durborough the camera man who photographed these 8,000 feet of real war scenes, runs his war motor car up and down Chestnut street at the busy hours, firing a large gun at intervals, which novel advertisement is attracting much attention. A lecturer accompanies the pictures.

There will be continuous performances daily from 1 p. m., with prices twenty-five cents. The Palace, one of the big Stanley houses at 1214 Market street, of which Jay Mastbaum is manager, is putting the last touch to its recent overhauling by ordering a large Austin organ, which will be in readiness for the spring business. The orchestra will be retained in connection with the organ.

The newest picture house to be erected in Philadelphia has been dubbed the Fifty-sixth street, from its location in West Philadelphia at Fifty-sixth and Chestnut streets. Walter Jacobs, formerly of the Imperial, will manage the house which will open on Lincoln's Birthday, February 12.

H. M. Pedrick is architect for Louis Silberman who is asking for bids on a picture theatre at Seventy-ninth street and Eastwick avenue. This will be a two-story, brick and stone building.

Music Plot for Pathe Gold Rooster Feature: "The Precious Packet"

By Ernst Luz. Projection Time Sixty-Six Minutes

THIS plot is adapted so as to make it possible for the pianist, one man orchestra player, organist or orchestra leader to make some prior preparation for playing the picture. The numbers suggested need not be used; similar numbers, or numbers suggested by the Notes will do as well. It is intended that no unnecessary expense be added for exhibitor or musician.

	Description of Music	Number Suggested	Cue to Stop Number
		PART 1.
1.	Rom. Intro & Waltz XXX	"Spirit of Love" (J. Remick)	"On the morning of the big race," etc.
2.	Inter. XX	"Galloper" (M. Witmark)	"A few tense moments," etc.
3.	Galop. XX	"Highstepper" (W. Jacobs)	"There's no hope for her, sir," etc.
4.	Dr. Andte. X	"A. B. C. Dramatic Set No. 4"—B. 2	"An evening of grave moment."
5.	Waltz XX (P)	"Tout-a-Vous" (Jos. W. Stern and Company)	Connects 1 and 2.
		PART 2.
			"A shattered faith," etc.
6.	Desc. (Hy.-Path.) XX	"Fairy Tales" (C. Fischer)	"Allen Kingdom," etc.
7.	Waltz Lento (Hy.Leg.) XXX	"Minor and Major" (Ricordi and Company)	Roulette wheel spun around.
8.	Desc. (Hy.) XXX	"Adoration" (C. Fischer and Company)	Connects 2 and 3.
		PART 3.
			"At Sea."
9.	Hy.-Dr.-Desc. X	"A. B. C. Dramatic Set No. 2"—A1 (Jos. W. Stern and Company)	After plotter making search in stateroom.
10.	Hurry	"A. B. C. Dramatic Set No. 2"—B2	Robber escapes from stateroom.
11.	Hy.-Intro. & Waltz XXX	"Unrequited Love" (Jos. W. Stern and Company)	"A strange land," etc.
12.	Inter XXX	"Curly" (Leo. Feist)	Party leaves auto at mansion.
13.	Desc. (Hy.) X	"Garden of Allah" (Shapiro-Bernstein)	Connects 3 and 4.
		PART 4.
			"The Home Office," etc.
14.	Rom. Intro. & Waltz (Leg.) XXX	"Wedding Dance" (Jos. W. Stern)	"And with the passing days," etc.
15.	Desc. (Light Rom.) XX	"Cinema" (Ricordi and Company)	"But our love cannot continue," etc.
16.	Desc. (Hy.) XXX	"Twilight" (Chappell and Company)	Connects 4 and 5.
		PART 5
			"Love is a dangerous plaything."
17.	Galop (Open PP) X	"Ringmaster" (W. Jacobs)	"Curiosity," etc.
18.	Desc. (Hy.) XXXX	"Sunshine and Shadow (C. Fischer)	Nigel and Princess escape through window.
19.	Galop. XX	"Whip and Spur" (W. Jacobs)	Auto falls over cliff.
20.	Waltz Lento (Leg.) X	"Druid's Prayer" (Jos. W. Stern and Company)	To end.

Note.—In music plots each reel of film is divided into 10 units of time, each unit denoted by one X representing about 1½ minutes. Consequently when a number is designated by XX it plays abont 3 minutes, XXXX about 6 minutes, etc.

When no X appears after musical description it means that the number is very short and does not play a minute or more.

When cues to stop numbers are in quotation "———" it means that the Cue is reading matter or sub-title. All other cues are action on screen. All segues should be made quietly and clean. When quick segues or abrupt stops are necessary it will be mentioned in Cues or Notes.

When the time of each 1,000 feet of film is less than 15 minutes there will appear less than 10 X's in each reel. To get the correct time of projection for each reel, multiply the number of X's appearing in each reel by 1½.

Effect Notes.—Horse hoofs on a soft pad are good during the hurdle race covered by number 3. Heavy crash should be given as auto falls over cliff at end of number 19.

Music Notes.—This picture is not difficult to play and affords excellent opportunities for the perfect rendition of good numbers. All cues are sufficiently long to make good musical programs a feature, each picture thought being worked out individually.

Nos. 1 and 14 should be long concert waltzes with classy introductions having a positive romantic appeal. Nos. 2 and 12 should be 2/4 lively numbers known as intermezzos.

Nos. 3, 17 and 19 should be light galops depicting hurried or excitable action. No. 4 should be a short andante movement. No. 5 must be a society dance waltz.

Nos. 6, 8, 13, 16 and 18 are slow and heavy serious numbers played legato and maintaining the appeal as designated in music plot. Nos. 7 and 20 must be classy waltz lento movements played legato and slow.

Nos. 9 and 10 are short melodramatic numbers. No. 11 must be a long concert waltz with a dramatic introduction. No. 15 should be a slow number with a light romantic appeal. A slow 6/8 number is preferred.

The picture can be played very nicely on the organ throughout. When orchestra and organ are used jointly, the first and last reels should be played by orchestra at all times.

Sweeping the Nation!

When Kitty Kelly of The Chicago Tribune saw the first of the "Musty Suffer" comedies at the Ziegfeld Theatre:—

"At last an original comedian has developed a cast of genuine funniness which doesn't show a trace of Chaplinitis. . . ."

And after she saw the second:—

"A short cycle of pure fun . . . into which Harry Watson has put some more of his perfectly original comedy. . . ."

And the third:—

"Another of the Kleine 'Musty Suffer' difficulties of Harry Watson shook the Sabbath calm of the Ziegfeld into merriment. . . ."

The fourth:—

"Harry Watson has put a new comedy figure on the map in his mirthful imaginings of 'Musty Suffer.' Mr. Watson's fun is remarkable for its unimitativeness and cleanliness. It is new clown fun free from suggestiveness."

THE LIFE BLOOD OF BUSINESS

DESTROY competition and you strike a body blow to trade. Co-operation is a lubricant, but merit is, and must continue to be, the final test of value.

Not the least of the advantages of the "Open-Booking" policy is that it is the only method of distribution which permits competition between producing factors, and thereby insures the highest general average of excellence from them all.

Under this "Open-Booking" policy, as operated by the V-L-S-E, no one manufacturer's product is "tied" to that of another, and by reason of our "Minimum and Maximum" price basis, each must exert themselves to the utmost, not only to get the maximum number of bookings, but to gain the maximum price as well.

In other words, the exhibitor picks from the releases of all the manufacturers making up the Big Four, that which he believes has the greatest drawing power for his particular patronage, rather than being forced to take what is given him by reason of a closed contract.

And furthermore he pays for what he buys on the basis of each individual feature's box office value, instead of by a fixed flat rate, which is made to apply regardless of whether the film is good, bad or indifferent.

That such a system of booking makes for the keenest competition, and that this competition, in turn, promotes the utmost in picture quality, is best evidenced by the productions described on the succeeding pages.

"THOU SHALT NOT COVET"

Written by James Oliver Curwood

A SELIG Red Seal Play Thronged with Heart Throbs and Thrills
Featuring TYRONE POWER and KATHLYN WILLIAMS

"As the great ship shivered and groaned, a live thing—I thought of My Neighbor's Wife. I rushed to her state room and there found her helpless. I gathered her into my arms and with her, I leaped into the sea. When she awoke her mind was deranged from the shock and she thought I was her husband. In her strange madness she called me by her husband's name and gave me all the love she had for him. In the jungle we made our home and she came to me as she had always come to her husband, and I prayed for strength in my hour of dire temptation."

"THOU SHALT NOT COVET"

Kathlyn Williams battles with an enraged leopard! Bona fide scenes in Egypt and in Darkest Africa! A fight to death between a tiger and leopard! A gigantic ocean liner strikes a derelict in the night and sinks!

In itself, this is a gigantic testimonial to Frank H. Spearman's stirring railroad film novel—one never before given to any film serial.

"The Girl and the Game" has outstripped the greatest box-office records of other serials. Its success is stupendous! Read some of these exhibitors' letters—brimming over with enthusiasm. They prove the enormous money-making, drawing power of this famous railroad film—with fearless Helen Holmes and her great company.

ROSE THEATRE
Chicago.

Of all the serials I have run, this has been by far the most successful, both as far as the money is concerned and the satisfaction of my patrons.

Of course this serial is not completed as yet, but the first four that I have run certainly convinced me that you are producing a serial that will become more popular as it goes along.

WHITE EAGLE THEATRE
South Bend, Ind.

The picture is wonderful and everyone was more than satisfied. The advertising we gave the picture brought us wonderful results, in fact, more than we expected. The crowd got to us at 6:45 p.m. and at 9:30 we still had no time to breathe.

FULLER OPERA HOUSE
Madison, Wis.

I want to thank you for the arrangements we made to open "The Girl and the Game" last Monday, running Chapters 1 and 2. We played to capacity business and every one was very enthusiastic over the film, and I want to say personally that it gives promise of being the greatest serial ever placed on the market.

BIJOU THEATRE
Minneapolis, Minn.

Bijou-Jitney Theatre, Minneapolis, ran Chapter No. 4 of "The Girl and the Game" last Friday and played to 4,300 people, which is the biggest single day in the history of this theatre.

If you will remember, on the first chapter they opened up to 3,100 people, which broke all records for attendance on opening night for a serial or series photoplay and this increase in four weeks of 1,200 people certainly is a big boost for the quality of our production.

THE CRYSTAL THEATRE
Decatur, Ill.

I am well satisfied with my first day with "The Girl and the Game." A cold day and played against "The Birth of a Nation" with good house.

CASINO THEATRE
Cincinnati, O.

In reference to the serial picture, "The Girl and the Game," wish to advise that we have found same to be a very good attraction. The acting, directing, settings, etc., are very good and we would recommend same to other exhibitors as we have found same to be a very profitable picture.

GILGER THEATRE
Norwalk, Ohio.

I am writing to tell you of the great success "The Girl and the Game" made here when we ran the first episode Friday, 14th. Our expectations of this serial picture have been fulfilled, and our patrons are greatly interested and anxious to see the next episode.

We are expecting that this picture will rival the "Million Dollar Mystery" as a money getter.

COLONIAL THEATRE
Bloomington, Ill.

Our theatre only seats 214, but we played crowded houses continuously all afternoon and night with the first chapter. Look forward to good business again next Tuesday.

The Noose Begins to Tighten

THE censorship of motion pictures is one of the strongest proofs that Abraham Lincoln was right when he said, "You can fool all the people some of the time and some of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all the people all the time."

* * *

THE antiquated assumption by numerous groups of wiseacres and humbugs in various states that they have a commission from on high to think for their fellow beings, is beginning to be appreciated by their fellow beings for what it is really worth.

There are so many ways in which men can make fools of themselves that even the wisest err now and then on the side of the majority.

BUT the most glorious exhibition a man can give of his follies, his weaknesses, his caprices and peculiarities, is as a moral and artistic thinking-machine for his contemporaries.

Our friends the censors have had so much rope during the last year and a half that the noose is beginning to tighten around their necks. And the noose, in one or two states, is being fastened in place by the newspapers.

THAT is the position which Superintendent of Public Instruction Ross, of the Kansas Board of Censors, is now occupying.

Ross decided that "The Birth of a Nation" should not be exhibited in the state of which he professes to be the moral dictator. He found nothing immoral in the picture, nothing obscene, nothing corrupting. But the race prejudice idea danced before his eyes until it charmed him. On that he based his decision.

ONE might have supposed that Ross would have observed the career of the picture in other states, acquainted himself with its capacity for producing race riots, and shaped his judgment accordingly,—one might, that is, if one did not know Ross. But so reasonable an action was too much to expect from one who had been the author of so many fanatical decisions in the past.

Ever since his verdict was handed down, the newspapers of Kansas have been ransacking the English language for adequate means of expressing their opinion of the censor. As one of them expressed it, Kansas' reputation for stupidity is once more brilliantly vindicated.

OF course Mr. Ross can enforce his decision. The victory, such as it is, is his. But one is entitled to assume that even in Kansas the Ross species is in the minority.

A few more victories like this, and Mr. Ross will have opportunity of retiring to Florida, or some other rendezvous of outworn public officials, and writing the memoirs of his censorship for the benefit of posterity's public libraries.

THIS is not the first time the Kansas press has paid its compliments to the censor board. But it is the first time that it has been done so widely or in so unvarnished a manner.

It is also true that the press, as one of the nerve and brain centers of the body public, senses the meaning of this sort of thing in advance of the rest of the community.

But it doesn't take very many incidents like this to arouse something very similar to public resentment. On that day Mr. Ross will learn that there is one thing greater than private opinion, and that is public opinion.

A LIKE state of affairs exists in Ohio. There, too, "The Birth of a Nation" seems about to prove the stumbling block of Mrs. Maude Murray Miller and her humble servants.

Ugly rumors are in circulation. There is talk of political machination at the bottom of the ban against the Griffith picture. The exhibitors of Ohio,—the Max Stearn contingent this time,—have thought the occasion one for deliberation on their part, and an inquiry into the case.

SEVERAL exhibitors have openly declared that if politics is found to have been connected in any way with the prohibition of "The Birth of a Nation" from the state, they will abandon all belief in censorship.

Whatever the outcome of this agitation in the Buckeye state, one thing is certain; it will leave the censors on a much less secure foundation than they were before it occurred. It will set more of the citizenry to considering the real why and wherefore of the censors and censorship. It will bring more men and women to question, not only the necessity, but even the wisdom of it. It will hasten the day when a referendum will sweep the censorate into the discard with other politicians' and reformers' follies which have had their day and ceased to be.

But such performances as those with which we are being weekly regaled from the censorship centers make one wonder that any man in the business can deliberately endorse this travesty on law and justice as a method of protection.

It is very much like engaging a troupe of apes to take the place of watchdogs in your house. Undoubtedly they make noise enough to drive away the intruders, but once you have let them loose on your premises, you will very soon have no property worth protecting.

Newspaper Reviews of Pictures

EVIDENCES multiply on every hand that exhibitors and exchangemen, following an urgent suggestion made in MOTION PICTURE NEWS some months ago, are winning the newspapers to the cause of the motion picture.

We have also made the further suggestion that exhibitors urge their newspapers to review their pictures as a regular part of weekly newspaper routine. We have pointed out that this is possible, of course, only in the case of pictures which are shown more than one day. But the two and three-day run is becoming more popular, and this fact alone ought to stimulate exhibitors to seek newspaper criticism and comment.

NOT alone for the sake of the exhibitors have we made this suggestion. We make it also for the sake of the industry at large. Many newspapers—most newspapers, in fact—have a good deal to learn about the motion picture. Many of them do not yet seem to know that the motion picture is an individual art, to be appraised in an individual way. Some of the largest papers in the country inject into their picture reviews comparisons with stage plays in general. The tone of these reviews is: "The motion picture will never supplant the spoken drama."

This, of course, is banal nonsense. Nobody supposes that the motion picture will ever supplant the stage play. So far as we are aware, nobody wants it to. The sun will never supplant the moon, the novel will never supplant the poem, one star will never supplant another. Which proves, of course, that there is a distinct place in the universe for the sun, the moon, the novel, the poem, one constellation, another constellation.

THE motion picture will never destroy the spoken play any more than the spoken play will destroy the motion picture. And a critic who cannot look at a picture, or write about it, without feeling himself called upon to allege, by direct statement or inference, that the motion picture is a poor imitation of the stage may be a worthy gentleman, but he is a candidate for the kindergarten of photodramatic art.

This attitude of mind in the newspaper critic can be removed, and replaced by a healthy attitude, only if the critic learns something about pictures. Until he does his criticism is not worth the paper it is written on. And he will not learn very much unless he sees a good many pictures, studies them, and tries to find out what the art of the picture really is.

Newspaper reviews of pictures ought to be encouraged everywhere. The newspapers in the aggregate possess a tremendous amount of intelligence; they can review pictures properly, if they set their minds to it. Some newspapers, as it is, publish excellent reviews; when more of them fall in line the industry will receive distinct benefit.

The Industry and National Politics

A NEW and significant testimony to the importance of this industry has recently been given in Los Angeles, where a movement is now on foot to send a member of the industry,—an experienced, practical motion picture man,—to Congress to represent the motion picture as one of his constituents in the halls of the nation.

* * *

THERE is every reason why such a movement should receive the enthusiastic support of the entire business. Already a formidable section of the House and Senate are those members who are known to be more or less officially clothed with authority to speak and act and vote in behalf of some one of the nation's industries. "The Steel Senators," "The Sugar Senators," "The Cotton Senators," "The Railroad Senators" are familiar to everyone. Why not add to this number, charged with the perfectly legitimate mission of presenting the legitimate needs and rights of business to their fellow lawmakers, a Congressman who can plead the cause of and defend the name and reputation of the picture at Washington?

The legislative matters of the past two Congresses have shown how useful such a man could have been, had one been there to represent the business.

And no more fitting district in the country for such a man to take his seat from could be discovered than that around Los Angeles as a center. That city owes much to the producers who have established their manufactories in and around it and turned millions of dollars into its coffers. Los Angeles could not well afford to ignore the offer of one of the producers' group to represent her in Congress, nor is there any reason to believe such an offer would be ignored.

THERE is food for serious thought on the part of the eastern producers in this contemplated action of their western brothers. California is not the only state in the Union which could logically send a motion picture man to Congress. New York could consistently do so. It is by no means impossible to conceive of a representative from Illinois taking his seat in the House from the ranks of the motion picture industry.

The motion picture has had little or nothing to do with politics, it is true. But, unfortunately, politics has had entirely too much to do with the motion picture.

If there is no help for this,—if politics and the picture must henceforth be inseparable, why not take a long and important step toward making the relation as pleasant and as useful as possible?

George Kleine Outlines New Billie Burke Novel

President of the Kleine Feature Service Gives First Information Regarding Pictorial Serial Written by Rupert Hughes for American Stage Favorite—Films Being Made at New York City Studio—Kolker Will Play Lead, Walter Edwin Directing—Novel Will Contain Twenty Two-Reel Chapters

"I DO not believe that, in my entire career in the motion picture business, I have ever seen a production so lavishly treated—so carefully handled as to cast and details—as the new Billie Burke novel."

This is the gist of a statement made by George Kleine, head of the Kleine Feature Service, in response to a large number of queries for information regarding the new Kleine-Burke novel.

"Exhibitors have sought detailed information about this new play through our various offices, but, until now, we have been unable to give out any information.

"The new production is by Rupert Hughes. Mr. Hughes is probably the best known fiction writer in America today. In presenting this effort of Mr. Hughes' on the screen we will endeavor to establish the fact that the motion picture is a logical medium for original literary activity. We intend to demonstrate that a modern work of fiction can be presented quickly and clearly through the medium of the screen—that the novel in picture form is easily interpreted, entertaining, interesting.

Billie Burke Known Everywhere

"We have been very fortunate in securing our cast. Billie Burke is known almost everywhere. She is a great favorite. She deserves all credit. Her charming manner—her grace and beauty—make her an ideal screen subject. She photographs beautifully. Her method of interpreting the emotions—cheerfulness, anxiety, fear, hate—is distinctive and decidedly original.

"Our leading man is Henry Kolker. His successes on the speaking stage, as well as on the screen, are so numerous that his name suggests his power. Mr. Kolker is a star of great magnitude with exceptional dramatic talent.

"There has been much attention paid to the minor parts in the new novel. In order to interpret the roles properly we had to have certain types. We have given considerable time to our selection of these players. We have secured David Powell, whose work on the speaking stage for Charles Frohman and David Belasco won for him an enviable reputation. He has appeared in a number of Famous Players film productions. He will be cast as Richard Freneau in the new novel. We have also secured William Roselle—a great favorite on Broadway—to play the part of the heroine's brother. We have secured the operatic star, Wm. T. Carleton, to play the part of the heroine's father.

"Jule Power—who has been seen in many successes on the stage and screen, will interpret the role of Marcia, the sister of our heroine. You see, we have surrounded Miss Burke with an exceptionally strong supporting cast.

Story a Society Drama

"As to the story, it will be a society drama for which Rupert Hughes has become so well known. Miss Burke will be seen in the role of a youthful society girl whose father is a wealthy banker. Her engagement to a rich Wall Street broker and her subsequent love affair with a dashing young doctor form the basis of a mystery plot that is excitingly interesting. Throughout the play Miss Burke will wear gowns especially designed for this production. It is our intention to make the gowns a sort of 'fashion bazaar.'

"The action of the new novel will be logical. There will be numerous stirring adventures throughout to maintain strong interest. The play will have all the attention-holding elements that usually are found in the most successful magazine stories.

"In regard to production—the films are now being made at my studio in New York City. Those who have seen this studio know that it is thoroughly equipped with every modern convenience and invention known to cinematographic art. It shelters four of the largest of indoor stages as well as a large sun-light studio.

Walter Edwin Will Direct

"To insure proper direction of the pictures I have appointed my chief director, Walter Edwin, as director. Mr. Edwin has many novel photographic treatments in view for the new play and I am sure we will see great results from his effort.

"One of the 'unusual things' that will mark the new Billie Burke novel as an exceptional work of film craft is the method used in making the settings. We are building every set of lumber—just as substantially as though we were building for permanent use. We will not use wall board. All sets are being covered with house finish, oils, etc., just as though they were being permanently constructed. By this method we get better photography and natural shadows. Also, this gives us an opportunity to harmonize all our interiors—furniture and decorations. Each room is laid out in period style—furniture and wall decoration in perfect harmony. This work is in charge of Mr. Frederick Newton Williams, an expert interior architect and designer. We secured his exclusive services for this production.

"Everything is being done that will make this picture an example of thoroughness and perfection of detail. No expense is being spared to make this a work of filmcraft that will stand out as a mark. We have such an exceptional novelist—Rupert Hughes, such an exceptional cast headed by Billie Burke, and such an exceptional producing force, that I am certain we will secure wonderful results.

"The new novel will be presented in twenty chapters of two reels each. It will be released to exhibitors through the Kleine Feature Service Exchanges. No release date has been set."

Ohio Exhibitors Respond to "Family Program" Plan

McGown, Special Representative, Reads at Branch Meeting Number of Replies to Circular Letter of League Asking Co-Operation with Cleveland Federation of Women's Clubs

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Cleveland, O., Feb. 12.

AT the last meeting of the Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors League C. A. McGown, special representative, read a number of replies to the circular letter of the league asking for co-operation in the joint effort of the exhibitors and the Cleveland Federation of Women's clubs to arrange family programs.

The Edison Company replied that it was furnishing a reprint of "Gladioli," as requested. The Motion Picture Board of Trade congratulated the league.

The Universal, Kalem and Vitagraph companies promised co-operation. The Thanhouser Company promised to bring the matter before its president.

In furtherance of the effort to arrange "family programs" in Cleveland neighborhood motion picture houses, Cleveland exhibitors last week screened a number of old films in the presence of more than fifty representatives of the Federation.

The projection room of the General Film Company, 1022 Superior avenue, N. E., was used for the private demonstration. "Gladioli," "The Stoning" and Niagara Falls were among the pictures shown.

A grotesque comedy film passed by the Ohio censors was also shown as an example of what Cleveland exhibitors regard as unsuitable pictures to present to children and young people.

Attorney Ben J. Sawyer, president of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors League, explained the attitude of the motion picture men and pleaded for more active co-operation and greater tolerance toward pictures dealing with the vital problems of life by the club women of the city.

BROWNE TO FURNISH "PREPAREDNESS" VEHICLE FOR BRUCE

Clifford Bruce, who has been featured in several of the big Fox successes, has just made arrangements with Porter Emerson Browne, whereby that noted author is to furnish a number of picture exclusively for Mr. Bruce. One of these is to take up the question of national defense, and it is announced that Colonel Theodore Roosevelt is taking great interest in the production.

Mr. Browne was Col. Roosevelt's guest at luncheon at Oyster Bay February 3, and the subject was discussed at length. Some of the best known pictures in which Mr. Bruce has appeared thus far are: "A Fool There Was," "Children of the Ghetto," "Princess Romanoff," "Lady Audley's Secret," and "A Woman's Past."

"Exhibitor Is a Power in Anti-Censorship Fight"

President Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation Declares That the Battle Is Not Merely a Selfish Effort on Behalf of Industry, but Is Made for Public

THE exhibitor can play a very large part in the education of the people to the rights of the motion picture as opposed to censorship.

President Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation is making efforts to impress the exhibitors of the country with their power and the power of the screen in presenting the censorship issue to the people.

Mr. Freuler holds that the fight against censorship is not merely a selfish effort on behalf of the motion picture industry, but rather in a large sense one for the rights of the public which is served by the motion picture.

In an interview given out at his New York office Mr. Freuler said:

"It is up to the exhibitor to carry on a campaign against censorship among the people of the nations.

"He is in direct contact with them every day; they hear from him every day on his screen. When they think about the motion picture they think of his theatre.

"Because he is the publisher of the motion picture the problem of censorship is peculiarly his. I do not mean imply that we feel he should carry on the fight for the freedom of the picture art unaided.

"What I do mean is that he must come to realize just how much of the cause of the motion picture is his cause.

"The Mutual Film Corporation and most of the other great distributors and makers and motion pictures are aligned in the fight for the rights of the art and industry.

"Large sums of money and unrelenting effort are being put into this movement by those who make and deliver the picture to your theatre.

"But our efforts will count for little unless the exhibitor helps ; he takes advantage of his position to put the question up to the people.

"The fight against censorship is a fight for good pictures, true, unhampered art. If this industry is to be controlled by those who stand as the advocates of censorship the motion picture will not be art, or amuseor anything else that the censors' idea of the rules of conduct.

"Censorship of the motion picture which means—pre-publication judgment—means that somebody else is trying to do your thinking for you, is deciding whether you shall be permitted to think for yourself or not.

"The exhibitor must let the people know that there is a movement for censorship; that somebody or collection of somebodies is trying to dictate to them what shall be published on the screen for the people.

"The great mass of the people will not really understand that their rights are at stake in the censorship question unless the exhibitors know about it."

Famous Play Holding Boards Since 1864 a Pallas Film

"David Garrick," in Secret Production on West Coast and Just Completed for Paramount Program, with Dustin Farnum in Chief Role, Has Had Wonderful Stage Record

THE Pallas Pictures studio, Los Angeles, announces that this concern has just completed an elaborate production of "David Garrick," the famous classic which has been produced time and again on the speaking stage since 1864, when E. A. Sothern created the title character in England.

The production of "David Garrick" in films has been going on for the past several months at the Pallas studios, but has not been made public because of the fact that contemplation of its filmization was evident among other producers.

Not even the members of the New York offices of the company were aware of the fact that the staging of this famous subject was under way for the screen.

In the title role of the Pallas Pictures version, Dustin Farnum is presented in a part for which he is well suited as will be realized by the many thousands who are familiar with this subject.

The chief part of "David Garrick" has proved irresistibly attractive to many successors of the elder Sothern and only several weeks ago his famous son opened in a revival of the celebrated play with great success at the Booth theatre, New York City.

The part of the actor pursued at first by love and then himself in love with the young girl is one of appeal to every actor.

The success of this comedy in England has more than been duplicated here, its initial appearance in this country being presented with George C. Boniface at the Kelly and Leon theatre, New York, on March 8, 1872.

Ever since it has been repeatedly produced here starring such famous actors as Tomasso Salvini at the Academy of Music in 1873, Lawrence Barrett at the Star in 1886, Bogunie Davison at the New Stadt in 1868, Sir Charles Wyndham at Palmer's in 1889, Nat C. Goodwin at Miner's Fifth Avenue in 1895. Harrison L. Wolfe at Star in 1900, E. S. Willard at the Garden in 1901 and at the Harlem Opera House in 1905 and William J. Kelley at the Metropolis in 1908.

E. H. Sothern first appeared in the T. W. Robertson comedy on February 8, 1873, at Wallack's, New York, although at this time he did not appear in the role created by his father. It was only last month when Mr. Sothern first appeared in the main character.

The photoplay is entirely completed and ready for release on the Paramount program.

REAL BANK VAULTS IN "IRON CLAW" SCENES

Edward José, who is producing Pathé's next serial, "The Iron Claw," has obtained permission from a large Jersey City bank to make use of their vaults for several of his scenes.

This is a distinct departure from the rules of the bank, as large sums are constantly kept on hand in these vaults.

MANY MULTIPLE REELERS FROM SELIG THROUGH GENERAL FILM

The Selig Company, following its policy of improvement in film production, has just announced a number of multiple-reel dramas to be released through General Film service.

"The Dream of Eugene Arem" is a picturized version by Colin Campbell of Thomas Hood's world-famous poem. Tyrone Power enacts the leading role. Colin Campbell is responsible for the adaptation and production of this film drama.

He has produced such film dramas as "The Spoilers," "The Ne'er-do-Well," and "The Carpet from Bagdad." "The Dream of Eugene Aram" will be released Monday, February 28.

On Monday, March 6, there will be released through General Film Service a Selig psychological drama, "The Grinning Skull," written by W. E. Wing.

This drama carries a strong moral lesson on the sins of society and the San Francisco earthquake is said to be realistically depicted. Eugenie Besserer and other Selig stars enact the roles.

"The Regeneration of Jim Halsey," written and produced by Colin Campbell, will be released in General Film service on Monday, March 13. This features Thomas Santachi, Bessie Eyton and Guy Oliver.

WILBUR'S SECOND APPEARANCE IN A HORSLEY DE LUXE, FEB. 28

Crane Wilbur's second appearance in a five-reel Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition, is scheduled for February 28, when "A Law Unto Himself," a David Horsley production, will be released.

The story of this picture is the work of Lillian V. Brockwell, and is laid in the West.

The central figures are Allan Dwight, a sheriff, and Jean Belleau, a French surveyor, whose resemblance is so close that one can hardly be distinguished from the other.

The two characters are portrayed by Crane Wilbur, who interprets the two distinct types with an understanding that brings out his work as one of the outstanding features of the production.

In the cast besides Mr. Wilbur are Carl von Schiller, Louis Durham, E. W. Harris, Francis Raymond, Steve Murphy and George Clare, Jr.

The production was made under the direction of Robert B. Broadwell, who has displayed considerable ability in staging film plays by his efforts in the last three Crane Wilbur releases.

LETTERS FROM DAWSON SOMETIMES GET BY CENSOR AT SALONIKI

Albert K. Dawson, the cameraman sent to Europe by the American Correspondent Film Company in November, 1914, is at present in Saloniki, Turkey.

The rare letters which manage to get through report that he has obtained scenes of all the activities in and around Saloniki and will have them ready for shipment very soon.

Mr. Dawson has taken pictures for "The Battle and Fall of Przemysl," "The Battles of a Nation," and "The Warring Millions," all real war productions.

V-L-S-E Now Offers Complete Program Service

Inauguration of the Policy Begins with the Issuance Next Week of the First One-Reel Comedy Through the Big Four Organization, Together with the Regular Releases of the Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial Now Being Put Out by the Company—First Short Funmakers Will Feature Frank Daniels

WITH the first release next week of a one-reel comedy, through the V-L-S-E, together with the regular releases of the Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial, which is being put out through this organization, it is now possible for an exhibitor to get from the Big Four complete program service.

That the release of short subjects by the Vitagraph company, through the V-L-S-E, is simply the beginning of other releases of a similar nature, to be made by the other producing members of this combination, is a report prevalent throughout the trade.

The first of the comedy releases will feature Frank Daniels. This will be followed by comedies featuring Sidney Drew, and re-issues of Vitagraph's most popular comedies, featuring John Bunny. This order will be maintained in succeeding weeks.

These comedies are to be sold absolutely independent of regular features of the V-L-S-E. In other words, an exhibitor can book any or all of these comedies, regardless of whether he is using the V-L-S-E features or not.

The Big Four also wishes it to be understood that the addition of shorter subjects to its bookings, does not for a minute mean the lessening of the efforts being put forth to make its features measure up to the very highest requirements of the trade.

As a matter of fact, it is stated that the producing companies are already working on plans which will insure the V-L-S-E releasing even greater successes than those which they have already issued.

Lubin Makes Contract with Beach

The Lubin company, for instance, it is learned, has just entered into a contract with Rex Beach, whereby all the output of that widely known author will hereafter be produced by this company.

Preparations are already under way for the production of "The Barrier," "The Silver Horde," and "The Iron Trail." These will probably be put out in the order named.

Essanay, on the other hand, is planning some stirring productions of intense dramatic action and strong emotional parts, along lines that get away from the beaten path.

"Vultures of Society," which was released last week, was the first of this series.

This will be followed by "The Discard," which is to be released on February 28, and which is a story of the double life of a mother moving in high circles, and the disaster which is visited upon her innocent daughter as a result.

On March 13, Essanay will release "The Havoc," in five reels, written by the well-known playwright E. S. Sheldon. It will be the first photoplay to be produced in Essanay's new studio.

Gladys Hanson, who has been playing with Lou-Tellegen in "The Ware Case," will be the principal of this production, supported by Bryant Washburn and Charles Dalton.

"Thou Shalt Not Covet," which, aside from two of the widely-discussed spectacles now before the public, probably has received more commendation than any other film released recently, will be followed by the Selig company with "Unto Those Who Sin," available March 13. In this production Fritzi Brunette has an opportunity to take the feminine portion of moving picture audiences by storm, with the wide variety of sartorial creations which she wears.

"Purple and Fine Linen" Lure

The play is an unusual one, in which a lowly stenographer, inheriting the love of purple and fine linen, sacrifices almost every womanly instinct for modish dress and luxurious living.

The principal character graduates from a modest home into luxurious environment.

Vitagraph has completed its weekly schedule of releases, through the V-L-S-E, up until June 5. Beginning with February 28, the releases of this company include "For a Woman's Fair Name," with Robert Edeson, Eulalie Jensen, Harry Morey, William Dunn, and Belle Bruce; "The Hunted Woman," ready March 6, which has in its cast Marie de Bar and her husband, Joe de Bar.

This production is a stirring story of the building of the last great railroad through the Canadian Rockies, and is unique, in that its characters are people still living in the Northwest, the de Bars having their home at Prince Ruper, B. C., and the Ottos, the big fighting men in the picture, living at Jasper.

The heroine of the production is Josephine George, the wife of a construction engineer at Fort George.

Donald McDonald, who has a prominent part in the play, is no other than the famous prospector, who made the first big strike in the Yukon.

"Colton, U. S. N.," has been changed to "The Hero of Submarine D-2." This will appear on March 13, and will have as its principals Charles Richman and Eleanor Woodruff.

"Two-Edged Sword," March 20

Edith Storey and Evart Overton are the leads in the production scheduled for March 20, called "The Two-Edged Sword." The following week Antonio Moreno, Dorothy Kelly and Evart Overton will be seen in "The Supreme Temptation."

"God's Country and the Woman," which has been in the course of preparation for several months past at the Los Angeles studio of the Vitagraph company, will be shown on April 3.

Its principals include Nell Shipman, William Duncan and George Holt. On the tenth of that month, there is scheduled an emotional drama, titled "The Vital Question," with Virginia Pearson and Anders Randolf in the principal roles.

The succeeding week will mark the release of "Artie," featuring Charles Richman and Arline Pretty. There is a large cast of principals in the film scheduled for April 24, called "A Rift in the Lute." This includes Donald Hall, Dorothy Kelly, Harry Morey, Louise Beaudet and Bobby Connelly.

"The Ordeal of Elizabeth," which is due to appear on May 8, will have Lillian Walker, Evart Overton and Donald Hall in the chief roles.

During the preceding week, there will be released "The Redemption of Dave Darcey," and in their order beginning with May 15, there come "The Shop Girl," "The Silver Spell," "Degeneration," formerly "The Patriot," and lastly on June 5, "Joan Thursday."

LESSER PLANS POLICY OF AID TO EXHIBITOR IN SALE OF BEACH-SELIG FILM

Sol L. Lesser, of 218 West Forty-second street, who controls the national rights to Rex Beach's "Ne'er-Do-Well," has announced the policy under which the picture will be distributed.

This is to be a policy of aid to the exhibitor, in which every possible assistance will be given to the theatres which book the big feature.

Bookings for some of the largest theatres of the country, as well as the foremost motion picture houses in all cities, for a minimum of one week, ranging up to indefinite runs.

The price asked will vary, being based on a rate which will enable the exhibitor to make money from the showing. In arriving at this rate, the population, house capacity, location and all competitive conditions will be figured in.

"We are well equipped to give aids to exhibitor," said Mr. Lesser. "We have no large expensive office force, and are able to devote more money to this end than most distributors are. Everything to help the exhibitor fill his house will be furnished with the film, from complete musical orchestrations to lobby display, paper and newspaper advertising. In addition, will offer our experience in showing the exhibitor how to avail himself of these aids."

SIX, NOT FIVE, REELS, LENGTH OF "UNWRITTEN LAW"

The California Motion Picture Corporation announces its decision to release "The Unwritten Law," in six reels, instead of five, as recently stated. The picture will be handled through state rights buyers exclusively.

The California release for May will be "The Woman Who Dared," and this will also be offered in six reels.

"UNTO THOSE WHO SIN" PRESENTS FRITZI BRUNETTE AS STAR

The Selig Red Seal Play, "Unto Thos Who Sin," to be released through V-L-S-E on Monday, March 6, will, the Selig Company believes, be found a worthy successor to "Thou Shall Not Covet."

Miss Fritzi Brunette makes her initial debut as a star in V-L-S-E productions.

SCENE FROM "UNTO THOSE WHO SIN" (Selig Red Seal-V-L-S-E Play).

"Unto Those Who Sin" was written by James Oliver Curwood and truthfully presents the trials and temptations that beset the paths of working girls.

A stenographer working for a mere pittance which is snatched from her by her parents weekly, succumbs to the enticements of luxury and fine dress.

She sacrifices everything—even the love of an upright man—in order to satisfy her passion for purple and fine linen. And when it is too late she discovers that true love is the greatest prize of all and that the wages of sin are death.

"ELEPHANT" SMOKE EATERS HELP FORT LEE, N. J., FIRE FIGHTERS

Following out the "safety first" idea, the World Film Corporation has installed at its Fort Lee, N. J., studio and its other plants in the vicinity a fire department.

This department is composed of employees of the studio, most of whom live nearby. It works in conjunction with the regular uniform department of Fort Lee, and when its help is required to quench fires in the neighborhood, it co-operates with the Fort Lee fire fighters.

The "Smoke Eaters" of the World Film Corporation are very proud of their organization and have fire drills twice a week. The company is called for the present the Elephant Hook and Ladder and Engine Company, the name being derived from the trade mark of the World Film Corporation.

G. M. Anderson Severs Connection with Essanay

Secretary of Concern, Creator of "Broncho Billy," and the "A" of "S and A" Sells His Stock to George K. Spoor—Makes No Announcement of Plans

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Chicago, Feb. 12.

G. M. ANDERSON, creator of the film character "Broncho Billy," the "A" of "S and A" (Essanay), and for some years secretary of the Essanay company, has sold his minority holdings to George K. Spoor, and is no longer connected with the firm either as an actor or partner.

Mr. Anderson was originally with the Selig company, but affiliated himself with George K. Spoor in 1906, when the Indian Head concern was launched.

At that time Mr. Spoor had contracts with two Chicago vaudeville houses to furnish "chaser" pictures for emptying the theatres between various performances.

Operations were begun in a tiny studio in Clark street, and soon after "The Great Train Robbery" was completed, a picture that was considered at that time the greatest achievement in moving pictures.

Under the guidance of George K. Spoor this humble beginning was developed into the immense studios and laboratories that are now turning out Essanay pictures for world-wide distribution.

Following Mr. Spoor's policy of concentrating his organization in Chicago, a plan that has been most successful, it is probable that the Niles, Cal., studio will be abandoned.

Brenon a General of 10,000 in Oriental Sets

Fox Director Marshals This Multitude in Slave Market and Moorish City Scenes for Annette Kellermann Picture Under Production in Jamaica

DIRECTOR HERBERT BRENON marshalled ten thousand persons in the slave market and Moorish city scenes for the new Annette Kellermann picture now under production for William Fox in Jamaica.

These scenes are included in the million-dollar spectacle, upon which work has been proceeding since the middle of last August, and which is now more than half completed.

The production to date is said to have cost over $700,000, and the total cost is expected to reach about $1,100,000, according to the Fox offices.

The Moorish city set, built at a cost of $200,000, will show the slave mart and bazaars with thousands of men and women attired in elaborate Oriental costumes.

Several thousands of these are West Indian negroes, others were Hindus, and still others native Jamaicans totally unused to being "shot" by motion picture cameras.

Day after day these "mobs" were swung through their evolutions, the signals for them to stop or start being given by Director Brenon or his assistants with New York police whistles.

In the direction of these scenes, Brenon would be on horseback one moment, afoot in the midst of the mob the next, or the next moment would give his orders from a balustrade or perched on the shoulders of native blacks.

The completed picture will be ready for release some time in June.

Detroit League Files Protest Against Censorship

Gilligham of General Film Company Speaks to Members and Urges Solid Front Against Government Interference—Censor Question in City in Hands of Board of Estimate

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 12

TO protest against censorship and any appropriation for that purpose by the board of estimates, the Detroit Exhibitors' League held a meeting at its club rooms Monday afternoon, February 7, and at that time the league went on record as being absolutely opposed to censorship in any form.

The league contends that there has been a great improvement in the character of pictures produced during the past year, and that the coming year will see still greater improvement along that line.

A. J. Gilligham, of the General Film Company, spoke to the members of the league and urged that every effort be put forth to down censorship.

It is the contention of Mr. Gilligham that censorship in any form would only hamper the progress of the moving picture business. He spoke very forcibly against local censorship.

The exhibitors present coincided with everything said by Mr. Gilligham. The question of whether Detroit will or will not have censorship is up to the board of estimates. If this board passes upon the appropriation asked for by the Recreation Commission to establish a censorship committee, then Detroit will have censorship.

If the exhibitors of Detroit can forestall this appropriation, then there will be no censorship, at least for another twelve months.

FACTORY ACCIDENT CHANGES "SIS HOPKINS" RELEASE

A factory accident to "A Flock of Skeletons," which was originally announced as the first Sis Hopkins release, has caused the Kalem company to postpone that issue while retakes are being made.

"A Leap Year Wooing" is the comedy selected to inaugurate the new line of single reel subjects on the General Film Programme. The initial release date will be March 3, as originally announced, for "A Flock of Skeletons."

It is probale that the latter subject will be the third release in the new line. The initial subject, "A Leap Year Wooing," presents Sis Hopkins as a love-lorn slavey, who lands in a whirl of excitement when she sets out to find a mate.

First Entrance of Film Man in National Politics

David Horsley Throws His Hat Into the Ring for Nomination as a Republican Candidate for Congress from California —Red Hot Contest Expected in the District, but President of Centaur, Active in Civic Affairs, Feels Equal to the Occasion

CONSIDERABLE interest has been aroused in film circles, East and West, by the announcement that David Horsley will be in the forefront of the coming fight for the nomination as a Republican candidate for Congress from California.

Mr. Horsley, who is one of the most prominent of motion picture producers, has, it is said on excellent authority, tossed his hat into the ring, with a view to making a strenuous fight to win the nomination.

The district in which Mr. Horsley lives —the Tenth—is strongly Republican, and the real contest would therefore come in the battle for the nomination.

The spectacle of a motion picture producer engaging in a political contest for a seat in Congress would be a new one. Municipal offices are held by several exhibitors at the present time, but the industry has never had a representative in the national legislature.

Mr. Horsley is actively interested in the civic affairs of the city of Los Angeles, where his Pacific Coast studios are located, and has upon several occasions taken an active part in securing co-operation between the manufacturers whose headquarters are in Los Angeles, and the city officials and organizations.

In Contact with Politicians

He is also chairman of the reception committee of the Los Angeles Board of Trade, and is often called upon to entertain men holding high public offices.

These men, by virtue of their positions, are able to grant powerful support to remove obnoxious measures now standing and to defeat such proposed bills as are vicious to the expansion of the industry.

Mr. Horsley has been one of those who took advantage of their power by laying before them the motion picture men's side of the argument and obtaining their promise to help the cause.

Mr. Horsley's public activities have included the entertainment of Vice-President Marshall, senators, congressmen, governors and other men of affairs.

He has showed them not only his own establishment, but the plants and workings of many other motion picture organizations on the Coast, and introduced them to the leading picture players and personages of the country.

During the recent agitation in Los Angeles on the part of the producers there for better treatment from the city which they materially aid, Mr. Horsley took a conspicuous part, assisting in the amelioration of conditions and the instituting of a code of co-operation.

In the fight for the abolition of local censorship in Los Angeles, Mr. Horsley rendered aid by forceful speeches, which were a part of the influence that brought about a repeal of the censorship ordinance.

In connection with the association of Mr. Horsley's name with the Republican nomination from the Tenth California district, it is interesting to note that the Motion Picture Producers' Association of Los Angeles is determined upon a campaign against censorship, thus formally manifesting its interest in a great political question.

Last week the Producers' Association held a special meeting, at which the following officers were elected:

President, H. O. Davis; vice-presidents, Thomas H. Ince, David W. Griffith, and David Horsley; treasurer, Frank F. Garbutt; business manager and secretary, George Stout.

Firm Stand Against Censorship

The producers voted to give Manager Stout a salaried assistant thoroughly acquainted with motion picture publicity, the industry itself and legislative matters.

It is also having prepared fifteen thousand slides, preaching the wrongs of censorship, and these it will distribute to every theatre in the country, together with petitions for the public to sign protesting against censorship.

Mr. Horsley's own position with regard to censorship is well known, and he has devoted considerable time and energy to combating it. Recently he suggested that while the fight against federal censorship was proceeding, exhibitors throughout the country could dispose of the troublesome question of local censorship by enlisting the aids of their chambers of commerce and other trade organizations.

Mr. Horsley's rise as a picture manufacturer of prominence has been rapid. His first venture was housed in a one-story frame structure, with a porch and yard in the rear. The one room served as a laboratory, and the backyard and porch as a studio.

With the growth of his business, he soon moved into more commodious quarters, gradually replacing one plant with a larger one, until now he owns and utilizes two large studio plants, one located at Bayonne, N. J., and the other in Los Angeles.

In 1914, he purchased the Frank C. Bostock animal collection in London, and transferred it to his California plant. An arena 144 x 144 was constructed, and here the animals are trained for appearance in Mr. Horsley's releases requiring animal actors.

On the grounds is an auditorium seating 1,500 people, and with it a stage big enough to present animal acts.

Four companies are now at work in the two Horsley plants—one producing Cub comedies, two staging features in which the Bostock animals appear, and one putting on features in which Crane Wilbur is starred.

Mr. Horsley has also contributed several inventions which have assisted in the development of the artistic and mechanical side of the industry.

Chief of these may be mentioned the double exposure camera, which, making two exposures and two separate negatives at one time, has opened up new fields for motion picture photography.

"Davy Crockett" Players Back from Wilderness

Company Sent to San Bernadino Mountains by Pallas Pictures and Snowbound Eight Days, Reaches Los Angeles with Tales of Narrow Escapes on Trailless Mountainsides.

AFTER an adventuresome trip in the San Bernadino Mountains, following a severe blizzard, the company of Pallas Picture players who had been snow-bound for eight days, drove into the Los Angeles grounds in bespattered and creaking automobiles.

They had been filming scenes for "Davy Crockett," and had met with some trying experiences, according to reports.

Dustin Farnum is said to have proved himself a hero on two occasions while the party was completely cut off from the outside world.

He rescued two women mountain climbers who had started from the Arrowhead Hotel at daybreak, but were overcome by the snow.

Farnum is also credited with having rescued Winifred Kingston, his leading lady, when she missed her footing and fell into a raging stream.

The wolves which were taken along to be filmed in various scenes broke loose, but were finally rounded up after a tedious search through the snowdrifts.

The party also reports numerous narrow escapes during the climb up and down the mountain sides on paths that were completely obliterated by the huge drifts.

Director Taylor was entirely satisfied, however, that his search for "snow stuff" had been successful.

Among those who made the journey are Mr. Farnum, Herbert Standing, Page Peters, Winifred Kingston, F. F. Aldis, Homer Scott, and various members of the technical staff.

TYPICAL SCENES IN THE GAUMONT-MUTUAL MASTERPICTURE DE LUXE, "I ACCUSE"

Many Vitagraph Stars in Releases After February 21

Antonio Moreno, Charles Kent, Leah Baird, Hughie Mack, Louise Beaudet, William Dangman, Van Dyke Brooke, and Other Players Will Make Their Appearance

ANTONIO MORENO, Charles Kent, Leah Baird, Hughie Mack, Louise Beaudet, William Dangman, Van Dyke Brooke and other Vitagraph players are to be seen in the releases of the week of February 21.

The releases are "Kennedy Square," in five reels; "The Road of Many Turnings," in three parts; and two one-reel comedies, "Hughey, the Process Server," and "Freddy's Narrow Escape."

In "Kennedy Square" a delightful tale of the South is disclosed. The picture was made from the novel by that name of F. Hopkinson Smith, produced under the capable direction of S. Rankin Drew and featuring Antonio Moreno and Charles Kent.

The play revolves around St. George Temple, a typical Southern gentleman of the old school whose aristocratic home is known as Kennedy Square. He befriends Harry Rutter, a warm-blooded young Southerner who becomes estranged from his family after a duel.

Misfortune comes to Kennedy Square and Rutter seeks his fortune elsewhere. The property goes under the hammer and the effects are disposed of to pay Temple's debts. He lives among servants.

In the meantime Rutter strikes it rich and returns to his old home.

Antonio Moreno plays the young Southerner in his virile manner, and Charles Kent endows the role of Temple with that indescribable grace and charm for which he is noted. The film is a Blue Ribbon Feature in five parts, released February 21.

"The Road of Many Turnings," released on February 26, is a Broadway Star Feature, produced under the direction of Van Dyke Brooke featuring Leah Baird in a dual role.

She is supported by Louise Beaudet, Emmanuel A. Turner, Gerald Gordon and others.

The play tells of twin sisters, one incorrigible and the other sweet and lovable. The wicked sister disgraces the family and a designing youth uses this knowledge to lure the innocent sister into his power.

"Hughey, the Process Server," released February 21, gives Hughie Mack an excellent chance to display his comedy ability. Under the direction of Wally Van, Hughie endeavors to mix sleuthing with process serving and gets into many amusing situations.

William Dangman is to be seen in another of the "Freddy" series in a one-reeler produced by Frank Currier, entitled "Freddy's Narrow Escape," released February 25.

Freddy aspires to become the son-in-law of a local judge and almost elopes with an old maid instead of his real sweetheart. How he escapes is told by Edward Montagne, author of the comedy.

WEEK'S RUN FOR "BATTLES OF A NATION" IN BROOKLYN

"The Battles of a Nation," a six-reel production of The American Correspondent Film Company, Inc., had a week's run at the Majestic theatre in Brooklyn. A delighted crowd attended every performance.

VAN LOAN, OF UNIVERSAL, A PROUD FATHER

H. H. Van Loan, who in his spare moments disperses publicity for the Universal company, uncovered one of the greatest and weightiest stories of the season on Friday, February 11, when interviewed by a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

To come immediately to the point, Mr. Van Loan is now a proud father, and on that eventful February 11, he was unable to do more than touch successively the G-E-R-T-R-U-D-E keys of his trusty machine—as that is the name of the promising infant—Gertrude Van Loan.

The following original and interesting remarks were given out by Mr. Van Loan in an exclusive interview to this paper:

"Gertrude weights nine pounds and is the healthiest baby that I have ever seen. Mrs. Van Loan is doing very well indeed, thank you. Gertrude is without doubt the prettiest and cutest little girl that ever saw the light of day."

By that time it was six o'clock, and all that could be seen was a fast-fading streak shooting up Broadway in the general direction of the Van Loan household. MOTION PICTURE NEWS takes the greatest pleasure in wishing Gertrude, mother and father all the success and happiness in the world.

GAUMONT STARS SEE THEMSELVES ON SCREEN IN ATLANTA THEATRE

To make memorable the inauguration of Mutual Masterpicture service at the Lyric theatre, Atlanta, Ga., the Gaumont company sent a galaxy of stars from its winter studios at Jacksonville, Fla.

Each is appearing on the screen in Mutual Masterpictures, and their presence in the flesh added greatly to the enjoyment of the opening ceremonies.

Those in the party were Marguerite Courtot, Gertrude Robinson, Lucille Taft, Helen Marten, Mildred Gregory, Alexander Gaden and Sydney Mason.

SCENE FROM "THE SCARLET ROAD," GEORGE KLEINE'S LATEST PRODUCTION

The Press, Press Representative, and the Picture—XX

Bugbee, With Southern Metro Pictures Corporation, Is First Man in New Orleans Section to Create in His Exchange Separate Department for Distribution of Film Publicity to Newspapers in His Locality—He Has Made Close Study of Relation Between Live Publicity and Picture Attendance

PRIMARILY, this is a story about the New Orleans manager of the Southern Metro Pictures Corporation. It's a story that ought to have been run long ago, because Carl A. Bugbee's ideas about "The Press, the Press Representative and the Picture" were given birth long ago, four months ago, in fact, slightly in advance of Motion Picture News' ideas on the same subject.

For Mr. Bugbee is the first one down in that neck of the woods who created in his exchange a separate department for the distribution of live wire film articles, which go, first to the exhibitor, who in turn passes them on to the newspapers, who, in turn, pass them in their news columns to the multitude.

Let Mr. Bugbee tell his story in his own way:

"I got the idea when I picked up a Louisiana newspaper not long ago. My eye was attracted to a certain item. It was an alleged humorous item. It is too good to keep. Here is the way this country editor summed it up:

"'We note by the handbills distributed through our town yesterday that Blank's theatre had a special feature on last night.'

Film News Distribution Born

"If that country editor deprecated the fact that no one was furnishing him with screen news, what was the plight of the other newspapers? And thus was born the news distributing department of the New Orleans office of Metro.

"C. J. Briant, who has been with me since the opening of the Metro office, handles this department. It is his duty to localize press sheets which are sent to us.

"Every item, no matter what its importance, appearing in Motion Picture News, is rehashed into newspaper style, and it is first sent to the exhibitor, if we think the opening to the newspaper sanctum can better be handled in that manner, and secondly, to the newspaper itself, or to those with whom we have made arrangements, and who look for our material regularly.

"We send a form letter to exhibitors, couched in this style:

"'The daily newspapers of today are not awake to the fact that motion pictures are of more interest to the public at large than is generally believed; and the exhibitor by keeping after the editor of the newspaper in which he advertises, can bring the latter to the realization of the importance of the industry. If your town newspaper hasn't got a motion picture section, put one in, and in that manner create a demand for our special news sheet.'

Gratifying Response to Service

"The response to our service has been most gratifying. We are averaging four good stories a week, besides our regular stuff that we succeed in putting over.

"We cover our territory, Louisiana and Mississippi, like a blanket. Of course, we have to adopt different methods in New Orleans, a metropolitan city, but we succeed in 'putting over' our articles in the city as well as in the country towns.

"In the trade papers, or at least, in Motion Picture News, the articles are written with a view to interesting the exhibitor, the exchangeman and others in the trade. For the newspapers you must have a different style."

To celebrate the opening of the new Strand theatre in Meridian, Miss., Mr. Bugbee paid a flying trip to that city, and succeeded in christening that theatre with a solid eight-page section in the Meridian Dispatch. An eight-column cut of the theatre appeared on the front page of the section.

The butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, every one who had contributed in the least way to the erection of the Strand theatre, came in with generous advertisements.

The rest of the section was made up with live-wire articles, not the least of which included stories of Metro artists. The New Orleans exchange was accorded a share of publicity, too.

These are a few instances of Mr. Bugbee's invasion of the country, now let him tell of his city campaign:

"It is only lately, that the New Orleans newspapers have accorded the attention to motion pictures that motion pictures deserve. The New Orleans Item, States, and American run Sunday pages that are of interest.

"The Item on Sunday devotes nearly two whole pages to live film matters. The motion picture editor of the Daily States writes his editorials, in a frank, breezy, intimate manner.

Pro and Con Comedian Contest

"If the editor of the Daily States, for instance, was to see a Metro picture, and praise it, well and good. If he has to knock one of our pictures, it would hurt us would it not?

"Yes—it would not!"

"The New Orleans American recently conducted a pro and con contest involving one of the most famous comedians on the screen. They printed a column letter from a prominent lawyer, in which that personage proceeded to criticise the comedian.

"A storm of protest immediately arose. People in every walk of life rallied to the support of the comedian. A goodly percentage rallied to the support of the lawyer.

"And while this contest was running in the newspaper, a picture in which the comedian appeared was running in a Canal street house. What was the result?

"That picture played to S. R. O. during its entire engagement!

"Every exhibitor whom we serve in Louisiana and Mississippi evidenced great interest when the Metro Picture Magazine made its initial appearance.

"They swamped us with inquiries as to gaining the magazine for their house organ. Most of them, after we explained the idea, were in favor of using the back cover for their own weekly program, and all of them seemed enthusiastic in getting local advertisers interested.

"The corner druggist found it to his advantage to advertise in such an organ.

"This idea is worked along the same lines as we have used to interest the daily newspapers in film publicity. With the daily newspaper and a progressive house organ, we reach everybody.

"That the New Orleans public appreciates and the editors use all matter helpful to the city, is shown by the enormous amount of publicity recently accorded a company of motion picture players who filmed a play with the settings in the Vieux Carre, or French Quarter of the Crescent City.

"Every day the newspapers featured the company and the individual players. The result was that when this picture played a New Orleans engagement in Canal street, all attendance records were broken.

Publicity Paved Way for Bushman Film

"Francis X. Bushman, for instance, recently was given the lion's share of publicity from this office during a certain two weeks. 'Second in Command,' featuring Mr. Bushman, broke all records in small towns throughout Louisiana and Mississippi.

"At present this picture is booked solid for sixty days, with demands for more dates coming in every day. Do you see the connection? Bushman's newspaper publicity won for his picture.

"Saenger Brothers, the Louisiana film magnates, whose headquarters are in Shreveport, use our material to advantage. The Tri-States Amusement Company, operating the Strand theatre, in Meridian, Miss., have also found our articles helpful.

"The Dixie and Lomo theatres, in McComb City, Miss., get out a creditable house organ, in addition to feeding the newspapers with daily material. The results from this quantity of publicity make Metro pictures very popular indeed.

"Let me get back to my newspaper clipping:

"'We note by the handbills distributed through our town yesterday that Blank's theatre had a special feature on last night.'

"How's that for caustic comment?

"If the exchange man, or the exhibitor for him, had furnished that editor with dope on the feature mentioned, there would have been no occasion for that complaining item. A. Jules Benedic.

George Fitzmaurice, who is producing for Pathé the A. H. Woods' play, "Big Jim Garrity," is using in one of his sets a bed with a counterpane which was once used by Marie Antoinette.

Gaumont Will Lead Mutuals Week of February 21

"I Accuse," Featuring Alexander Gaden, Is the Masterpicture De Luxe from That Company —Actor Is Supported by Helen Marten, Ivy Shepard, C. W. Travis and Others

THE Gaumont company will lead off the Mutual releases of the week of February 21, with the Masterpicture de luxe, "I Accuse," featuring Alexander Gaden.

Other Masterpictures of that week will be "The Oval Diamond," a Thanhouser feature, with Barbara Gilroy and Harris Gordon, and "The Craving," made by the American Film company, with William Russell and Helene Rosson in the leading roles.

"I Accuse" is a story of a young judge who finds it necessary to condemn the father of the girl he loves to prison. Jealousy and intrigue form many of the complications.

Mr. Gaden will be supported by Helen Marten, Ivy Shepard, C. W. Travis, Albert Macklin, S. S. Wiltse, Henry W. Pemberton, John Reinhard, John Mackin and W. J. Butler.

"The Oval Diamond," a detective story, with a light touch of comedy, is said to provide excellent opportunities for Harris Gordon and Barbara Gilroy in their respective roles.

"The Craving" is a drama founded on the struggle of a young man to suppress an inborn desire for drink. William Russell has the leading part, and is supported by Charlotte Burton, Roy Stewart, Miss Rosson, and other American favorites.

In addition to these three Masterpictures de luxe, the Mutual is releasing during the week of February 21 "Life's Harmony," a three-reel American drama, with George Periolat, Alfred Vosburgh, and others; "The Reunion," a three-part Thanhouser drama, featuring J. D. Gilmore. It is a Civil War story, and George Marlo and Isolde Illian appear in its enactment. Anna Little and Thomas Chatterton will appear in an American three-reel feature, "Double Crossed," a Western.

Comedy releases for the week of February 21 include "Ruth's Remarkable Reception," a Falstaff picture, featuring Francis Keyes and Jay Yorke; "Too Much Married," a Beauty, with Carol Halloway and John Sheehan in the leads; "Perkin's Peace Party," a Falstaff, featuring Louise Emerald Bates and Walter Hiers; and "Cooking His Goose," a Beauty, with the English comedian, Orral Humphrey.

The usual Mutual weekly, "See America First," "Keeping Up with the Joneses" releases, will appear on Thursday and Sunday.

Essanay to Start Work on "The Havoc" for V-L-S-E

Photoplay Is by the Well Known Playwright, H. S. Sheldon, and Gladys Hanson, Who Has Been Playing with Lou-Tellegen, Is Cast for Lead

PRODUCTION is practically ready to start on Essanay's next multiple reel feature to follow "The Discard" on the V-L-S-E program.

The photoplay is "The Havoc," in five reels, written by the well-known playwright, H. S. Sheldon. It will be the first photoplay to be produced in Essanay's new studio which is now practically completed.

Sets have been arranged in the new studio, Essanay's other two studios being tied up with other productions. A temporary lighting system has been arranged. Work on the overhead crane lights is still going on.

An all-star cast has been engaged to appear in this production. Gladys Hanson, who has been playing with Lou Tellegen, the betrothed of Geraldine Farrar, in "The Ware Case," on Broadway, will take the leading role.

Miss Hanson is well known in the Frohman productions, playing for many years with E. H. Sothern. Her first work was a part in "The Spoilers."

She later appeared with Kyrle Bellew and Minnie Maddern Fiske. She will be supported by Charles Dalton, the well-known stage star, in the heavy lead part, and Bryant Washburn as juvenile lead.

The play is one of intense dramatic action and with strong emotional parts, and bids fair to be one of the best produced on the Essanay program.

Essanay has sent a troupe of giants to the north country to film "Beyond the Law," taken from Henry Oyen's "The Snowburner Pays," a sequel to "The Snowburner," a recent Essanay release.

E. H. Calvert, who, with Marguerite Clayton, will appear in the lead, is well over six feet in height himself. In his cast will be two men of six feet three inches, each, and another six feet six inches tall.

The total height of the four is more than twenty-five feet, and the aggregate weight nearly half a ton.

Two wolf strain champion dog teams of the kind you have been reading about in the stirring fiction of the north country, which has been so popular ever since the Klondike strike, make their debut in pictures in "Beyond the Law."

The dogs, ten of them, came from above Riverton, Manitoba, or a total journey of 700 miles, to Virginia, Minn., where E. H. Calvert and troupe, including Marguerite Clayton, produced the piece.

VEINSCHENKER IS SPECIAL ADJUSTOR FOR CHICAGO METRO

William C. Veinschenker, who managed a string of four Chicago theatres for four years, and was for three years a special representative for the General Feature Film Company, has been appointed to the position of special adjuster for the Metro interests in Chicago.

Movie Costume Ball May Make Smashing Record

Plans for Event Under Auspices of Screen Club and the New York Branch of the Exhibitors League, in Madison Square Garden, on February 19, Reach Such Proportions That the Promoters Expect It to Be the Biggest Affair in the Industry

PLANS for the "Movie Costume and Civic Ball," to be held in Madison Square Garden, New York, on February 19, have reached such formidable proportions that the event bid fair to smash all previous records of its kind.

Of special interest to the trade is the expected and practically assurred attendance of Governor Whitman, who has wired to the headquarters of the Exhibitors League that unless something unforeseen prevents he will be the guest of honor.

Thomas Howard, well known as an exhibitor and a strong league man through the state of New York, has been busy for the past month in the office of the Exhibitors League completing arrangements for the gala occasion.

Mr. Howard states that every box in the tremendous arena is disposed of to those prominent in the picture industry, and that practically every company of importance in the East and many of those in the West will be represented by officials and studio talent.

The publicity representatives of the various concerns in the New York district have prepared various stunts which when uncovered the night of the ball are expected to create a sensation.

One prominent actress recently recruited from the legitimate stage will, it is stated by the publicity man, "enter the Garden wearing close to one million dollars' worth of diamonds."

Furthermore, the lights are to be dimmed and spot and flood lights are to be cast on her.

Voting Contest for Popular Actress

During the course of the evening there will be a voting contest for the most popular actress present and valuable prizes will be tendered the winners by a prominent New York newspaper.

Cash prizes will also be given to the most unique costume worn at the ball, whether it cover professional or amateur entry.

Affairs are expected to get under way at eight o'clock. At eleven the stars and civic notables will be introduced to the public and following this will come the grand march, after which the various press agents will do battle with one another for the cleverest publicity stunt.

The ball is being conducted by the Screen Club in conjunction with the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of New York.

The one dollar admission tickets have been on sale at the offices of the above operators and at all picture theatres within a certain radius of New York City.

Requests for reservations for boxes and seats have been received from all parts of the country. Boston has asked for 100, Baltimore and Washington 250, Chicago 100 and the players of California who will attend have reserved 100.

Despite the fact that so many of those in the picture business will attend, it is suspected from the great demand for tickets that thousands of the picture worshipping public will be on hand.

This ball is practically the first of its size and kind in the eastern history of the profession.

Various other balls have either been exclusive for film folk or have been held in such comparatively smaller places that it was unable to accommodate the crowd.

Music by Twenty-Second Regiment Band

The music for the occasion will be furnished by the Twenty-Second Regiment Band, under the leadership of Charles Buchbaum.

The various committees chosen for the occasion comprise well-known names, both in the production and business end of the motion picture business.

The members of the committees follow:

The floor committee consists of:

Isaac Hartstall, joint chairman; King Baggott, joint chairman; Frank J. Carroll, John Adolphi, Bert Starkey, Albert Mayo, Tefft Johnson, Matt Moore, Geo. Terwilliger, Paul Panzer, Geo. DuBois Proctor, Lawrence McGill, Jack Noble, Harry Spingler, Wm. Garwood, Sam J. Ryan, Earl Metcalfe, Elmer McGovern, Augustus Phillips, Ed. Roskam, Frank Lawrence, A. E. PRIMITIVE ACCOMMODATIONS FOR FROHMAN COMPANY IN MOUNTAINS

Through the courtesy of Mr. Brewer, the industrial agent of the Clinchfield Route, the Frohman Amusement Company, doing "Then I'll Come Back to You," at Pensacola, N. C., was given a most cordial welcome by Dr. Aldrich, who is interested in the Carolina Spruce Company and owns Black Mountain.

He was amused, however, when George Irving, the director, telegraphed ahead to Mr. Dean, who was in advance, "reserve fourteen rooms."

The doctor suggested telegraphing back "No such thing here. Take fifteen baths before arriving," and when the company arrived at night, they were parceled out among the lumbermen's cabins with a pail of ice to wash in, with a nice lamp to show one how dark it was and to also serve as a stove.

LANNING IS AGAIN WITH UNIVERSAL

Frank Lanning, one of the best-known character actors in the Los Angeles photoplay colony, has joined the Universal forces at its Pacific Coast studios, where he will continue to enact roles of the character lead type.

FRANK DANIELS COMEDY SERIES COMPLETED BY VITAGRAPH

The Vitagraph company announces the completion of a series of comedies in which Frank Daniels is to show his funny little self to the picture public.

The comedies were written by Paul West especially for Mr. Daniels, with a thorough knowledge of that actor's capabilities in the line of humor.

The series has to do with a Mr. Jack and his tempestuous career. Episode No. 1, released on February 21, through the V-L-S-E, is called "The Escapades of Mr. Jack."

Under the direction of C. Jay Williams, who produced multiple-reel comedies of Daniels for the Vitagraph some time ago, the veteran fun-maker is seen at his very laughable best.

Few actors on the American stage are better known than Frank Daniels, who has been working successfully as a sure-fire laugh-getter for years.

He has scored in notable successes, among the more important being "The Wizard of the Nile," "The Idol's Eye," "The Ameer," "Miss Simplicity," "The Office Boy," "The Tattooed Man," "Miss Hook of Holland," "The Belle of Brittany" and "The Pink Lady."

Daniels' first work for the Vitagraph company was in "Crooky," a five-reel comedy, and he appeared more recently in "What Happened to Father."

Illustrations and story of the episodes will be published in the fiction departments of all of the Hearst newspapers throughout the United States.

MISS BILLINGTON SIGNED BY "U" FOR "GREY SEAL" SERIES

Francelia Billington, who has been in pictures for the past three years, playing for Kalem, Majestic and Fine Art releases, and recently with the Palo Alto Company, starred in five reel Mutual Masterpictures, has been engaged by the Universal to be featured in the coming Universal semi-detective series, "The Grey Seal," from the stories by Frank L. Packard.

In this series Miss Billington will appear as the woman of mystery who plans all the various escapades of Jimmie Dale, son of the safe maker who becomes a professional and wrecks vaults made by competitors of his father's firm.

The mystery woman enters at the closing of the first episode when Dale in hurrying to escape carries away with him a valuable necklace, thus committing his first theft.

The mystery woman learns of this and forces Dale to become her tool.

Throughout the series the robberies that are committed are only those wherein society is benefited.

CAMERAMAN RUCKER BACK FROM EUROPE

Joseph T. Rucker, camera man of the Universal Animated Weekly, who accompanied the Ford Peace Pilgrims on its peace journey to Europe, returned home Saturday night, January 29, accompanied by Robert S. Doman, of the Motion Picture Weekly.

NANCE O'NEIL IN A SCENE FROM "SOULS IN BONDAGE," A LUBIN-V-L-S-E FEATURE

When the Peace Pilgrims went through Germany to The Hague cameras were not allowed to pass through Germany on board the special train which conveyed the pilgrims to their destination. Mr. Rucker returned to Holland, making the trip from Gotsburg, Sweden, to Rotterdam on the freight boat James A. Dickson.

PEARL WHITE'S PART IN "HAZEL KIRKE," PATHE, SUITED TO HER QUALITIES

Pearl White, the Pathé star, found in "Hazel Kirke," the Pathé Gold Rooster release, a part eminently congenial to her.

PEARL WHITE

Playgoers will remember with pleasure the little country girl who dominates the play with her winsome personality, tomboy high spirits and sweet character.

ALEC LORRIMORE IS PRESIDENT COLONIAL MOTION PICTURE

The Colonial Motion Picture Corporation announces that Alec Lorrimore has assumed the position of president. Mr. Lorrimore has entered his new duties under circumstances which will tax his utmost ability in order that the expected results can be obtained. He has effected an entire reorganization of the staff and so begins with a clean slate.

The Colonial Motion Picture Corporation has been in existence two and a half years, and according to its statement, has had an actual cash investment of $250,000. Shortly after its organization, "Seats of the Mighty" was produced, and at that time the company had rights on some of the most valuable books, from a picture point of view, in existence.

We trust that under the new management the Colonial Motion Picture Corporation may enter into a new era.

PATHE DEPARTMENTS REORGANIZED BY BERST

J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathé, has rearranged to some extent the various departments of the business.

W. A. S. Douglas becomes director of production and leaves shortly for the Pacific Coast, where he will supervise in the Balboa studios the making of a new serial.

P. Allen Parsons is manager of publicity and advertising, with Bertram Millhauser and Harry J. Walsh as assistants.

George A. Smith becomes manager of publicity on serials, with H. W. Francis, formerly of the Pathé News, as his assistant. E. J. O'Connor remains in charge of the poster department.

All of these departments will, of course, receive the personal attention of Mr. Berst.

BIG ATTENDANCE AT REEL FELLOWS CLUB

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Chicago, Feb. 12.

The special meeting and dinner of the Reel Fellows Club of Chicago, held Wednesday evening, February 2, was remarkable for the large attendance and the enthusiasm displayed.

It was decided to hold a beefsteak dinner for the regular February meeting, and to import several high-class vaudeville acts for the occasion.

The next meeting will be the first step in an active campaign to increase the membership. Many guests will be invited.

MISS LA BADIE TO APPEAR IN PERSON AT LOEW HOUSES

The admirers of Florence La Badie, the Thanhouser star, will now have an opportunity to see her in person. She has made an arrangement with Marcus Loew by which she will appear at his theatres in New York, Pittsburgh, and points between the two cities, provided her studio work is not interfered with.

Her first engagement was at Loew's Avenue B Theatre, New York, where she received an ovation, according to her manager, L. J. Rubinstein, the Thanhouser publicity director.

MAUDE FEALY CANCELS VAUDEVILLE ENGAGEMENT TO COMPLETE IVAN SUBJECT

Maude Fealy, who is enacting the star role in the new Ivan production, "The Immortal Flame," is at the same time playing two-a-day in the Keith houses in New York as the headliner.

Miss Fealy completed her week as the stellar attraction at the Colonial Theatre in New York, and then decided that she could not do justice to both the stage and the screen at the same time, cancelled her vaudeville engagement until the picture is completed.

VIRGINIA PEARSON GUEST OF HONOR AT PITTSBURGH SCREEN CLUB BALL

Virginia Pearson, the newest star in the William Fox aggregation, has been invited by Mayor Armstrong, of Pittsburgh, in behalf of that city's Screen Club, to attend the big club ball on February 14.

If she can escape her director, Keenan Buel, for a day and a half, she intends to meet the picture fans of western Pennsylvania for this event.

Mutual's Feature Policy in Full Swing on 14th

Departure from the Rule, However, Will Be Made in the Case of "Silas Marner," a Seven Reel Feature--Marguerite Courtot Makes First Appearance in a Masterpicture

WITH the week of February 14, the Mutual Film Corporation's new six-features-a-week policy—three Mutual Masterpictures de luxe, and three three-reel features—will be in full swing, although a departure from the general rule is made in the release of "Silas Warner," a seven-reel feature instead of the usual five-reel length.

"Silas Marner," which has been given an elaborate production, presents Frederick Warde, the Shakespearian actor, in the role of George Eliot's classic weaver-miser.

It is Mr. Warde's screen debut, and he is supported by a large cast, under the direction of Ernest Warde, son of the star. The picture will be released on February 19.

A new Mutual star, Marguerite Courtot, will appear in her first Masterpicture de luxe, "The Dead Alive," produced by Gaumont, and to be released February 17. The remaining Masterpicture of the week is "Life's Blind Alley," made by the American Film Company. It features May Allison and Harold Lockwood.

The three three-reel dramas are "A Modern Sphinx," "Outwitted," and "When the Light Came." The first is an Egyptian story of three thousand years ago and today, in which Winifred Greenwood is starred, supported by Edward Coxen, Charles Newton, Nan Christy, and others. This American drama was directed by Charles Bartlett.

"Outwitted," a Thanhouser drama in which a clever collie outwits two villains, will appear on February 16. Aside from the dog, Wayne Arey and Hazel Kirk are in the cast. Thomas Chatterton, who also plays the hero role, produced "When the Light Came," an American drama, in which Anna Little has the feminine lead. It is a Western story, with part of the action laid in the East.

The Vogue comedies for February 17 and February 20 are "At the End of His Rope," featuring Rube Miller and Madge Kirby, and "Heaven Will Protect a Working Goil," featuring Russ Powell and Priscilla Dean.

The Beauty comdies for the week, "Ella Wanted to Elope" and "The Battle of Cupidovitch," feature well-known Mutual players. Mutual Weekly No. 59 and "See America First" and "Keeping Up with the Joneses," complete the Mutual list for the week of February 14.

Vitagraph Prepares for Serial Made on Coast

Scenario, an Adaptation from a Jack London Story, Was Written by Eastern Script Department, and Direction of the Picture Will Be Under William Walbert

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, Feb. 12.

ADVICES received at the Vitagraph Hollywood studio from the Eastern office are to the effect that a serial picture is to be made here.

The script is now in the mails, having been written by the Eastern studio's scenario department, and consists of an adaptation from a Jack London story.

The direction of this is to be in charge of William Walbert, and William Duncan has been selected to play the leading part. Others of the cast have not been named.

Sufficient information concerning sets and other matters came to the Western studio by wire to enable them to be prepared to take up the work of filming immediately.

Remarkable settings used in the Rollin Sturgeon Blue Ribbon feature, "God's Country—and The Woman," are due to an innovation introduced by Mr. Sturgeon. He found it good policy to employ an artist to do the research work and also the planning of all settings, together with aiding in the selection of types for parts other than those taken by the principals.

Mr. Sturgeon has been very painstaking in the making of this and has secured some atmospheric effects which are entirely new and will prove an innovation when this subject is introduced.

Close-up pictures of a fireplace were needed, and the particular kind of iron andirons were made by hand by a blacksmith.

J. C. JESSEN.

JERKOWSKY IS PREMO MANAGER

Louis Jerkowsky, formerly of Harry Rapf's vaudeville offices, has been appointed by the Premo Film Corporation, 11 East Fourteenth street New York City, as the manager of the offices and studios.

PARAGON TO FILM 50,000 FEET OF TEXAS SCENES

One of the largest educational campaigns ever attempted with motion pictures as the organ, will shortly be begun by a number of state officials, who with the aid of the Paragon Feature Film Co. of New York, will film 50,000 feet of Texas scenes.

Many thousands of Texas scenes will be taken and shown in the larger cities of the country without charge, the projection being purely an educational aid.

After this circuit the film will be returned to Austin, Tex., and become the property of the State Library and Historical Commission.

VIRGINIA KIRTLEY SIGNED BY HORSLEY FOR "LAW UNTO HIMSELF"

For the leading feminine role in "A Law Unto Himself" a five-part dramatic production featuring Crane Wilbur, to be released February 28 as a Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition, David Horsley has engaged Virginia Kirtley, a young and talented actress. The engagement is especially for this part.

VIRGINIA KIRTLEY

Miss Kirtley is a player of considerable experience. She began her career on the legitimate stage, playing prominent parts with the Burbank stock company in Los Angeles.

After a year in this engagement she was claimed by motion pictures with which she has been aligned ever since.

Her first film appearance was made with the Imp company with which she remained for a short time. A year's service with the Keystone company followed, after which she joined the American Film Manufacturing Company in Santa Barbara.

She was with this concern for eight months, playing in Beauty Films. Her last engagement prior to her present one was with Selig, who presented her in numerous productions during her two years' engagement with them.

Among the Selig subjects in which she appeared are "Bridge of Time," "Buried Treasure of Corba," and "The Grinning Skull of Respectability," which is soon to be released.

FOUR MORE INSTALLMENTS FOR "GRAFT," UNIVERSAL

General Manager Joe Brandt, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has announced that in accordance with the desire of exhibitors throughout the country, "Graft" will be lengthened four extra installments, making the complete serial twenty installments instead of sixteen, as originally intended.

Although it is known that four celebrated and recognized writers will suggest the plots for the four extra episodes, their names, as well as the nature of the plots, have not yet been decided upon.

Universal's Third Annual Ball Fixed for March 3

Everyone Connected with the Eastern Branch Will Be Given Some Important Part in the Arrangements for the Gathering—All Departments Will "Eat, Drink and Make Merry"

THE Universal Film Manufacturing Company will hold its third annual ball at the Grand Central Palace on Saturday, March 11.

This is an occasion when all the different departments of this concern gambol together, where the officials, actors and actresses, the office force as well as the factory employes eat, drink and make merry together, enjoy an exquisite entertainment and dance till the wee small hours of the morning.

Everyone connected with the Eastern branch of the Universal is given some important part in the arrangements for this monster gathering of Universalites, so that all may figure in the success of the great ball. The several committees are already hard at work planning for the event.

The following committees have been appointed by General Manager Joe Brandt. Chairman of all committees, Carl Laemmle:

"News" Studio Directory Takes Coast by Storm

Grand Rush Made for the News-Stands Upon Its Arrival at the Film Colony—Libraries Are Binding Copies of the Number in Leather

NOTHING pertaining to the motion picture industry within the past two years has caused so much favorable comment as the first Authorized Studio Directory Number of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, which was delivered here Thursday of last week to the hundreds of mail subscribers and patrons of the news stands.

The delivery was five days late, due to mail service being suspended, as the results of washouts on railroads in all directions out of Los Angeles. MOTION PICTURE NEWS is regularly delivered in Los Angeles on Saturday morning and the magazine placed on sale at news stands by Saturday noon of the week prior to date of publication.

As soon as copies were received at the studios there was a grand rush for news stands with the result that the entire supply was exhausted by the evening of the day they were received.

The office of the NEWS has been besieged by people of the industry calling for extra copies. Managing editors of local newspapers were quick to see the importance of this number and have filed same in their library to serve as references. Libraries are having copies of the number bound in leather.

Studio managers, directors, writers, exchangemen, and every one engaged in the industry in Los Angeles have felt it their duty to express their appreciation of this number which has been referred to as the most complete directory, and greatest help ever given the industry by a publication.

People of the industry are delighted that the Directory Number is to be issued semi-annually, and now that they have come to appreciate the value of such a number they promise co-operation in the matter of making the second number, which will assure its completeness.

EARL O. SCHENCK IS NOW A GAUMONT PLAYER

Earl O. Schenck, who has become well known as a leading man for the Pathé company, has joined the Gaumont company at Jacksonville, Fla.

He will play opposite Iva Shepard in the first Gaumont Mutual Masterpicture in which he will appear.

This is a story with an East Indian setting which is now being filmed under the direction of Edwin Middleton.

LECTURE ENGAGEMENTS KEEP WARDE FROM FURTHER PICTURE WORK

Owing to the lecture contracts held by Frederick Warde, covering the next two years, it seems as if "Silas Marner" will be his only motion picture appearance.

The noted tragedian intends to retire to writing only, and when his contracts expire he will not, he says, be induced to put on grease paint again. The Thanhouser release, therefore, will have added value.

William Grey, who came East to install the coloring system in the Biograph laboratories two months ago, has returned to Los Angeles, continuing his work at the Biograph studio.

Screen Necessary to the Author—Bronson-Howard

Writers Can No Longer Afford to Neglect Motion Pictures as an Important Field for Their Labors, Is Conclusion of Novelist Who Is Writing Kalem Serial, "Social Pirates"

GEORGE BRONSON-HOWARD, the novelist and playwright, who is writing the stories for Kalem's forthcoming series, "The Social Pirates," featuring Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby, believes that "the screen is a necessity to the modern author."

In a recent interview he said: "The author can no longer afford to neglect the motion picture as an important field for his labors.

"It is necessary both as an outlet for his surplus energy and as a means of bringing him sufficient return to attempt more ambitious, but less speedily profitable literary efforts.

"The novel, of course, offers the greatest field for the literary worker who is striving to meet high ideals, but no novelist can depend upon his novels exclusively. If his novels are worthy, he will starve to death while preparing them as they should be prepared.

"Thus the novelist must use his ingenuity and art in an allied craft . . . I will frankly confess that I turned librettist in order to gain more leisure to write the things that I wanted to write."

Coming to the subject of "The Social Pirates," the author says: "From the very inception of the theme for the series, the stories have been built for the screen. To that extent the two clever young women who carry the title 'Social Pirates' are children of the screen, and their lives are full of the exciting adventure and action that picture audiences delight in and welcome every time they see it.

"But throughout the stories, which portray the exploits of two fascinating heart-breakers in wreaking justice on unscrupulous men, I have endeavored to weave a thread of satire which I believe will be a welcome relief to the more tense moments of the picture.

"I am trying to include a slice of life in each episode. The clever ruses and swindles that I saw during my reporting days and in the Orient are furnishing ample material.

"I think you'll find many typical 'Broadwayites' in this series. This has been my opportunity to rebuke many of the parasites and swindlers whose practices have come under my observation.

"And the unlimited opportunities of the screen to reproduce—not portray—life as it is, have enabled me to go to the work unhampered. Can you wonder that I am so enthusiastic concerning this series?"

Cosmofotofilm Pictures By and For Children

FitzPatrick, Author and Director, Finishes "Chip Off the Old Block," "Chip's Elopement," and "Chip's Backyard Barnstorming," Featuring Juvenile Stars

THE juvenile idea has been carried out to the fullest extent in the production of the new children's pictures by the Cosmofotofilm Company. James FitzPatrick, the author and director of the pictures, has just passed his twenty-first birthday, and his stars, Janethel and Joseph Monahan, who are eight and seven years old, respectively.

So far three of the pictures have been finished. They are "Chip Off the Old Block," "Chip's Elopement," "Chip's Backyard Barnstorming." Others are now in preparation, which will follow out the original plans of children's stories by and for children.

"There is a great demand for these stories, as we have already found," said Mr. FitzPatrick to MOTION PICTURE NEWS. "Not only does this come from regular theatre patrons, but more especially from mothers' clubs, welfare societies, neighborhood centers and schools.

"We aim to please the public and meet the public's demands, and we appear to be doing it with this series of youngsters' pictures."

Mr. FitzPatrick found his two little stars by accident. He came to New York to attend Columbia, but instead went into picture work. While conducting a dramatic school in Brooklyn the two Monahan children came to him, and he immediately seized upon them for pictures.

STORMS SEND INCEVILLITES TO CULVER CITY STUDIO

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, Feb. 12.

Storms along the coast recently made it impossible for members of the Inceville producing staff to go to and from the NYMP studio in Santa Ynez Canyon, and all organizations are working at the Culver City studio.

The principal damage by the storm was to the coast road between Santa Monica and Inceville. Bridges on this were washed out and in a number of places the road itself was totally destroyed.

Both Director General Thomas H. Ince and Business Banager E. H. Allen are now located temporarily at the Culver City plant, pending the rebuilding of the road.

Director of Directors to Stop Wastage—Rowland

"Too Many Are Handed a Bankroll and Told to Go Ahead, with the Result That Cost of Production Is Out of Proportion to Quality," Says Metro President

RICHARD A. ROWLAND, president of the Metro Pictures Corporation, in discussing present conditions in the industry, declared there are at least two important matters that successful manufacturers must consider in the future.

The first is efficiency in the studio, from the director on down, in the production of a feature; and second, the value of making features of the correct length, and not padding them out to obtain a customary number of feet or reels.

Mr. Rowland holds that from 3,800 to 4,000 is a good length for feature productions. It means a saving of many dollars to the manufacturer, he said, a greater variety of features for the exhibitor, and the public would not become tired and restless sitting through features of this length.

Discussing the subject fully in the Metro offices in the Longacre Building President Rowland said.

"At the beginning of each calendar week several somebodies in and out of the motion picture industry rise to remark:

"'The atmosphere will soon be cleared. A number of the companies now in the field cannot go on indefinitely. The next few days or weeks will see big changes. Who is to survive?'

"In this connection it may not be inappropriate to consider the situation with a view of finding out exactly what is coming to pass.

"In all the mass of rumor, misinformation and chaotic comment there is one fact which stands out prominently as a basis from which to proceed. This face is that somebody's got to survive.

"It is my absolute conviction that this survival will be on quality productions that give the public its full money's worth of genuine high class entertainment.

"Those who appreciate the demands of the market and the needs of the exhibitor will, with all the present footage excess, not only live, but prosper.

"The producers must be able to present the right kind of a picture at a price that will not make a margin of profit impossible.

"The feature picture has nothing whatever to do with length. It's type, story, quality that makes the feature, and the good picture is the only picture that has a chance.

"To my mind there is no excuse for a poor picture. There are so many things that go into the making of a moving picture play that it resolves itself to a method of treatment pure and simple.

"To many manufacturers, in fact, the whole tendency seems to be to find tense gripping dramatic situations and build everything along those lines. This is impossible.

"Suppose a director is given a scenario for a weak, somewhat impossible story. Instead of trying to bolster it up and make something of it which is impossible of execution, let him turn to some of the other phases of successful picture production.

"Let him subordinate the story, the plot and incorporate beauty, atmosphere and unusual photography. There is always some manner of treatment that will evolve a good picture if it is properly carried out.

"The difficulty is to find it, but that is just what the director is paid to do. If he can't do it, then it is up to the manufacturer to find the man who can.

"There is another sweeping change that is going to come over the moving picture industry in the very near future, and that is the elimination to a large extent of the wasteful director.

"There has got to be evolved a position for some man who will become a director of directors; one who shall act as a curb in keeping the director within reason, and limiting to a large extent the amount of money he shall spend on the production of a picture.

"Too many directors have been handed a bank roll and told to go ahead, with the result that the cost of production has been out of all proportion to the quality of the picture.

"Another trouble with the feature picture is, that it is too long. I am speaking of the average feature, not the unusual picture which is replete with tense, gripping situations.

"But you will notice if you go to a theatre that about the time of the fourth reel of a feature has been finished you are tired looking at it, and the people around you are tired.

"Just what does this mean? It can only mean one thing, and that is that the proper length for an average feature picture is about thirty-eight hundred to four thousand feet. Were features made in this length it would result in better satisfaction all around.

"It would mean a saving to the manufacturer of at least a thousand dollars on prints alone; it would please the exhibitor because he would have a chance to vary his program to a greater degree, and it would eventually please the public, for it would be getting better and greater variety of pictures."

WATSON READY FOR WORK AFTER OPERATION

Harry Watson, of Bickel and Watson, featured in the George Kleine comedy de luxe, "The Mishaps of Musty Suffer," has returned to work and will be busy during the next few weeks completing this much talked about picture.

Watson, six weeks ago, was seized with illness that necessitated a surgical operation. This took place in a Montreal hospital, and since then the noted comedian has been recuperating at his parent's home near Montreal. He has now entirely recovered.

FIRST DICKEY SUBJECT AT LASKY STUDIO STARS CLEO RIDGLEY

Paul Dickey, recently added to the Lasky producing staff, is taking up his first subject at Hollywood in which he will have Cleo Ridgley for his star. The scenario for this, which has not been given a title, is by Jeannie McPherson.

RAVER IS ELECTED PRESIDENT ITALA FILM COMPANY

At a special meeting of the board of directors of the Itala Film Company, Harry R. Raver, former secretary and treasurer of the corporation, was elected president and treasurer, the office of secretary being given to D. J. McGowan.

Mr. Raver's connection with the Itala company dates back four years, during which time he successfully directed and managed its American and Canadian affairs.

"Cabiria," D'Annunzio's great film spectacle, was exploited under his management. It was the first motion picture presented in this country at a two dollar admission and proved the stepping stone to the successful presentation of high-class pictures in first grade theatres.

HENRY KING IN "BIG BROTHER" FOR KNICKERBOCKER

Henry King, who starred in the "Who Pays?" series and many other big dramas, will be seen in the coming release of the Knickerbocker Star Features, "The Big Brother," a three-part feature, uniting Virginia with a distant island kingdom in the Pacific.

Mr. King is a screen star who is making a careful, conscientious study of his work, and with each release, it is seen that he is a little higher up in his art.

Besides being a finished actor, Henry King is a capable director, having put on a number of big dramas. "The Big Brother" will be released February 11.

OLIVE TREVOR, DANCER AND MODEL, MAKES FIRST GAUMONT APPEARANCE

Olive Trevor, artist's model and dancer, has joined the Gaumont forces at Jacksonville, Fla., and will make her first Gaumont appearance in "The Haunted Manor," in the role of a model who endeavors to win the love of an artist for whom she is posing.

Miss Trevor, a native of New Orleans, has appeared with stock companies on the coast in vaudeville, and in Balboa and Universal pictures. She has also posed for leading New York artists and sculptors.

COL. ROOSEVELT INVITED TO JAMAICA BY FOX

Theodore Roosevelt has been invited by William Fox, the motion picture producer, to become the guest of the Fox Film Corporation at Kingston, Jamaica, and there witness the making of the Annette Kellermann feature film now being directed by Herbert Brenon.

Advance reservation of quarters at the Myrtle Bank Hotel, Kingston, have been made at the direction of Mr. Fox while awaiting Col. Roosevelt's decision.

"CHAIN INVISIBLE" COMPANY BACK FROM CUBA

Frank Powell and a company of thirty-four players, headed by Bruce McRae, returned from Cuba this week where they have been filming "The Chain Invisible" for Equitable.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. SMALL TOWN EXHIBITOR'S UNUSUAL ENTERPRISE IN HANDLING "BATTLE CRY OF PEACE"

A SPLENDID example of business enterprise by a small town exhibitor is presented by George C. Johnson, of Platte City, Mo., population 783. The picture was "The Battle Cry of Peace." Mr. Johnson handled it in such a way that his receipts showed he had received an average of thirty-eight cents per head for the entire population of the town.

Mr. Johnson tells the story of his success in a letter to The Big Four Clansman, house organ of the V-L-S-E exchange in Kansas City. He says in part:

"January 17 was the day of 'The Battle Cry of Peace.' Our booking of this production was only one week in advance, as you know.

"Used 24-sheet poster, 6-sheet, 1-sheet and window cards. On account of the extreme cold weather, the 1-sheet posters placed in the windows of the stores, the frost made it impossible for the people to see the advertising, so had 600 heralds printed, as per sample I am sending you, and these, together with the heralds obtained from you, were mailed to each family within a radius of six miles of Platte City. I also mailed to each newspaper in the county advertising matter and also complimentary tickets. All the papers of the county gave an account of our picture.

"We have two weekly newspapers in Platte City, The Platte County Landmark and The Platte County Argus. In the former I ran a half-page advertisement, and in different places throughout the paper the editor kindly gave me space, used six cuts in all; in the Argus I used three-fourths of a page.

"Ten minutes after I booked the picture from you over the 'phone, tickets were placed on sale—reserved seats. I got busy on this reserved seat sale, and several days in advance of the showing of the picture all the best seats were sold. The best seats selling fast; that is, the highest-priced ones.

"We had a five-piece orchestra from Kansas City, the leader of which played at the Willis Wood for three weeks previous to this. First time an orchestra was ever used to play for pictures here.

"House was decorated with American flags, photographs of J. Stuart Blackton, Hudson Maxim, etc. The exterior was lavishly decorated with huge flags. This outside decoration was several days in advance of the showing.

"Our matinee performance was as well attended as I anticipated, this being the first one ever given here and the roads were almost impassable. Automobiles couldn't run.

"I have asked Mr. Baker, the owner of the opera house, his largest attendance. The attendance, or rather the receipts, at 'The Battle Cry of Peace' was $110 in excess of any performance in the history of this opera house.

"People came from Edgerton, 18 miles distant; from Camden Point, 10 miles distant; from Parkville, 17 miles distant; from Smithville, 12 miles distant, and from Weston, 7 miles distant."

TELL YOUR PATRONS EXACTLY WHEN YOUR SHOW STARTS

The Empress Theatre, Owensboro, Ky., upon whose determination to eliminate "bunk" from advertising we commented a couple of weeks ago, is issuing a neat and attractive house organ in the form of an eight-page folder, printed on good Super, with an ornamental border around each page.

One of the things we like about this house organ is its announcement of the exact hours when each show begins. This is carried on the first page and reads as follows:

Note Hours of Shows

Unless otherwise announced the starting time of the shows throughout the week will be as follows: 1:45, 3:15, 4:40, 6:05, 7:25, 8:50, with the feature starting for the last time in the evening at 9:10. The program usually consists of a five-part feature subject with a single-reel subject preceding. The starting time of the feature is 12 to 15 minutes later than the hours just mentioned.

ARKANSAN BRAVES FLOOD WATERS TO GET FILMS FOR THEATRE

Rather than allow his patrons to miss any of the pictures released by the Mutual Film Corporation, A. R. Connerly, owner of the No Name Theatre, Lake Village, Arkansas, rowed eighteen miles through a flooded region to get the films for his theatre.

Twice in one week, Mr. Connerly braved the turbulent waters in a row boat, rowed down to Memphis, went to the Mutual Exchange, got eighteen reels of pictures, and made the return trip safely.

SPECIAL DECORATIONS AT SHOWING OF "BARBARA FRIETCHIE"

An innovation introduced by Manager Edward Mozart of the Academy theatre, Los Angeles, is being used by a number of suburban exhibitors in Los Angeles in connection with the showing of the Metro feature, "Barbara Frietchie."

Manager Mozart had the stage and sides of the screen decorated with patriotic bunting and flags, and previous to the showing of the subject, secured a school girl who had ability as an elocutionist to give a reading of the poem.

'Not Guilty'
An Impressive Story of Heroism under Adverse Circumstances.
The story is one which reveals in a striking way the evils of giving too much credence to circumstantial evidence and false testimony. A man's life is sworn away and although his sentence of death is commuted and later he is pardoned, when the perjuror admits his guilt, the best years of his life are gone. There is a remarkable series of pictures leading up to the heroic attempt on the part of the hero to save the life of the man who had wronged him, and those depicting the long-continued efforts of his loving mother to save him from the law's grasp are not the least in intensity and power.

KANSAS CITY MANAGER PUTS OVER TWO NOVEL LIVE WIRE STUNTS

Paul Le Marquand came from St. Paul to manage the New Empress Theatre in Kansas City and brought with him some new and original advertising methods that are making the public and exhibitors take notice.

His latest one that brought the people to his theatre to see the German War Pictures was a large automobile float that had built onto it a large 42 centimeter gun. Surrounding this gun were a number of men dressed in the regulation German uniform. This truck also carried a large searchlight and a gasoline engine that was connected up with a generator and this furnished the lights for the truck at night.

After you arrived at the theatre you were shown to your seat by girls dressed in German uniforms. These Manager Le Marquand called his usherettes.

Kansas City has needed some original advertising and Mr. Le Marquand has started with a system that promises to line up some of the other exhibitors in Kansas City, who have been just a little behind the times in their methods of advertising.

GENUINE NEWSPAPER REVIEWS OF PICTURES VERSUS SYNOPSIS "REVIEWS"

SOME exhibitors seem to have misunderstood our recent suggestion that they urge their newspapers to review photoplays. In some quarters, this has been taken to mean that the exhibitor should furnish his newspaper a synopsis of the plot, from which the newspaper would write a "review," and print it the day after the picture is shown at the theatre.

Unfortunately, this is just what we did not mean. Reviewing a picture from a synopsis, and reviewing it from the screen, have nothing in common. One is a poor makeshift; the other is the real thing. The synopsis review is the very thing we are fighting against. Such a review cannot, and does not, give a fair idea of a picture. It cannot possibly be authoritative. You wouldn't expect your patrons to be satisfied by reading printed plots of your pictures, would you? Of course not. You want them to see the pictures. If you didn't want them to, and if they didn't, there would be no picture business for exhibitor, manufacturer, or anybody else.

Why should an exception be made of the newspaper? What we are urging is that the newspaper should look at the picture itself, through one of its representatives, preferably the photoplay editor, and then write a review based on what actually happens on the screen.

We cannot emphasize too strongly the point that the photoplay deserves review, precisely as the stage play does. This is what we are contending for. A genuine newspaper review of a picture is the newspaper's personal opinion of the picture—a very different story from a mere sketch of the plot and scenes, written from a synopsis furnished by somebody outside the newspaper office.

And when you get the newspaper to print original reviews of pictures, you have not only gained an additional means of advertising your pictures to the public—advertising them effectively and legitimately—but you have also done something toward getting for the motion picture the dignified consideration which it deserves.

SEATTLE EDITOR RUNS BIOGRAPHIES FROM THE NEWS STUDIO DIRECTORY

GEORGE BELLMAN, motion picture editor of the Seattle Times, is perhaps one of the first newspaper men of the country to adopt a feature for his department consisting of biographies of photoplayers from the Directory Number of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

He appreciated the value of the information it contained for his department, and immediately began publishing two biographies daily copied from this number. Bellman conducts probably the largest photoplay department in the country, and his success in securing almost seventy thousand dollars' worth of advertising from exhibitors annually for his paper, lies in the fact that he is quick to take advantage of new ideas.

He is a habitual reader of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and every issue serves to improve his department. He copies many of the editorials by William A. Johnston and much of the news matter contained in every issue from the NEWS.

The benefit of Bellman's department in the Seattle Times does not end with the great amount of advertising, as exchange men have seen the benefit gained by having Washington and Oregon theatre men read this page because of the news matter pertaining to pictures it contains, and practically every exhibitor in the territory is a subscriber.

What Bellman is doing for his newspaper, and the picture interests in his territory, every photoplay editor can do and should do. Exhibitors ought to take the matter up with their newspapers. A mere suggestion will probably suffice. This is a live wire stunt worth doing.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

BERTRAM COMPLETES "MARGY OF THE FOOTHILLS" FOR AMERICAN FILM; "OVERALLS" ON THE WAY

WILLIAM BERTRAM has completed "Mary of the Foothills," soon to be released by the American Film Company, Inc.

The theme is a story of love and passion and the scenes in the plot are located among the smaller California mountains. The story depicts the struggle between a wealthy Spanish land-owner and a young American over a defenseless girl. The characterizations are drawn by Art Acord, Dixie Stratton, Lawrence Peyton and John Prescott.

Ranch scenes of rare beauty have been chosen. Some of the most naturally beautiful locations around Santa Barbara were used for this splendid production.

Tom Chatterton of the American studios is very fond of a Western contest in rough riding.

Recently when a big rodeo was held at the famous El Capitan ranch near Santa Barbara, Mr. Chatterton seized this opportunity to photograph one of the scenes in "When the Lights Came," a Western play in which he appears with Anna Little and Jack Richardson.

This is a three-reel Mustang drama to be released February 18.

George Field does effective work in "The Happy Masquerader," a "Flying A" three-reel drama completed by Thomas Ricketts. First as a brutal chauffeur and then suddenly transplanted to the millionaire clubman, he draws a character of strength.

Amid sumptuous surroundings he causes servants to scatter in fear, and immediately takes advantage of his situation to advance his sordid ambitions.

Carol Halloway, John Sheehan and John Steppling have assumed the principal roles of another "Beauty" comedy—"Peanuts and Powder."

Another five-part American Masterpicture is coming—"Overalls." As the title might suggest, the story concerns the romance of a young Western construction camp foreman in love with a wealthy girl, who is no less than the beautiful Rea Mitchell, who is deservedly popular everywhere because of her delightful personality and sincere screen acting.

William Stowell as the foreman is a Western character.

Director William Bertram has accepted a new Western story, "A Happy Family," by B. M. Bower. The cast includes Art Acord, Anita Davis and Dixie Stratton. The title of the story has been changed on the screen to "Curlew Horliss."

Jack Richardson, who has played the part of the gambler many years in Western drama, has added to his list of villains a strong characterization in "The Quagmire," a three-reeler directed by Thomas Chatterton.

Under the cloak of friendship, Richardson seeks to win the rancher's daughter, but as ever, virtue triumphs and the villain ceases to pursue her.

GAUMONT FILMS "HAUNTED MANOR" FOR MARCH RELEASE

For March release as a Mutual Masterpicture De Luxe, Gaumont is filming "The Haunted Manor," a five-reel feature under production by Edwin Middleton at Jacksonville, Fla. Iva Shepard plays the lead.

The story tells of the life of an American adventuress at the court of an East Indian rajah. Director Middleton has built a village and commandeered all the tigers, lions and elephants of a nearby circus in order to provide the necessary Oriental color.

Supporting Miss Shepard are Earl O. Schenck, Henry W. Pemberton, Olive Trevor, Robert Glugston, Gertrude Robinson, Mathilde Baring, James Levering, Mary Gunnis Davis, John Mackin and Harry Chira.

PLURAGRAPH WILL SOON PRODUCE "THE DUMMY"

George Orth, of the Pluragraph Company, announces that his company will soon start the production of "The Dummy" and "The Argyle Case," both in five reels.

LUBIN INTERIOR DECORATION PLAN FIRST SHOWN IN "HER BLEEDING HEART"

THE Lubin Manufacturing Company announces an innovation in picture making along the line of interior decoration. The first example of this new plan will be seen in "Her Bleeding Heart," a multiple reel subject written by Daniel Carson Goodman. It will be released through V-L-S-E, February 28.

Allen Farnham, Lubin's technical director, Dr. Goodman and Director Jack Pratt are responsible for this idea, which is described in the Lubin announcement as "The Psychology of Decoration."

Mr. Farnham has been at work for several weeks preparing sketches and plans for the visualizing of his theories regarding interior decoration, with the result that in "Her Bleeding Heart" will be seen settings, properties and other adjuncts chosen and combined to emphasize and harmonize with the characters appearing in the scene and the actions co-incidental with their appearance.

In a recent interview Siegmund Lubin emphasized his views on the future of the motion picture and its value as an educational factor. He said he believed the picture of the future will be both "educational and scientific," and this experiment in decoration is a crystallization of Mr. Lubin's idea.

"Her Bleeding Heart" will afford opportunity to picture goers to appropriate to their own use ideas which will be useful to them in beautifying their own surroundings, it is said.

CORRECT TECHNICAL KNOWLEDGE IS SOUGHT BY CALIFORNIA FROM EXPERTS FOR PHOTODRAMA

THE advantage of absolute correctness in scenes where technical knowledge of what is correct is necessary, has been admirably evidenced in "The Unwritten Law," which came out from the California Company studios at San Rafael, California recently.

In two or three instances at least the very crux of this story depended on scenes, the details of which could be adequately arranged only through highly scientific or professional advice.

One feature of the production, where this was particularly noticeable, was the hypnotism scenes, incident to the restoration of Kate Wilson's (Beatriz Michelena) mind after the killing of Larry McCarthy.

That there should be no second hand and possibly erroneous information in this respect, Miss Michelena went herself to the highest authorities on hypnotism in the psychological department at the State University and also among the medical profession of San Francisco.

Every small development of the scenes was carefully passed upon and received an authoritative O. K. before it was allowed to stand in the scenario.

The big courtroom scenes, through which the picture arrived at its final climax, were prepared with like exactness. Among those who contributed their professional experience in arranging details were Senator Martinelli, Henry Greer and District Attorney Butler of Marin County.

Theodore J. Roche, by many considered the most capable legal light on the Pacific Coast was also consulted on some of the more knotty details.

When complimented upon the finish of the production in the above respect, Alex. E. Beyfuss, general manager of the California Motion Picture Corporation, had this to say:

"I find that a great many producers who strive for correct detail in general, are wont to relax their diligence occasionally in very technical scenes.

"The attitude of indifference here seems to be due to the knowledge that the matter is technical and therefore open to criticism among only a limited number of people.

"To take such a view, however, is a serious blunder. If we were preparing a scene calling for scientific correctness, and knew that there was but one man in the country capable of passing an intelligent judgment upon the result, we should try to satisfy his most searching scrutiny."

"DREAM OF EUGENE ARAM" FOUNDED ON POEM BY HOOD

"The Dream of Eugene Aram," released February 28, through General Film Company, is an adaptation of the world-famous poem by Thomas Hood, and was produced by Colin Campbell. Tyrone Power is in the chief role, and the action is convincing and the scenic effects beautiful.

Thomas Hood's poem has been picturized as a Selig multiple reel feature, and no detail has been overlooked in its artistic presentation.

FOX'S "FOOL'S REVENGE" AT THE ACADEMY, FEBRUARY 13

The Academy of Music will have as its attraction for the four days beginning Sunday, February 13, a William Fox photodramatization of "The Fool's Revenge," the stage play in which Barrett, the elder Sothern and other famous actors appeared.

The stars of the production, which was directed by W. S. Davis, are William H. Tooker, long a stock favorite and more recently seen in several Broadway offerings, and Maude Gilbert, talented leading woman.

Mr. Tooker is seen in the character of Anson, a care-free but hard-working clown, whose domestic happiness is interrupted by Randall, a wealthy debauchee, who alienates the affection of Mrs. Anson.

Miss Gilbert is cast as Anson's pleasure-loving wife, who sacrifices home and children in order to go with the wealthy libertine.

Randall, despoiler of the Anson home, is played by Warner Oland, who occupied the chair of drama at Williams College in 1908-09-10, and who is one of the foremost screen villains.

Other notables in the cast are Richard Neil, Ruth Findlay and Kittens Reichert.

ANNA HELD WITH DAUGHTER IN "MADAME LA PRESIDENTF"

For the first time in the American entertainment world Anna Held and her daughter, Lianne Carrera, appear together for the benefit of the theatre-going public.

In "Madame La Presidente," the Morosco-Paramount photoplay just released, in which Anna Held makes her screen debut, the daughter of the French comedienne also appears on the screen for the first time.

KITTY GORDON IN EQUITABLE VERSION OF STAGE SUCCESS

Kitty Gordon, who recently completed her first screen production under the direction of the World Film Corporation, is now to appear for the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, and will be seen shortly in an important visualization of a former stage success.

EQUITABLE PHOTOPLAYS: MARGUERITE LESLIE IN "THE QUESTION"; CARLYLE BLACKWELL IN "THE CLARION"; MARY BOLAND IN "THREE PAIRS OF SHOES"

FIFTEEN STARS IN WORLD-EQUITABLE RELEASES DURING NEXT FOUR WEEKS

FIFTEEN stars of the speaking stage and screen punctuate the World-Equitable releasing units during the last two weeks in February and the first two weeks next month.

February 14 the Equitable will offer for the first time on that program Carlyle Blackwell in Samuel Hopkins Adams' vivid and popular novel, "The Clarion," in which Marion Dentler and a special cast of players appear in support.

On the same date World Film will present Frances Nelson in "Love's Crucible." Miss Nelson was last seen in "The Family Cupboard" and "The Dollar Mark," and earned stardom through her work.

February 21 Marguerite Leslie, recent star opposite Sir Henry Irving, Cyril Maude and other of the stage's greatest lights, will make their debut in filmdom in "The Question," Roy L. McCardell's unusual tale, which was produced for Equitable by Harry Handworth.

The World will offer at the same time Molly King, the dainty star of the Winter Garden, "Ziegfield's Follies," and other stage triumphs, in "A Woman's Power."

February 28 will see the noted character delineator, George Beban, in his most impressive play, "The Pawn of Fate," and Mary Boland in "The Price of Happiness," for World and Equitable, respectively.

This is Beban's first screen work since his successful appearance at the Astor theatre in conjunction with "The Alien," which as a special release measured up to any dramatic production of the time. Mary Boland completed "The Price of Happiness," after appearing in one of Triangle's sensational plays.

On March 6, Charles Cherry, recently seen in several Famous Players features, will be seen in C. Haddon Chambers' virile story, "Passers By," while World Film will send broadcast on the same date the noted British beauty and famed stage player, Kitty Gordon, in "As in a Looking Glass."

On March 13, World Film will offer Robert Warwick in "To Him That Hath." Equitable will release "Man and His Angel," a Triumph feature in which Jane Grey and Henri Bergman will co-star. Miss Grey recently starred in a Triangle production and Mr. Bergman was the principal in one of Metro's pictures.

Week of March 20 will see Holbrook Blinn in "The Unpardonable Sin," from the World Film studios, and Frank Sheridan in a picturesque, red-blooded story, "The Struggle." "The Unpardonable Sin" is of the society type, while "The Struggle" is just what its name implies.

March 27, Gail Kane, recently seen in the Equitable production, "The Labyrinth," will be seen in a novelty tale of the Western world, "Her God," which has been in the making for three months. World Film will offer, on the same day, Edwin August in "The Social Highwayman," a contrasting fictional vehicle, now being directed by the star himself. Mr. August recently staged "The Yellow Passport," with Clara Kimball Young.

The first week in April, the final week of World-Equitable's quarter, will be characterized by World with the release of House Peter's first production on the dual program, "The Hand of Peril," produced under direction of Maurice Tourneur, while Equitable will end the period with "The Chain Invisible."

Frank Powell, creator of "A Fool There Was," directed "The Chain Invisible"; Bruce McRae, one of the most popular of stage stars, plays the leading role, and Richard Le Gallienne, internationally famous author and poet, originated the story. Roy L. McCardell scenarioized the tale.

"TOO PROUD TO FIGHT" FOR FEB. 18

The forthcoming Cub release scheduled for February 18 presents George Ovey in one of his typical subjects, "Too Proud to Fight."

Its story concerns the efforts of Jerry to evade punishment at the hands of a stalwart Swede, whose sweetheart Jerry has stolen.

In these efforts he thrusts himself into innumerable difficulties of a compromising nature.

His frantic attempts to save himself from the consequences which he knows are sure to follow are cleverly done.

The full strength of the Cub comedy, including George George, Gordon McGregor, Louis FitzRoy, Belle Bennett, Janet Sully and Louise Horner, take part in the enactment of the story.

VICTOR MOORE CAST FOR "THE RACE"

Victor Moore, one of the leading comedians of the American stage who has definitely retired from vaudeville and musical comedy to appear for an extended period in Lasky productions on the Paramount program, will be the star in a new production now under way, entitled "The Race."

Anita King, who traveled across the country last autumn from the Pacific to the Atlantic by herself in an automobile as the Paramount Girl, will be featured with Mr. Moore in this production.

ANITA KING VICTOR MOORE

This is a happy continuation of star and leading woman, as Mr. Moore and Miss King made individual and united successes in the photoplay entitled "Snobs."

"The Race" is founded to some extent on Miss King's adventures in her transcontinental tour. Many of the exciting episodes which happened during that eventful trip were photographed.

DIRECTOR CHATTERTON ACTS IN "DOUBLE CROSSED" FOR AMERICAN

Thomas Chatterton, the director of the American Film Company at Santa Barbara, California, enjoys acting. He enjoys it to the extent that he likes to lay aside his labors as a producer every once in a while, and appear in some play produced by another.

Chatterton has appeared in one of William Bertram's productions, "Double Crossed," a three-reel Mustang drama. This is a story of the West, in which Chatterton finds the best locations and settings for his strenuous personality and vivid style of acting. He appears with Anna Little and Jack Richardson.

"LOVE LIAR," NEXT HORSLEY RELEASE, WILL TELL THE TRUTH ABOUT McCARE'S ESCAPADES

HAVING recently completed the production of "A Law Unto Himself," a David Horsley feature, in five reels, with Crane Wilbur, which is released February 28 as a Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition, Director Robert B. Broadwell has now under way the production of "The Love Liar," which is to be the next Crane Wilbur subject in the release chart.

Originally it was planned to make the picture for the February 28 release day, but the amount of labor required to build the many sets—of the more important interiors there are eighteen—took up more time than was expected, and another play was produced in its stead.

Meanwhile, however, the work of getting the mounting in readiness for "The Love Liar" continued, so that over ten weeks was spent before everything needed in that line was completed.

"The Love Liar" was written by Crane Wilbur, who uses for his theme a sociological study. His principal character is David McCare, a musical genius, an idol of society, who is cordially hated by men and soulfully worshipped by women.

McCare imagines himself in love with every pretty face he sees; he makes love to each one, flits from one to another, and leaves behind a wake of ruined lives and broken hearts. Hence the title.

The full strength of Director Broadwell's company is being utilized in the portrayal of this story, and in addition a number of special engagements have been made. Crane Wilbur will play the dominant and title role—"the love liar."

"The Love Liar" is scheduled for release March 27 as a Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition.

Margaret Gibson, the David Horsley player, who made her starring debut in "The Soul's Cycle," a current Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition, release, will make her second appearance as a screen luminary on March 4, when "The Heart of Tara," a five-part dramatic picture, will be distributed.

Special provisions have been made for Miss Gibson's support in this production.

In addition to William Clifford, Marvel Spencer, Walter Spencer, Edward Alexander, Edward Roberts and Gordon Russell, regular members of the Horsley stock company, the cast contains the names of Sherman Bainbridge and Marie James, newcomers to the David Horsley fold who were engaged particularly for the parts they play in this picture. The Bostock animals are also used.

Mr. Bainbridge began his career with Mr. Horsley during the days when the Nestor comedies first came into being. Later he joined the 101 Bison company, playing heavies.

The 101 company at the time included William Clifford as leading man, who, incidentally, is also leading man in the forthcoming Horsley production.

Miss James was recently with Selig and Quality-Metro, and also on the legitimate stage. She was a member of Kolb and Dill's company on the Pacific Coast. Her part in "The Heart of Tara" is one of considerable importance.

William Clifford, who acquitted himself so admirably in the three recent David Horsley productions in which he played the leading male role, appears opposite Miss Gibson in the release.

"The Heart of Tara" is a romantic drama of India. The story was writen by Theodosia Harris, who, with William J. Bowman, is the author of "The Bait." Mr. Bowman is directing the production.

STRIKE IS THEME OF "BLACK LIST," LASKY

The troubles between miners and operators in Colorado about two years ago is the theme of "The Blacklist," the most recent Jesse L. Lasky production, in which Blanche Sweet is starred.

Miss Sweet has, it is said, exceptional opportunities in this picture, which was directed by William C. De Mille. Among those who appear in the cast are Charles Clary, Ernest Joy and Billy Elmer.

"PAWN OF FATE" FOR EARLY RELEASE BY WORLD

"The Pawn of Fate," with George Beban, has been completed by World Film and will be released by that concern within the next few weeks.

ICEBERG RESCUE IS A THRILLING SCENE IN METRO'S "PRICE OF MALICE"

There are scores of big scenes in "The Price of Malice," the forthcoming Metro wonderplay in which Hamilton Revelle is starred and Barbara Tennant is featured, but perhaps the most spectacular will be the sinking of a large yacht after it crashes into an iceberg in the waters of the frozen north. The setting for making these scenes was off the coast of Labrador, where the entire company of Metro players were transported by special steamer.

The Metro company sent agents up along the Maine coast seeking a heavily constructed vessel, such as ply in the waters of the north. They found just what they wanted in Portland, Maine. It was the old revenue cutter Woodbury, which had seen service for many years, patrolling in the ice fields and assisting vessels in distress. The Woodbury had figured in many thrilling sea disasters, and in much of the history of the treacherous waters in the ice fields.

This vessel was hastily converted into a yacht and conveyed by special steamer until the iceberg zone was reached. There she was sent with full speed ahead against a big berg, and destroyed. A sensational rescue attended this scene, and members of the cruising party, together with the crew, were taken off in lifeboats later by a tramp steamer. "The Price of Malice" promises to be one of the best Metro features of the year.

PICTURES AND STARS, BUT NO DATES NAMED FOR GAUMONT IN MARCH

Although exact dates have not been set for Gaumont's March releases, the names of the photoplays and the stars have been announced.

The first will be "According to Law." Mildred Gregory has the star part in this five-reel Mutual Masterpicture. Howard Hall is playing opposite her. Gaumont's second Mutual Masterpicture of the month will be "The Haunted Manor."

Iva Shepard is the star in this. Opposite her is Earl O. Schenck. The third photoplay will star Marguerite Courtot. It is a strong dramatic feature into which has been woven the Nathaniel Hawthorne fantasy, "Feathertop." The photoplay will bear the same name.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

Los Angeles, Feb. 10.

"BADGERED" is the title of a one-reel story being made at the Selig zoo with a cast composed of stars of the Selig stock company.

These include Grace Darmond, Edith Johnson, Harry Mestayer, James H. Bradbury and Al. Filson, a very remarkable cast for a single reel subject.

The story is one of political conspiracy

D. W. GRIFFITH EXPLAINING TO SIR HERBERT TREE INTRICACIES OF THE FILM GAME —FRANK E. WOODS ON THE LEFT

where in one unscrupulous politician, taken by Al. Filson, frames the badgered game on a new member of the legislature.

The photoplay will have a decided light comedy feature, and consists of almost seventy scenes.

A company of Selig players, who were to leave for San Francisco, were delayed on account of weather conditions, and departed Saturday of last week.

While en route to and from the Golden Gate by sea they will make scenes for the comedy, "All at Sea," which features Jack Pickford.

This was written by Marshall Neilan, who has just completed filming "The Cycle of Fate."

A script for the film version of the play by David K. Higgins, which was his starring vehicle for several seasons, "At Piney Ridge," is being made by Wallace C. Clifton at the Selig zoo studios, and is to be produced in five reels by William Robert Daly.

The cast for this has not been named other than that Fritzi Brunette will be featured in this subject.

This melodrama opens in the Civil war period, and scenes will be laid in the Tennessee mountains. The plot revolves about the identity of a man who is given the name of Jack Rose because he was found under a rose bush, where he had been left as a babe by the fleeing slaves.

In reality it becomes known that an octoroon substituted her illegitimate child for one that was heir to a large estate.

Props and Scenic Effects for "Crisis"

Props and scenic effects are being prepared at the Selig zoo studio for the filming of "The Crisis."

The first shipment of these was made last week to the Chicago studio, where the work of producing this multiple reel subject from the Winston Churchill novel will be done.

The Chicago Selig studios were selected for this work as it is nearer the original locations described in the book.

Bessie Eyton, who plays the leading part in this, and whose face is known around the world, will in the making of this pass beyond the borders of the State of California for the first time in her life.

The last few remaining scenes for the Mutual Master Picture De Luxe, "The Web of the Grafters," made by Director Murdock MacQuarrie at the Signal studio, were finished last week.

This subject was begun on January 5 and finished February 3. During this period there were eighteen days of weather unfit for picture making, and the company members believe they have established a record for speed.

ANNA LITTLE, THE AMERICAN-MUTUAL STAR, IN A PRETTY POSE

The studio is not equipped with artificial lights, and there was no night work. This company is now taking up the filming of "The Second Story Man"; at least this is the working title of the photoplay.

The story and scenario is by Bob Dillon. This opens in the West, where the adopted son of a sheriff becomes a bad man, and on numerous occasions puts over the "Get the box stuff."

On one accasion he is wounded, making it necessary for him to leave. Accompanied by his sister he departs for the East. The two are separated and the sister becomes the wife of a struggling inventor, who succeeds.

Myles and Edith Sterling in Cast

Surrounded by wealth the inventor tires of his Western wife, and when he learns that she had been registered at a hotel as the wife of another, who is in reality her brother, he sues for a divorce, refusing to listen to an explanation.

The wife decides to break into the apartment where he is through a window in order to see him, and this occurs on the night that a "second story man" has planned to rob the house.

Brother and sister come face to face, and explanations bring about a reconciliation. Principal characters in this will be taken by Norbert A. Myles and Edith Sterling.

The first subject of the El Dorado Film Company of Pasadena is nearing completion under the direction of Harris Forbes, and will in all probability be marketed by state rights.

No announcement has been made by the company of the title or the nature of the subject other than that the star of the cast is Neva Gerber, late of American Beauty brands, and the principals, Lamar Johnstone, Harry Ogden Crane, Mae Cruze and Rena Carleton.

LOOKING AT "A RACE FOR LIFE," EPISODE OF KALEM'S "HAZARDS OF HELEN," WITH HELEN GIBSON

William J. Bowman this week took up the filming of another five-reel Centaur feature for the Mutual Masterpicture program entitled "The Secret Hate," story and scenario for which was written by Mr. Bowman and Theodosia Harris.

It deals with an indemnity to England when Egypt became the possession of the British government. A principal feature is the action taken by the Khan in the kidnapping of the consul's daughter, because the consul twenty years previous had a love affair with one of the girls of the Khan's harem. One of the big scenes for this is the burning of the consul's residence.

For this a reproduction of an Egyptian building was made. William Clifford appears in the part of the consul, Sherman Bainbridge as the Khan, Marvell Spencer as the consul's daughter, and Marguerite Gibson as the favorite of the harem.

"The Love Liar"

Filming of "The Love Liar" has been taken up by Director Robert Broadwell. Crane Wilbur is featured in this five-reel subject of which he is the author.

Twenty elaborate interior settings have been prepared for this subject, and a peculiar twist to the story is that the man who is the transgressor pays for his transgressions. Virginia Kirtley has been specially engaged to appear in this number.

William Clifford, who appeared in the part of Sir Jasper Thorndike in the Quality Metro subject, "Rosemary," has during the past week appeared practically every evening on the stage at the Symphony theatre, where this subject has been shown to unusually big audiences.

Henry R. Johnson, vice-president of the Rolin Film Company, who recently returned from spending six months in the Orient, departed for New York, where he will represent this film at forty-three Exchange Place.

The first subject starring Anita King, the Paramount-Lasky girl, is to be filmed under the direction of George Melford, with Victor Moore as the leading man opposite Miss King.

The title of this is "The Race," and is founded upon Miss King's automobile trip from Los Angeles to New York.

The subject being filmed by Frank Reicher and featuring Charlotte Walker from the pen of Hector Turnbull has been titled "The Woman and the Law." This is referred to as a thrilling drama.

The company under the direction of Paul Dickey is filming for Lasky release, "Behind the Mask." The scenario and story for this was written by Cecil B. de Mille and Gene McPherson. Cleo Ridgley and Wallace Reid play the important parts in this subject.

Cecil B. de Mille is home from spending a vacation which was prolonged by the floods and the breaking of the dam at Indio near San Diego.

A portion of this dam extends to a ranch owned by Mr. de Mille, and where he is engaged in stock raising. Besides the damage wrought to the property by the flood waters, fifteen head of prize cattle recently received from Missouri were killed.

"The Sowers" by de Mille Shortly

William C. de Mille will shortly take up the direction of the filming of an adaptation from the Henry Seaton Marrimon story, "The Sowers." The scenario has been prepared by Marion Fairfax and Blanche Sweet has been selected as the star for this.

More than four hundred people were used by Director George Melford in the making of scenes on the location of the green at Jamestown, Va., for the subject "To Have and to Hold," which features Mae Murray. The green and buildings surrounded were reproduced from drawings by Technical Director Wilfred Buckland from photographs of drawings secured at a Jamestown museum.

Following her appearance in this subject, Miss Murray will be featured in "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," a picturization of the Belasco play. The making of this will be in charge of James Young, latest addition to the Lasky staff.

The second Fox producing company this week began work at the William Fox studio on Allesandro street. The name for Director R. A. Walsh's first subject has not been selected.

This is of the nature of a Western, and Doris Pawn, for many months with the Universal, has been engaged to play leads, and opposite her in this subject will be George Walsh.

Others in the cast are Marion Kinney, Jack Marcus and Vester Perry, late of the Fine Arts staff, who has been seen in a number of daring riding acts.

The Oscar Apfel Fox Company arrived home Sunday from the northern part of the state, where they had been making exteriors for the subject which has been given the working title of "Hoodman Blind." This is a rural drama.

At the Norbig studio a five hundred foot cartoon subject, with drawings by James Cammer, an English cartoonist, has been completed.

This has been titled "Professor Wiseguy's Trip to the Moon." This represents a new process of cartoon making, which was invented by Mr. Cammer. Glass is used for the drawings instead of paper.

The first subject has been sent East by James Youngdeer, who is now on his way to New York to market comedies.

"Better Late Than Never"

The William Collier Keystone subject has been named "Better Late Than Never." This was produced by Frank Griffin.

The supporting cast includes Mae Bush as the principal of an eternal triangle situation, or rather a series of situations wherein Collier and Joseph Belmont, both young artists, try to win the hand of the fair one, and first one is preferred by the father, Frank Opperman, and then the other steps into the old man's good graces.

There are enough situations in this for an average five-reeler, but Mack Sennett has trimmed it down to two.

The Keystone cops have rivals in the organization of the Keystone firemen, who make their first appearance in "Cinders of Love," a two-reeler with a cast composed of Chester Conklin, George Summerville, Billie Bennett, Lois Holmes and Smiling Billy Mason.

The scenes for this are laid around a gala field day plan, and carried out by the police and fire departments, and the situations are made even more of a comedy nature by the wives of the chiefs taking a very important part in aiding their respective husband's men to win.

"Fido's Fate" is another Keystone that has been completed in which Charley Murray, Fritz Schade, Mae Emory and Alice Davenport appear as two happily married couples, who for the novelty of it try flirting in the park. By the way, is this not a new plan of Keystoners, to introduce situations; it is hinted this has never been done before.

However, one hubby, in order to square himself with his wife, buys a dog, expecting to present it to her, but the similarity of the various entrances to apartments cause him much trouble when he gets into the wrong room, and Mr. Dog and husband make the rounds of the entire apartment house.

Just how much trouble an automobile can cause a man serves as a plot for "His Auto Ruination," a Keystone with Mack Swain as the father; Harry Gribbon, lawyer, and a supporting cast of Mae Wells, Julia Faye, Harry McCoy, Bobbie Dunn, Eddie Klein, and directed by Fred Fishback and Edward Klein.

Father's savings are touched by daughter, who wishes to buy a present for her sweetheart, so it is necessary to buy a second-hand car.

The girl's lover frames upon the old man, and the lawyer sees cause for numerous damage suits, and father lands on the rock-pile for thirty days.

New Stunt for Players

A new feature for motion picture industry has been introduced in Los Angeles in which legitimate and vaudeville actors who wish to get into pictures can have test films made.

The company has opened a studio at Allesandro and Brandon streets, and will make from seventy-five to one hundred feet of films of players. These may be viewed by directors and producers, and thus it will make the selection of types a much simpler matter. The producing firm is styled the Mutual Test Film Company.

Director James W. Horne and company of Kalem players have just finished the third episode of "The Love Pirates" series. This number is entitled "The Corsican Sisters," and a remarkable feature of this is the beautiful exterior location used, that of the residence of Marco Hellman, head of the Hellman Day and Night Bank of Los Angeles.

This is one of the show places of Los Angeles, and the first time it has been used in pictures. This number also includes a number of new light effects secured by Mr. Horne and his technical director, Paul Hurst, by the installation of an entirely new system of diffusing.

The company will soon leave on a trip to Seattle, Wash., and while on this will make exteriors for two or more episodes of the serial. Marion Sais, Ollie Kirkby, True Boardman and Frank Jonnason are the principals.

A NYMP company, to be personally directed by Thomas H. Ince, assisted by Charles Swickard, and consisting of Wm. S. Hart as star, Dorothy Dalton, Walt. Whitman, Joseph J. Dowling and Dorcas Matthews, are at San Diego filming scenes at the exposition grounds, where they are using the replica of the Arizona painted desert, the most notable exhibit at the exposition, which was installed by the Santa Fe railway.

In these scenes approximately three hundred extra people will be used, and Mr. Ince accompanied the organization to personally direct the making of these scenes, handling mobs being his specialty.

H. B. Warner has returned to Inceville for another subject. His first Ince starring vehicle has been named "The Raiders," and will be released at an early date.

In "The Raiders" Warner is seen as a business man portraying a dual role of a physician and a drug-crazed man.

The production in which he is working now is being made by Reginald Barker, who filmed four of the first ten Ince Kay-Bee Triangle subjects.

He has picked a cast consisting of Clara Williams, Leona Hutton, Gertrude Claire, Will Bray and Charles Miller.

SIR HERBERT BEERBOHM TREE AS "MACBETH," IN WHICH HE WILL APPEAR FOR THE FINE ARTS STUDIOS

Howard Hickman as director, accompanied by Otis Gove, a NYMP cameraman, went to San Diego during the flood occasioned by the Otay dam breaking, and secured a quantity of very excellent stock film suitable for flood scenes, etc.

The first William Collier Kay-Bee Triangle picture made under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince has been named "The No Good Guy," and is now in the hands of the Culver City laboratory cutters, where it will shortly be completed.

Owing to the popularity of the song "Peggy," dedicated to Billie Burke, and written by Ince and his musical composer, Victor Shertzinger, they have prepared a similar one dedicated to Collier.

This bears the same name as the Collier subject, "The No Good Guy," and will be distributed in conection with the showing of the picture.

One of the new NYMP studio stages at the Culver City plant was this week found to be too small for a setting representing a ball room, and it was necessary that additions be made at one side and on the end.

The setting itself will be one hundred and sixty-five by one hundred and five. This is for a subject that features Wm. H. Thompson and Charles Ray. The filming of the scenes in this set were made at night that all the Ince stock people could take part.

Vice-President and General Manager H. O. Davis has extended an invitation to the Grand Encampment of Knight Templars to be held in Los Angeles in June, for the visitors to spend a day at Universal City, and this invitation has been accepted.

"Manikin Movies" is the name of a novelty to be introduced soon by the Universal Company, contract having been made at the West Coast studios for the exclusive use of such equipment necessary for the making of these.

The principal necessity is a set of automatic dolls which were invented by R. F. Taylor, construction engineer who aided in the building of Universal City, and W. W. Wheatley.

Special stage and settings are being made for the filming of these novelties and the actual work of production will be started soon. The first release will probably not be made for six weeks.

It will be possible to make comedy or drama with these dolls and scripts for both are being prepared.

"Journal of Lord John" Stopped

Announcement of the discontinuation of production of the serial "The Journal of Lord John" was made this week at Universal City when Director E. J. LeSaint took up the filming of a two-reel subject entitled "Herself," which is from scenario by Olga Printzlau. It is understood the episodes of the serial completed to date will be released along with the serial story now being published.

UNIVERSAL "GRAFT" COMPANY AFTER ONE OF THEIR MANY ALL-NIGHT SESSIONS

"Herself" has but three characters, that of a young art student who inherits his uncle's fortune on condition that he marry a certain cousin whom he has never seen. After weeks of search she is located as waitress in a small cafe where he studies her while taking his meals.

He tells her of his interest in her, relating the provisions of the will and she consents to marry him on condition that she may have freedom from the marriage vows if she so desires. This request was made because of her love affair with a bully of the district in which the cafe is located.

After marriage she tires of luxury and is induced to elope with her former sweetheart, but as they are leaving in an auto the tires are punctured by shots and the girl is kidnapped and taken to a mountain cabin.

In the morning she is faced by her husband and for a month he attempts to induce her to love him. He gives up in despair and has made up his mind to return her to the city.

On that day, however, numerous incidents cause her to see the true worth of her husband, and that evening there is a reconciliation. Juan de la Cruze, Stella Razeto and Eddie Polo are the members of the cast.

Learning that the name of Mary Page is being used by other film companies the scenario department at Universal City has changed the title of "The Disappearance of Mary Page" to that of "The Disappearance of Mary Hale." The subject is being made by the Lynn Reynolds Company, and features Myrtle Gonzalez.

Ormston's Shadowgraphs

Frank Ormston of the technical staff at Universal City has devised a new way of making shadowgraphs for the screen, and is now engaged in making a three hundred-foot subject. A title for this has not been given.

Walter Woods, of the Universal City scenario staff who has prepared practically all the scenarios for the sixteen episodes of the "Graft" serial, from original stories by himself, is confronted with a still greater task of adding four episodes to this serial making twenty releases or forty reels in all.

In the preparation Mr. Wood did not know there were to be more than sixteen releases and he worked into these all the different trusts that he could learn of. Now he finds that he must draw on his imagination for additional melodramatic situations and build up other law-breaking organizations of finance.

Richard Stanton, who has directed all of the episodes and is to play the lead part in the last four of the original sixteen, will continue with the additional four.

Affinity Hill, so named because it separates the front and back section of Universal City, is to be used as a site for the town that Jack builds, Jack in this case being director Jacques Jaccard.

The hamlet is to be of the western type with probably thirty buildings in all, including every kind to be found in the pioneer town of thirty or forty years ago, together with mines, oil mills, smelters, etc.

Roads of the mountain type are to be built from the bottom to the summit, and the entire setting is to be a permanent one that will serve for practically every scene needed in Western melodrama.

Every building will be so completed that it will serve for interior and exterior scenes, and thus it will be possible for Jaccard and company to make subjects according to continuity, and not a scene plot, which is considered the most successful way for this type of film plays.

EDITH ROBERTS

The company will continue making two, three and five reel subjects, and are now engaged in completing "The Wedding Guest."

To this organization which consists of Harry Carey, Bill Gettinger, Olive Golden, and Peggy Coudray has been added Raymond G. Nye.

He was formerly a member of the Universal stock Company, and for the past year has been affiliated with the Biograph organization. In future productions Nye will play heavy parts.

Second Episode of "Grey Seal" Making

Bess Meredyth, former Universal comedienne and scenario writer who for the past year has been free-lancing, has been specially engaged by the Universal to prepare the screen version of the remaining episodes of "The Grey Seal" series, being produced by Director Wm. Worthington and featuring Herbert Rawlinson and Francelia Billington. The company is now engaged in filming the second number of the series.

The loss of an arm from injuries received when he prevented a lioness in zoological gardens from injuring a handsome woman who later refused his offer for marriage to accept one of an Englishman of title, affords the name and greater part of the plot for "His Good Right Arm," a two-reel 101 Bison being made at Universal City with a cast composed of Golda Coldwell, Colin Chase, Rex de Rosselli and Stafford Pemberton.

The scenario calls for a number of scenes in South Africa where the woman and her English husband are captured by native savages and their rescue is effected by her forcer benefactor.

NEW YORK MOTION WORKS ON "CASTILIAN" AT CULVER CITY

Special to Motion Picture News

San Diego, Cal., Feb. 10.

The New York Motion Picture Company is in the city for a stay of several days while working upon a big spectacular picture, entitled "The Castilian," by Monte M. Katterjohn.

About a score of the regular staff came down from the studio at Culver City, and it has been necessary to secure two or three hundred extras, which was largely done through the federal employment bureau in the government building here.

The scenes are in the cities of the Aztecs, and the occasion of the trip here was to utilize the wonderful reconstructions of pueblos and other habitations in the Painted Desert, the big Indian feature of the San Diego Exposition, maintained by the Santa Fe Railroad.

Charles Swickard is directing the production, and the cameramen are William F. Alder, O. M. Gove and Clyde DeVinna.

William S. Hart is playing leads, together with Enid Markey, while Dorothy Dalton appears as heavy.

Walt Whitman is seen in the character of the high priest. Little Robert Kroc appears as the Spanish boy, who is the sole survivor of a shipwreck, whose part, after growing up, is taken by Hart.

The feature will run something like seven or eight reels.

Capt. Wilbert Melville, of the Western Lubin company, has returned from his extended trip East, occasioned by the fatal illness of his mother. Mrs. Melville accompanied him on the trip.

Julian Lamothe has several his connection with the Lubin staff as scenario writer and editor and has gone to Los Angeles.

Director Sloman has just completed the three-reeler, "A Sister to Cain," by Julian Lamothe. In this Helen Wolcott appears as Yvonne, and Evelyn Page as Ione, two chorus girls.

Alan Forrest has the part of Phelps, a wealthy young club man, and George Routh is seen as Hashiwa, the proprietor of a Japanese tea garden. The part of John Marston, a newspaper reporter, is taken by Jay Morley.

Melvin Mayo has the character of Phelps' friend. Adelaide Bronti is the wardrobe woman, Ben Hopkins the doorkeeper at the theatre where the girls appear, and George Spencer is the police sergeant. D. L. Davis has operated the camera.

The story is built around the jealousies of the chorus girls and the infatuation of the club man and newspaper reporter for them. One of the girls is stabbed by the other at the tea garden and left for dead.

The Jap proprietor finds that life is not extinct and secretes her in a hidden chamber. The story of her mysterious disappearance furnishes news for a day, and altogether there is no small amount of excitement.

Allen H. Wright.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

THE "idea box," recently announced in a scientific magazine, and recommended to scenario writers, appeals to Colin Campbell, the Selig director. He has long felt the need of ideas, he reports, and has not concocted a scheme for attaching an "idea box" to the camera, so that both will be turned at the same time.

He figures that by so doing he can take his pictures and write a new scenario at the same time. This method should help greatly in increasing the week's footage.

From a source which we do not care to divulge, but in which we have every confidence, we learn that Cleo Madison spends the cold winter evenings at her Hollywood home popping corn, which is afterward served to Universal players.

It cost someone fifteen minutes of typewriting, a two-cent stamp, and a sheet of clean paper, not to mention wastage of typewriter ribbon, to put us in possession of this fact. But we got it, gol dern it; we got it!

After three weeks of grippe, Bert Adler is back at his Universal desk. He is reported as still convalescent, and for that reason has been relieved of the arduous work of casting. This will be attended to by Bernard Arons until Mr. Adler gets his full strength.

In the meantime, Mr. Adler is getting his full share of the trials of married life; as soon as he was on his feet, his bride became ill, and the doctor resumed his visits.

The Metro Pictures Corporation, through its publicity department, now presents "Dick Metro," the smallest dog which has been given to Mary Miles Minter for four days.

The dog, it is said, was the gift of Mrs. Richard A. Rowland, wife of the Metro president, and will be run as a feature on the same program with "Woof-woof," the poodle which forms the nucleus of Miss Minter's kennels.

Dick is described as a pure bred Metro-terrier. He is the original Yellow Streak, and is worth about One Million Dollars.

Like all these Metro-style dogs, he has already created considerable Turmoil around the studios, which he has converted into a House of Tears by his continual yelp of "rolf! rolf! rolf!"

Lest there be lingering doubts in the minds of the benighted as to the personal beauty of Virginia Pearson, this department is now able to give its readers the results of several weeks' investigation of the subject.

We must confess that it would have been impossible to obtain anything like so complete a report without the aid of the Fox publicity forces.

In fact, to this source we owe these crisp descriptions. They all apply to Miss Pearson, whom, by referring to page 73 of Motion Picture News Studio Directory, we find to be Mrs. Sheldon Lewis in private life.

"Modern Cleopatra of the movies, . . . wonderful physique, . . . glowing complexion, . . . passionate love of outdoor life, . . . requires little or no make-up before the camera, and none off stage, . . . violently opposed to beauty trickeries. . . ."

For the benefit of those who also would become modern Cleopatras of the movies, we have compiled this daily program, to which Miss Pearson owes her beauty:

1. Morning bath in cream, impregnated with the odor of rose-leaves or lavender; administered by two Greek maids. 2. Greets the dawn. 3. Horseback ride or walk over country roads (distance not given). 4. Steam bath. 5. Olive-oil rub-down. 6. Vigorous massage of entire body. 7. Drinks small cup of yamuck (orange and cactus juice). 8. Lunch. 9. (Evening) Manicure, nails polished with ointment of myrrh; scalp and hair treated with tomato juice; face and neck massaged with banana oil and bark of the aromatic cinnamon bush (pores later closed by application of camphor ice and onyx dust). 10. Is baked. (This process is thus described by our informant):

"Miss Pearson is placed in a huge stone jar with her head protruding from the neck. The jar is then filled with a red clay and lowered into a heated oven, where it remains until the clay attains almost a liquid form.

"After the jar, with its beautiful occupant, is removed from the oven, it is plunged into cold water. Then follows the tepid shower bath and the rub-down with peacock oil."

After this Miss Pearson's time is her own until the following day. It must be confessed that the treatment rather eats into her time, but it will be seen from the foregoing that Miss Pearson carries her "violent opposition to beauty trickeries" almost to the point of frenzy.

This office acknowledges receipt of a tulip—a sweet yellow tulip—on the occasion of its attaining its majority. When it reached us, the name of Harry Reichenbach was still plainly distinguishable on the card attached to it, consequently the acknowledgements go to Mr. Reichenbach—if Harry doesn't mind our calling him Mr. Reichenbach.

We opened it with a sinking heart, feeling sure it was a gates ajar, or a floral anchor; but no—it was a tulip, its yellowness smiling up at us like the Hope of Heaven on a field of Graves.

The tulip shelves have not been installed in the new offices as yet, but then we don't mind how many flowers the boys send along; we are only half a block from the stage entrance of the Winter Garden.

Some anonymous contributor, doubtless a close reader of Motion Picture News, has written to John Flinn, of the Lasky Company, a tribute to the Lasky productions. Mr. Flinn announces that he either does or does not stand sponsor for the effusion, which comes alarmingly near getting him down to cases:

"The Man from Home" smiled, lit a cigar and began: "A Gentleman of Leisure" was "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo," incidentally the inheritor of "Brewster's Millions," whose only aim was "To Have and To Hold" "The Chorus Lady" known to the public as "Carmen," once the wife of "Cameo Kirby," "The Squaw Man."

He met "Tennessee's Pardner," "Pudd'nhead Wilson," a "Circus Man," who was on a "Wild Goose Chase" to get possession of "The Puppet Crown," also some "Snobs" and then "The Woman" who told him his "Young Romance" was a frost.

He then heeded "The Call of the North" and hastened "Out of Darkness," listening not to "The Voice in the Fog" or to "Temptation."

He discovered "The Clue" to "The Secret Sin," and although "The Fighting Hope" beat in his breast, he exposed "The Ragamuffin" to "The Governor's Lady," who made her a "Captive," thus ending "The Case of Becky."

"Chimmie Fadden," a "Virginian," his best friend, eloped with "Armstrong's Wife," and he reached there in time to see "The Marriage of Kitty" in "The Secret Orchard." But as he discovered the groom to be a "Cheat," he sent "Chimmie Fadden Out West."

Once there, he found "Maria Rosa," "The Rose of the Rancho," who was the daughter of the famous "Explorer," who had ventured forth into "The Unknown" never to return. Her name was on "The Blacklist," but he pitied her so that he ran away with this "Girl of the Golden West."

On the plains an "Immigrant," by nation, an "Arab" was "Kindling" a wood fire. He made a dramatic picture, with the "Blackbirds" circling around him. Little did our hero think that in the carpet bag by his side was "Stolen Goods" belonging to "The Warrens of Virginia."

He passed it by silently, life held no joys for him, his "Golden Chance" had passed, so with a sorrowful face he followed "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and "Where the Trail Divides" beheld—oh! his heart beat, his spirits rose, beside the "Man on the Box," "The King of the Movies," the one and only producer, Jesse L. Lasky!

We hereby do just honor to H. H. Van Loan, Universal's publicity specialist for creating one of the well-known furores that abound in this business.

Space forbids us going into the details of Van's accomplishment, but if you doubt us, glance at any New York daily published Friday, February 5, and note the story concerning Jimmie Douglas, a young lad, long lost, but at last found in the Universal picture "Judy Forgot."

The number of lines allowed H. H. and his story has not yet been computed, but statisticians are still at work.

Herbert also stands sponsor for the statement that he is nursing something up at 1600 Broadway which will put the late Universal Beauty contest in the shade and even eclipse the rapidly growing Handsome Man contest.

After opening a lot of our morning's mail and laying aside the checks, we find this: "Frisbee, Fanny Ward's pet squirrel, bit her finger, and it bled so profusely that close-ups were impossible in the picture she was working in, so it had to be postponed for a week."

This is the first time, so far as we know, that a pet squirrel had to be postponed because it bled so profusely after biting its finger.

Special despatches to this department, filed at Station M, New York, at 11 p. m., February 4, advise us that Billy Sherwood, who has just returned from a vacation in New Orleans, has been engaged by Director Kirkwood, of Famous Players.

Among the first callers at our new office were Townsend Black, Duane J. Kertyn, Duncan Hardie, Lloyd Llwellyn and Tom J. Geraghty, of the staff of Metro Pictures Magazine. They came over in a body—and departed in the same way. Call again, boys, say we.

General Order No. 9360*.—To all Universal Publicity Men: Kindly arrange to have Louise Carbasse-Welch-Lovely reach at least an approximate decision regarding her name before October.

The next issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS Studio Directory goes to press then, and we want to know who she's going to be.

ANDREW ROBSON IN HOSPITAL SUFFERING FROM BURNS

As an aftermath of the fire staged at the California Motion Picture plant at San Rafael during the production of "The Unwritten Law," Andrew Robson, who played the role of Larry McCarthy, is now in St. Luke's Hospital, San Francisco, suffering from severe burns.

He will not be able to leave the hospital for six weeks, it is announced, and will therefore be unable to appear in the next California feature, "The Woman Who Dared," in which Beatriz Michelena will be starred.

Robson has supported Miss Michelena in every photoplay of hers.

Noted Circus Horse a Kalem "Star" in "Hazards"

"Black Beauty" Is Bought from Robinson Brothers' Show to "Support" Helen Gibson in Railroad Series, Making His Film Debut in "Race for Life"

THE joys of the free street parade and the noisy circus band are no more for "Black Beauty." That famous steed of the sawdust circle is the latest "star" to be lured to motion pictures.

With or without his consent Black Beauty will spend the balance of his days in the silent drama, for Kalem has purchased him from the Robinson Brothers' show, and signed him to a life contract to "support" Helen Gibson in "The Hazards of Helen."

The problem of finding the right horse to use in the "Hazards," in which Helen Gibson will be seen in both railroad and equestrian feats was a difficult one because of the necessity of securing an animal who would not become uncontrollable when brought too close to speeding railroad trains.

Many had been tried unsuccessfully when Helen Gilson learned that Black Beauty, who had been her mount when she was the star of Miller Brothers 101 Ranch Show, was wintering with the Robinson Brothers' show in California.

Negotiations were quickly completed, though it is said that Black Beauty's purchase price would make a satisfactory one year contract for many a famous screen star.

Black Beauty will make his screen debut in "A Race for Life," a one reel "Hazard of Helen" scheduled for release Saturday, March 11.

In this episode Helen Gibson, in bewitching riding togs, is displaying her ability as a horsewoman on the bucking Black Beauty when she learns that a runaway engine is carrying its helpless engineer to certain death at the Mojave River, where the bridge has been swept away by floods.

With Robyn Adair, Helen then takes a perilous short-cut over hill and dale, jumping many obstacles, and reaches a point in the tracks at the time the engine does.

Running a breath-catching race for a few seconds, the riders are about to be outdistanced by the engine when Helen swings to the horse mounted by Adair, and standing on the latter's shoulders, grasps the tender of the engine and swings aboard. The engine is brought to a stop on the brink of the river-bank.

Blauvelt Back from 13-Months' Paramount Trip

Cameraman Who Obtains for South American Travel Series Pictures Covering Diversity of Subjects from Ostrich Farming to Panama Canal, Toured Europe with Roosevelt

H. D. BLAUVELT, one of the most enterprising motion picture cameraman in the country, returned to the States last week.

He spent thirteen months in South America securing the pictures for the Paramount South American Travel Series which have been released through Paramount Pictures Corporation during 1915.

With the conclusion of the South American pictorial series there followed four releases on "Australia's Unknown," which, however, superseded the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel Pictures.

The latter are personally conducted "easy-chair-journeys" by Mr. Holmes himself, he assembling and titling all the releases.

Prior to his South American trip, Mr. Blauvelt represented prominent press associations and toured Europe as cameraman with Theodore Roosevelt, ex-President of the United States, and also accompanied other expeditions.

Mr. Blauvelt was highly elated over the fact that the South American Travel Pictures are being used so extensively in educational institutions, and that they have been endorsed by the best known educators in the country.

He said that it had been the purpose of Paramount from the inception of the trip to combine geography and history with the Travel Pictures, and because of that, it made his trip highly pleasurable and interesting.

The pictures he took of widest interest were those of ostrich farming in Florida; harpoon fishing in Key West; shark fishing in Havana; mahogany lumbering in Guayaquil; cocoanut gathering in Quito; sponge fishing in Kingston; the Panama Canal and locks in Panama; seal hunting in Payta; the Peruvian types in Mallendo; the Chuncha Indians in Titicaca; the great gravity railway at La Paz; the tropical birds at Valparaiso; the ranching in Santiago; the icebergs in Port Stanley; the Falls of Iquaza near Buenos Aires; sheep ranching near Montevideo; the sugar loaf mountain at Santos; diamond mining at Bahia; and a wonderful lot of other things.

KANSAS CITY REPORTS SATISFACTORY BOOKINGS OF BLUEBIRD FEATURES; BERNHARDT FILM A WINNER

THE Kansas City exchange for the Bluebird photoplays is encouraged with the increased demand for the pictures. While the pictures only were put before the public less than a month ago, the name Bluebird already is proving a magnet to motion picture patrons as a result of the high standard the first three pictures have maintained.

The Empress theatre, a large vaudeville house, is playing the pictures regularly each week as first run in the downtown district.

Sarah Bernhardt's subject, "Jeanne Dore," took people to the theatre who never had been in the house before and the coming of "Undine" drew these same patrons back again.

This picture's attractiveness further intrenched the desire to see more of Bluebird pictures. This week Helen Ware is appearing in "Secret Love" and the business of the theatre continues to increase. The Empress changes its bill twice weekly, but the Bluebirds play the week through.

The Kansas City suburban theatres also are booking the Bluebirds well and contracts are being closed daily throughout Missouri and Kansas. A rather surprising feature of the new Bluebird business is the fact that the smaller towns are not holding back and showing fear of buying the big features.

As a result of the favorable criticisms of the Kansas City papers of the first three Bluebird films, the smaller towns are signing contracts without waiting for reports from the smaller cities.

The Universal exchange at Kansas City has added a newspaper man to head its publicity department which has been made a feature of the exchange. George H. Bowles, for five years with the Kansas City Star from which he resigned as copy editor and editor of the motion picture columns, was placed in charge of the publicity work February 1, and already is showing big results with his efforts. Mr. Bowles has a plan of action to get results from the newspapers through Missouri and Kansas, this plan being simply to furnish dignified news and feature stories written in newspaper style and not in the adjectival flourish employed by most press agents.

February 9, the publicity department began the publication of a small newspaper, The Universal Weekly, to supplant the weekly bulletin formerly mailed to the exhibitors in the district. This little paper is built just like a big daily with every bit of material written in newspaper style, with half-tone and line etching cuts, and with an editorial page. It not only is mailed to the exhibitors but to all the newspapers in Missouri and Kansas. Its columns are open to the paste pot and shears of any paper and its service will be regular, being published every Wednesday.

The publicity department also is supplying the papers with special features and news stories dealing with the motion picture industry, as well as Universal features for publication as strictly news. Universal exhibitors also can secure special publicity stories on request for any feature or serial they are running. With these plans Mr. Bowles feels certain of assisting both the newspapers and the exhibitors.

C. A. "Red" Jones, a road salesman for the Universal exchange at Kansas City, won the salesmen's sales contest for the 4-week period ending February 5. The other salesmen gave Mr. Jones a close race, but he nosed ahead the last day of the contest thereby winning a cash prize of $25. These prizes are given by the exchange every four weeks.

ONTARIO FILM MEN MAKE PROTEST AGAINST BILL

A deputation of Ontario film men, representing the various Exchanges, visited the Provincial Parliament buildings and interviewed the Hon. Mr. McGarry, the provincial treasurer, in regards to the new bill, which has just been passed in Ontario, that permits the censor board to recall films, after they have been censored and also concerning the increase of fifty cents in the censor fee, which brings the total up to two dollars.

Mr. Ludwig, one of Toronto's ablest legal men, was spokesman for the film men and made an eloquent appeal for fair play in the matter of passing bills, such as the one under discussion, without notifying the film exchanges. The question was thoroughly discussed, the film men believing that it would be a great hardship on them, if the censor board could recall films after they were censored, thus placing the exchanges in the unenviable position of not knowing when their films were really passed.

The Hon. Mr. McGarry finally agreed to see that the privilege was not abused by the censor board and that if the rule did work a hardship on the exchanges to see that it was amended.

CAMPBELL IN CHARGE OF WORLD OFFICES IN TORONTO

W. A. Campbell has assumed charge of the Toronto office of the World Film Company. Mr. Campbell was formerly in charge of the Toronto office of the Mutual Company.

"BATTLE CRY OF PEACE" AMONG FIRST V-L-S-E CANADIAN IMPORTATIONS

As one of the first subjects to be imported by the new company just formed to handle the V-L-S-E productions in western Canada, W. P. Dewees, of the Rex theatre in Vancouver, announced that Vitagraph's "The Battle Cry of Peace," will be shown at his house two weeks hence.

It is stated that this will be the first showing of this exceptional picture in Canada, and judging by the protests against it in Boston, it should be a great success in this territory.

J. A. Schuberg, manager of the Bijou and Province theatres in Winnipeg, and another member of the new company, visited Vaucouver last week in connection with the closing of the deal, and reports fairly good business in Manitoba.

STEPHENS MAKES QUICK RESPONSE TO EXHIBITOR EMERGENCY CALL

The exhibitor may have his live wire stunts. Occasionally an exchange manager puts one over that might be classed in this category.

A disastrous fire recently occurred at the Queen theatre, in Mobile, Alabama. Two projection machines and four reels were burnt up. This was on a Friday at noon.

At six o'clock Friday the management telephoned S. T. Stephens, the live wire manager of Mutual in New Orleans, found him at his desk at that late hour, and at nine o'clock Mr. Stephens had two Edison B machines on their way to Mobile.

Thus by a little cooperation plus efficiency, the management lost hardly a day's business.

YOUNG WITH ASSOCIATED IN KANSAS CITY

George Bowles has accepted a position with the Universal Film and Supply Company of Kansas City, as publicity man. He takes the place vacated by H. G. Gill.

Bowles goes to the Universal with a long newspaper experience behind him. He was formerly with the Kansas City Star and it was through his efforts that this paper printed motion picture news in a regular department.

P. J. Hall, manager of the Western Film Exchange in Kansas City, slipped away to Chicago a couple of weeks ago and came back with a bride. He kept it secret for several days, but the cat got out of the bag and "Pat" is receiving congratulations.

J. Roy Young, formerly in charge of the poster department of the Universal in Kansas City, has made connection with the Associated Film Service. He goes to the new firm as booker.

HOFFMAN, BACK FROM TOUR OF MIDDLE WEST CITIES, REPORTS DEMAND FOR BLUEBIRDS

M. H. HOFFMAN, head of the Bluebird Photo Play exchange system, upon his return from a tour of the principal Middle Western exchanges, including a visit to Chicago, Detroit, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, stated that he found business in all the Bluebird exchanges in a most flourishing condition.

When Mr. Hoffman started at the head of the exchange system that was to launch the new Bluebird productions throughout the United States and Canada, he picked out men with whom he had been in touch for several years, and told them that he had a proposition bigger than anything ever before offered to film exchanges.

He then announced the coming of Bluebird Photo Plays; explained that they were to be the classiest pictures ever procured for a special program, and that every subject which would be issued as a Bluebird Photo Play would have to be thoroughly perfect, which means perfect in story, acting, settings, climax, participants and technique. He also announced a new system whereby instead of having a manager and assistant manager in each Bluebird exchange, the two executives were made joint managers, each thus being given joint credit for new business secured or joint blame for any complaints which may arise.

Mr. Hoffman, upon his return to New York City, said that in the two first offices where this system had already been put into effect, the business had showed a remarkable increase, something which was a pleasant surprise both for himself and the exchange men.

The increase in new business of these two exchanges is in excess of twenty per cent., and Mr. Hoffman predicts that it will not be a very long time before all the offices handling Bluebird Photo Plays, and in which this system has been placed, will be working on as satisfactory a basis as the first two.

BERNFELD OF PATHE EXCHANGE IN BOSTON, PLACES "RED CIRCLE" IN MANY NEW ENGLAND HOUSES

PATHE'S new serial, "The Red Circle," is traveling fast in New England. Through the enterprise of Manager Bernfeld, of the Pathé exchange, on Tremont street, the serial is being run as follows:

Beacon, Loew's South End, Comique, Premier, Egleston Square, Everett Square, Winthrop Hall, Roslindale, Niagara, Supreme, Allston, Olympia, New Scenic, Franklin Park, Day Square and Magic theatres in Boston; Royal in Lowell; Inman Square in Cambridge; Strand in Haverhill; Bijou in Fall River; Orpheum in Stoughton; Colonial in Andover; Rockland in Rockland; Star in Lawrence; Woburn in Woburn; Pastime in West Lynn; Starkey in North Attleboro; Steinberg in Webster; Grand in Marlboro; Globe in Fall River; Drinkwater in West Hanover; Plaza in Worcester; Royal and National in New Bedford; Universal in Fitchburg; Lyric in Fall River; Ideal in Milford; Blanchard in Southbridge; Wakefield in Wakefield; Rex in Waltham; Orpheum in Malden; Opera House in Athol; Opera House in Westfield; Prospect in Whitinsville, and Lyceum in Marblehead, all in Massachusetts.

Nashua in Nashua; Pastime in Tilton; Opera House in Exeter; Crown in Manchester; Modern in West Manchester, and Lyric in Dover, all in New Hampshire.

The Playhouse in Rutland, and Please U in St. Johnsbury, Vt.; Bijou in Woonsocket; Shea in Valley Falls; Opera House in Manville; Globe in Pawtucket; Lyric in Warren, and Casino in Centredale, all in Rhode Island.

The Circle in South Manchester; Majestic in Thompsonville; Princess in Bristol; and Lyceum in New London, all in Connecticut.

KANSAS EXHIBITORS WAIT IN OFFICE TO SIGN "YELLOW SEAL"

Cold weather and snow has caused the motion picture exhibitors in Missouri and Kansas a great deal of worry for the last few weeks but R. C. Cropper, manager of the Universal exchange at Kansas City, reports a large amount of new business for the month ending February 1.

A number of flattering letters have reached the Universal exchange from exhibitors in praise of the new Red Feather features, a big business being reported for each.

A number of Kansas and Missouri exhibitors who formerly split their service, using Universal service only a part of the week, are finding the Universal subjects such good drawing cards they now have discontinued the split service and are using Universal the week through.

The Universal serials also are drawing big and new demands are coming in daily for the "Graft" serial, especially exhibitors who have booked "The Broken Coin."

When news came of the new serial, "The Yellow Seal," a number of exhibitors were in the Kansas City Universal office and three signed contracts before the salesmen had learned anything more than that it would be ready for sale in the very near future.

AUGER, MUTUAL, IN ST. LOUIS ON VISIT

Edward Auger, special representative of the Mutual Film Corporation, was in St. Louis last week on his periodical visit to that territory, and made his headquarters at the Mutual exchange at 1311 Pine street, which is under the management of Fred A. Keller.

J. H. Cassidy, formerly with the General Film exchange in St. Louis, has severed his connection with that company and has been put in charge of the poster department at the Universal exchange at 2116 Locust street.

MANAGERS OF CLEVELAND OFFICES COMPROMISE ON PAY IN ADVANCE PLAN

Managers of Cleveland film exchanges releasing a general service, after a conference with the exhibitors' exchange committee, have offered to compromise on their payment in the advance ultimatum.

They have asked the Northeastern Ohio League to support them on the general principle and say that if members of the league will pay one week in advance for three weeks they may afterwards revert to the old system.

Attorney Ernest Schwartz, at the last meeting of the league, declared that if an exhibitor is entitled to credit after three weeks he is entitled to it right away. "We ought to reply that we will insist that responsible men be given credit," Mr. Schwartz said.

Attorney Ben J. Sawyer said the offer of the exchange men would strengthen the position of the league.

C. A. McGown asserted that the proposal of the exchanges would mean that in future they would live up to their contracts and give exhibitors what they were entitled to. He thought the exhibitors ought to be prepared to meet them and give a little.

The matter was referred back to the exchange committee for a further report.

GENERAL BUILDS TWO FIREPROOF VAULTS IN BANGOR, MAINE

The General Film Company, of Bangor, Me., has just completed the building of two cement fireproof vaults with double iron doors, to be used for storing films.

The management intends not to have a reel outside of the vaults, except those that are being shipped during the day.

The two vaults are built in such a manner that a stream of water may be turned in from the outside of the building, but the only opening to the inside of the building is by the doorway, which is protected by two strong iron doors.

MEAGHER BACK IN VANCOUVER

J. N. Meagher, manager of the General Film Company's Vancouver branch, has returned to Vancouver from a two weeks' trip to Eastern cities in the United States and Canada.

While in Montreal he was in consultation with the new Canadian division manager, H. E. Lotz.

NEWHOUSE FURNISHES MORSE WITH GENERAL PROGRAM

Manager Newhouse, of the General Film Company, Bangor, Me., has just completed arrangements to furnish pictures for the C. W. Morse Winter Garden in Bangor, the Majestic Theatre in Rumford and the Royal Theatre in Waterville.

BROWN SELLS BLUEBIRD FEATURES IN LOS ANGELES

C. E. Brown, former industrial agent in Northwestern Canada, has been sent to Los Angeles to take charge of the Bluebird department of the Universal Exchange.

The first showing of this brand of pictures will be made within the next week.

ROSENGARTEN IN CHARGE OF FOX, NEWARK, NEW JERSEY

David Rosengarten, for several years a prominent figure in the sales end of the motion picture business, has taken up the duties of exchange manager at the Newark, N. J. offices of the Fox Film Corporation, 43 Strand theatre building.

Mr. Rosengarten is known for his aggressive and efficient business methods, talents which he demonstrated beyond a shadow of a doubt, while connected with the Brooklyn exchange of the Fox company. His ability there was soon recognized, resulting in his promotion to the Newark office.

Prior to his association with William Fox's organization, Mr. Rosengarten was on the sales force of the Cosmos Feature Film Company, and his season of diligent work with that concern earned him notice and an offer from the company with which he is now associated.

GUSTAVE FROHMAN SPEAKS BEFORE BOSTON FILM CLUB

Speaking before the members of the Boston Film Club at the Hotel Brunswick the other night, Gustave Frohman, head of the Gustave Frohman Photoplay exchange, stated his conviction that within a few years the film business would be entirely controlled by the producers of the more wholesome class of pictures.

The film with the punch, he believes, is passing from favor, and he sees great success for those companies which produce only clean photoplays.

"The time is not far distant," he said, "when the public will clamor for pictures that are wholesome and clean; that instruct and inspire. And we must not forget that when we cater to the public we send the moving picture into 1,200 theatres in New England, 650 in Massachusetts and seventy-seven in Boston alone."

SPITZER SUCCESSFUL IN PLACING BLUEBIRDS IN TORONTO

Mr. Spitzer, special representative of the Bluebird Film Corporation, has just left Toronto, after a most successful visit, during which he introduced the new brand to exhibitors.

He, together with Mr. Lennon, Mr. Haguc and Mr. Davidson, of the Toronto Universal exchange, succeeded in booking the first run of the Bluebirds in Shea's Hippodrome, to appear, the latter part of February. An extensive advertising campaign is to be started at once and high hopes are entertained of its success.

THREE TIMES MORE SPACE FOR DAVIS BROTHERS

The Davis Brothers Poster Exchange San Francisco, is moving to larger quarters, occupying about three times as much space as their present location.

The new exchange will be fitted up as a real headquarters for exhibitors, exchangemen, and solicitors; meeting rooms for the Motion Picture League of the city and state will be provided; and the poster and machine departments will be elaborate. The operating room is under the management of W. G. Preddey.

GOFF TALKS TO TEXAS V-L-S-E MANAGERS; STEPHENS, NEW ORLEANS, FINDS BUSINESS GOOD

AFTER attending an important conference of V-L-S-E managers, called by A. W. Goff, assistant general manager, in Dallas, Tex., February 3, R. King Evans, manager of the New Orleans branch, makes an interesting report of the meeting, which was in the main devoted to a discussion of prices.

Mr. Goff delivered an address on "A Minimum and Maximum Price of Features." He explained why a minimum and maximum price should be put into effect, why each film should bear its price stag, so to speak, much after the manner in which a successful retailer conducts his merchandising.

Mr. Goff argued that the exhibitor should only be required to pay for what he gets in the picture and not be bound by iron-clad contracts at so much per day, regardless of the value of the picture to him.

Mr. Evans is installing these ideas in his brand new exchange shop in Baronne street, into which he moved his office force on February 6.

A visit to the office of S. T. Stephens, who has been at the Mutual helm but a month, found the Stephens' shop busy as the proverbial bee, with Mr. Stephens engrossed in a report which showed that Mutual service has been put on in twenty-two suburban houses in New Orleans. Mr. Stephens' only comment on conditions was that they were good.

General employees last week all wore perennial smiles and were busily engaged in trying to smoke up hands full of Havanas.

The secret was out when F. E. Garner, in charge of the special feature department, let it be known that a fifteen-pound youngster had been an arrival at the Garner household during the first part of the week.

Mr. Garner has not yet decided what branch of the business he will let his youngster enter when he grows up.

Film friends of Al G. Shear last week arranged a complimentary after-the-theatre party, in honor of Mr. Shear's fifteenth wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Shear received cut glass tokens to mark the crystal period of their wedded happiness.

While the supper was purely a personal affair, before the night was over it developed into a Universal love feast, and toasts were drunk to the heads of the Universal company.

Mr. Shear personally celebrated his anniversary day by announcing that four new Crescent City theatres had been equipped by the Consolidated Film and Supply Company, which he manages in New Orleans.

These include the Crescent theatre, which recently opened with the Paramount program, the Triangle, the College and the Empire.

In all of these he has installed two Powers 6-B projection machines and Minusa Gold Fibre screens, and he has practically closed the contract for supplying the new Strand theatre, which will open in Baronne street next July.

"The Strange Case of Mary Page," the new serial, has taken well in the Louisiana territory, according to the report gathered from E. C. Kirkpatrick, who is handling the film through the General office.

The first Red Feather release for New Orleans, Violet Mersareau in "The Path of Happiness," was run at the Dreamworld theatre last week. If patronage for the first picture counts for anything, Red Feather features have secured a permanent niche in the city.

In order to preserve for time immemorial the memory of New Orleans racing meet, and for political reasons as well, to show the efficient manner in which the ponies ran without the obnoxious bookmaking system, the Nola Film Company took a one-reel picture at the track last week. It featured the track, the horses and spectators as well.

Among the latter were Josiah and Eugene Pearce, of the Pearce Amusement Enterprises, and other local film celebrities.

Nowadays the attractive 1916 membership cards of the Motion Picture Board of Trade are beginning to appear in exchange row. Manager S. T. Stephens has his card tacked prominently at Mutual headquarters in a spot where visitors cannot help but see it.

Howard Gale, of the New Orleans Kleine-Edison office, following a tour of Alabama and Mississippi, brings back with him an interesting review of film conditions in those states.

Lately, Mr. Gale says, crops and business have been rather poor, and these conditions necessarily affect the exhibitors.

In Mobile, Alabama, two houses have closed within the past month, one of these being the Royal theatre, the oldest house in the city.

In Meridian, Miss., the Elite theatre, owned by Sid Barry, opened and closed again within a period of twenty days.

SIDNEY IS EASTERN REPRESENTATIVE FOR BLUEBIRD; JACQUES, BOSTON HEAD

C. G. Sidney, formerly manager of the United Film Service, in Albany, N. Y., has been appointed Eastern representative of Bluebird Photoplays by General Manager M. H. Hoffman.

In Boston the Bluebird office has been opened at 205 Pleasant Street, with Frank Jacques in charge. Mr. Jacques lately managed the Globe theatre, Brockton, Mass., and was previously connected with the Boston Photo-Play Company.

Mr. Sidney, from Albany, and Mr. Jacques, from Boston, will thoroughly cover the Eastern and New England territory.

TANDY, AFTER 2 WEEKS IN CUBA, GOES TO ATLANTA

C. E. Tandy, manager of the Southern Paramount Pictures Corporation, and S. A. Lynch, both of Atlanta, Ga., returned to New York, after having spent two weeks in Cuba.

After conferring with the officers of the Paramount Pictures Corporation in New York City, he left for the South.

New Laws And Court Decisions

This department is designed to keep the industry informed of all news concerning new or projected laws, Federal, State, County or Municipal, that may affect the business, and all events involving any branch of the trade with the authorities in all sections of the country

THREATENED NOVA SCOTIA CENSORSHIP NO LONGER A MENACE; REPRESENTATIVES MAKE PROTEST AGAINST OPENING OFFICES IN HALIFAX

NOVA SCOTIA, one of Canada's smallest provinces, decided that it must have its censorship trouble. Heretofore, Nova Scotia has done without a censor board for its films and the various exchanges have supplied the territory from their offices in New Brunswick, which in most cases were located in St. John.

However, at the last session of the Nova Scotian Legislature a bill was brought up, which asked that the film companies be forced to open offices in Halifax, the capital city of Nova Scotia and that a provincial censor board be appointed.

At the present time, when most of the branch exchanges of the various film companies are working at a loss, this measure naturally caused consternation among Canadian film men and so urgent did the matter seem, that the Canadian Universal Company dispatched F. R. Lennon, their assistant general manager, to the scene of action, to see if something could not be done to avert what would practically be a disaster, because the volume of business in Nova Scotia would not warrant the establishment of another office and might result in the withdrawal of the film companies from the entire Eastern territory.

Mr. Lennon, after his arrival in the East, proceeded to call together the film men and a strong meeting was held, at which it was decided to send a delegation to wait on the provincial government. This was done and the following gentlemen made up the delegation: Messrs. P. Kaufman, general manager of the Famous Players Company; F. R. Lennon, assistant general manager, Canadian Universal Film Company; C. A. Kerr, Mutual Film Company; E. A. Langely, representing Pathé; A. McArthur, General Film Company; G. A. Margetts, manager, St. John branch of the Canadian Universal Company, and Harry Price, Famous Players.

These gentlemen, representing the most powerful film companies in Canada and the investment of many hundreds of thousands of dollars in Canada, completely covered the matter with the provincial government; they suggested various amendments to the bill that would make it practicable and then invited the committee to a little banquet at which the decision was to be given.

When the details of the decision were made public it was found that the film men had won a very notable victory and that the committee, convinced of the truth in the arguments presented by the exchangers, had decided to adopt measures satisfactory to all.

In brief these measures are, that: The film exchanges shall pay the province of Nova Scotia a yearly tax of $200 for doing business in the province and that a censor fee shall be charged of one dollar on every film. It will not be necessary for any film exchange to open in Halifax.

Each exchange will appoint their first run customer to represent them at the censor board and this censor board agrees to take the ruling of any two provinces in Canada to govern themselves in regard to the reels to be shown in Nova Scotia.

That is, it is only in case of films which have not passed in two other provinces, that censoring will be necessary in Nova Scotia.

No city will be allowed to impose taxes on the film exchanges. There will be no censoring necessary on the present stock of reels in Nova Scotia. These decisions show clearly that the film men can receive their rights by strong, careful and united effort.

TEXAS CENSOR BOARD APPROVES FEDERAL BILL—OF COURSE!

Thirty-five subjects, or two per cent. of all films viewed by them, were rejected by the Houston, Texas, censor board, in the period from March 25, 1915, to the end of the year, according to the report of the board submitted last week.

A total of 1,640 permits issued, 360 eliminations, and 25 pictures totally thrown out, is the record of the censor board during its first nine months of operation.

The board in its report asks for office equipment in the future and goes on record as favoring the Hughes-Smith censorship bill now before the House Committee on Education in Washington.

KANSAS FURNISHES PROJECTION ROOM FOR CENSORS

The State of Kansas is to furnish a room in which films can be shown to the censors. Heretofore it has been necessary for the exchanges to send pictures to a theatre in Topeka in which the pictures were viewed by the censors, and the exchange was compelled to pay for this theatre.

A projection room is now being fitted up in the capitol building. It will be ready in the very near future.

EXHIBITORS IN ERIE, PA., FINED THROUGH CENSORS

As a result of the complaints and prosecutions of the state board of censors, a number of exhibitors in Erie, Pa., have been fined. It was on account of the censors' activities in that section.

A number of the exhibitors and exchangemen violated some of the minor laws of the organization, and as a result were called before an alderman and fines of various sizes levied upon them just to let them know that the state board was still doing business at the old stand.

According to a statement of one of the men fined, "It looked as though the state board needed the money and thought that Erie and Corry, Pa., could furnish it.

Many of the infractions of the rules came as a result of the exhibitors of that section getting their films from either Buffalo, N. Y., or from Cleveland, O., and many of the cuts ordered by the Pennsylvania board were not made by the board from Ohio or New York.

This was what caused the trouble, but the censors always looking to their own best interests were not satisfied with reprimands, but made the alderman levy fines in all cases.

DRASTIC CENSOR AMENDMENT IS PROPOSED IN NEW YORK

Assemblyman Frederick Ahern has introduced into the Albany Legislature a bill which amends the state boards and commissions law by creating a new article relating to moving pictures.

The bill establishes a state board of censors to consist of three members appointed by the governor with the consent of the senate. Their terms are fixed at six years, except in the case of the first appointees.

The board shall examine all moving picture films or reels, and approve such as shall be moral and proper, and shall disapprove such as are sacrilegious, obscene, indecent or immoral, and as shall tend to debase or corrupt the morals.

It is made the duty of every moving picture producer to furnish to the board, whenever required, a description of any moving picture, including a description of its scenes and purposes, and to display the same for examination.

Films unapproved by the board shall not be exhibited. An examination fee of two dollars and fifty cents is to be charged. Members of the board of censors will receive annual salaries of $5,000 each.

RAILROADS REFUSE TO CARRY FILMS OUT OF FRISCO UNLESS SENT BY EXPRESS

RAILWAY concerns doing business out of San Francisco, have issued notices to the effect that they will no longer carry motion picture films, unless these are sent by express and comply fully with the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission in regard to packing and marking.

This notice was served without warning and was to have gone into effect the first day of February, but concerted action on the part of moving picture interests induced the transportation companies to grant a postponement of thirty days.

As matters now stand exhibitors will be allowed to carry their films as in the past up to the first of March, but after that date they must be delivered to theatres by express companies and returned to the exchanges in the same way.

In the meantime the question will be taken up before the California Railroad Commission, and it is possible that film interests will be able to make such a showing that the carrying of films will be allowed, with certain restrictions.

Quite recently exchanges and exhibitors were put to considerable expense in providing metal carrying cases to comply with national regulations, and it is difficult to see how films can be carried with a greater degree of safety by any transportation or delivery company.

The argument presented by the railroads is that sparks from cigars or cigarettes are apt to ignite the films, and film interests meet this by asking why a simple order was not made prohibiting the carrying of films in the sections of trains and boats where smoking is allowed.

Both exhibitors and exchange interests are free in their accusations that the measure has been prompted by express interests and that the safety first idea is being used merely for effect.

Exhibitors in the following cities go to San Francisco for their films, carrying them to their houses: Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda, Elmhurst, San Leandro, Haywards, Mill Valley, San Rafael, Sausalito, Vallejo, Martinez, Crockett, Pleasanton, San Mateo, Burlingame, Sunnyvale, Palo Alto, Walnut Creek, Niles and Livermore.

Some of these places are within a thirty-minute ride of San Francisco, and most of them are less than twenty miles from the heart of the metropolis.

In speaking of the losses that would result to exchange interests in case this proposition became a standing rule, one prominent film exchange manager in San Francisco said:

"Under the present arrangement many of our productions are booked for twenty days out of thirty, but if deliveries have to be made by express in the territory that should properly be known as San Francisco, about twelve bookings are all that could be made with safety.

"Think of sending films by express to theatres within ten miles of our exchange, and which can be reached by a ten-cent car fare.

"Exhibitors declare that express charges, together with the higher prices that exchanges will be compelled to ask, will tend to force them out of business, especially the houses making frequent changes of program and securing films from a number of exchanges."

AUTHORITIES IN MORRISTOWN, N. J., KILL COURT ORDER PERMITTING SHOWING OF "NATION"

THE fact that the New Jersey Court of Chancery has twice enjoined police departments of cities from interfering with the production of "The Birth of a Nation" has not proved of sufficient reason to prevent the board of aldermen of a New Jersey city from putting a ban on the exhibition of the film in a municipality they are supposed to represent.

The action of Morristown's board of aldermen sets a precedent in New Jersey, inasmuch as it gives to the state something new in the line of a board of motion picture censors.

James J. Lyons, manager of the Park theatre of Morristown, has said that he had booked "The Birth of a Nation" for a two weeks' run, commencing the early part of March.

The display of his first advertising paper was accompanied by the usual protests from a delegation of the city's representative colored citizens.

Three colored residents, calling themselves a "committee," visited the chief of police, but were dismissed with the reminder that the highest courts of New Jersey had declared police intervention with the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in New Jersey was illegal.

The "committee" then sought the aid of Mayor Clifford Mills, who also would do nothing at variance with the decisions of the Court of Chancery. The next day, however, an obliging alderman was found who agreed to father a resolution that would keep the film from being shown in Morristown.

During the debate that followed the sponsors of the resolution announced that more than 1,300 colored residents of Morristown had signed the petition urging the aldermen to take action.

Inasmuch as there are less than 400 negro residents in Morristown, it was immediately brought out that most all of them must have signed the petition three or four times apiece.

Mr. Lyons, who sought a restraining order, says he is positive that neither the police nor the board of aldermen has jurisdiction under any statute to prohibit the showing. He declares the aldermen's action was purely political and said the petition did not even represent the real feelings of the few who make up Morristown's negro population.

The Park theatre is a new structure, completed only a few months ago at a cost of $150,000.

INDIANA EXHIBITOR FREE FROM SUNDAY OPENING CHARGE

On motion of Prosecutor Roy Street the case of Michael Rubinoff, charged with operating a motion picture theatre at Lafayette, Ind., on Sunday, was dismissed in the Circuit Court, February 7, by Charles A. Burnett, judge pro tem.

The case was taken to the Circuit Court after a jury in the city court failed to agree. The defense contended that the defendant could not be convicted of pursuing his usual avocation on Sunday, as he was a Hebrew and observed the seventh day as his Sabbath.

The prosecutor's motion was as follows: "The undersigned prosecuting attorney for the State of Indiana requests to have the above entitled cause dismissed for the reason that the State of Indiana, upon trial of said cause, would be unable to establish without a reasonable doubt the guilt of the defendant, because of the fact that the defendant is an orthodox Hebrew."

Mayor Bauer, of Lafayette, says that the matter is unsettled and he will see that the law is enforced. Superintendent of Police Powell declares he will arrest any person who opens an amusement house on Sunday.

Several attempts have been made to open motion picture theatres in Lafayette on Sunday and the outcome of the present controversy is being awaited with much interest by other proprietors of theatres in Lafayette and the northern part of Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS THEATRE WINS RIGHT TO BUILD AWNING ON SIDEWALK

Judge Vincent G. Clifford, of the superior court, Room 4, Indianapolis, has ruled that Barton and Olsen, proprietors of the Alhambra theatre have a right to build a metal awning in front of the theatre in West Washington street.

The city refused to give a permit for the building of the awning and Barton and Olsen filed suit against the city seeking to enjoin them from preventing the construction of the awning.

The city legal department has announced that an appeal will be taken from Judge Clifford's decision to the supreme court.

Since Mayor Bell has taken office, it has been the policy of the administartion to refuse permission for the construction of such awnings, although it is said there is a city ordinance which permits the construction of awnings.

Woodburn Masson, a member of the legal department who is engaged in codifying the city ordinances, says that if the decision of Judge Clifford stands it will permit the indiscriminate construction of canopies across the sidewalks in the downtown district.

CURFEW LAW FOR CHILDREN AT THEATRES IN PADUCAH, KENTUCKY

A curfew law has gone into effect at Paducah, Ky., requiring children under seventeen years of age to be off the streets at 8 p. m.

The ordinance provides, however, that children under that age may attend motion picture theatres with the permission of their parents.

Film News From Foreign Parts

Entertainments Given by Officials Held in Kinemas

Special to Motion Picture News

Paris, Feb. 1.

AN event of special interest to the British colony in Paris took place Thursday, January 20, when an Anglo-French gala matinee was given at the Gaumont Palace, the proceeds of which were given to the French Red Cross for its hospital at Salonica.

The British ambassador was the patron of this matinee, and permission was obtained from the authorities for the band of the Grenadier Guards, which were returning to England from the front, to take part in the program.

This, of course, was a real treat, as it was the first time Parisians have had an opportunity to hear this famous band.

It is well worth noticing that since the last two or three years, if a special soirée or matinee is to be given, it is always at one of our kinemas that the official entertainments are given.

The beginning of the performance was fixed for 2:30 p. m. and, notwithstanding that this huge Palace accommodates 6,000 people at two not a single seat, nor even standing room, was available.

The place was beautifully decorated; all the boxes were occupied by English and well-known American residents in Paris. At 2:30 sharp the ambassador made his appearance and the orchestra started with "God Save the King."

The first picture shown was Gaumont's "Les Poilus de la Revanche." It is a story of the war, and one of the very best made by this firm since the beginning of the war.

Eyes Caught by Hands and Feet

The next one was a rather amusing one call "Des Pieds et des Mains." From the beginning to the end of the film nothing but hands and feet of the artists are seen.

After a chronochrome picture of Gaumont the band of the Grenadier Guards appeared on the stage and the reception accorded to them surpassed anything I have ever seen. The stage was covered with flowers. For more than ten minutes they were saluting and it was evident that they were greatly moved by the enthusiastic reception.

Last Friday M. Mary, one of our film dealers, invited us to a special showing given at the Barbes Palace of "La Dame aux Camélias," made this time by a well-known Italian firm, with Mme. Bertini as Marguerite Gauthier.

The film was very well received by the audience. No doubt it is a fine picture. The dresses of Mme. Bertini were greatly admired by the ladies present. They are, in fact, most elaborate and very chic. I am told they cost 50,000 francs.

"Cabiria" is still drawing large audiences to the Vaudeville. The next film to be shown at this theatre will be "Maciste."

It is well known that in France every place of amusement has to pay ten per cent. of the gross takings to a so-called "Society of Poor Rates."

This society has one of their men at every theatre, kinema or others to control the receipts and every year the takings are published by this society.

A list just out shows that the gross receipts of the kinemas in 1914 have been far ahead of any expectations. They reached over eight millions of francs in spite of the kinemas having closed their doors at the beginning of the war in August and did not open until last December.

This, as seen, is most satisfactory and it shows that the kinemas are more than ever in great favor with the general public.

The list is headed by the Gaumont Palace with 1,300,000 francs, next comes the Tivoli with 700,000 francs, Omnia Pathé with 600,000, and Pathé Palace with 600,000 francs.

Pictures of Anglo-French Front

Films of the Anglo-French front at the Balkans have reached Paris and were shown last week for the first time. Some of them are very interesting, as, for instance, "La Retraite de Guevgueli."

For the first time also pictures taken at the front in France occupied by the British army have been shown this week, and are going very big.

For the first time a film has run for two weeks at a kinema on the main Boulevards. This is the case with "Alsace" kept for a second week on the program of the Omnia Pathé.

I have heard of a certain Mr. Despinoy having opened an office called "Kinema Exchange" and as I was told that this gentleman had never been in the kinema trade before, I went to see him to find out what was Mr. Despinoy's intention in opening such offices.

Here is what I was told: "I know that a great many films made in America, England and some other countries are never shown in Paris.

"I have seen many films advertised in Motion Picture News which never reach our country. I am told that foreign manufacturers refuse to send their films without sufficient guarantees.

"I have secured the services of people who have been in the business ever since the kinema begun, and we are ready to buy any good films from any country.

"We will give any guarantee that may be required, and this I expect will facilitate the transaction of business."

I have no doubt that the services of the Kinema Exchange will be greatly appreciated by the film traders in the different countries who will avail themselves of the opportunity it offers.

English Visitor, Owner 40 Theatres

I have had the pleasure of meeting M. Hyman, manager of a London firm, which has over forty kinema theatres in Great Britain.

He came over with the well-known film, "The Man Who Stayed at Home," intending to dispose of the French rights to the picture.

No better testimony as to the greatness of the kinema could be got than the one just given by a woman 102 years of age. She was requested to say which was the greatest invention during her lifetime, and she answered without a moment's resitation "the kinema."

HENRY B. WALTHALL WINS POPULARITY CONTEST IN AUSTRALIA; FEATURES IN DEMAND

Sydney, N. S. W., Jan. 15.

FEATURE pictures were in demand during Christmas week. The larger theaters revived past successes, some of which included "Cabiria," "Hypocrites," "Joseph and His Brethren."

Standing room only was the order at West's enormous Glaciarium where "Cabiria" was shown, even though higher prices than usual were charged.

The lowest being 6d. (12 cents) and up to 2s. (48 cents). Suitable orchestral accompaniments made this spectacular photoplay an enormous success.

The volcanic scene was the center of a number of arguments as to whether it was really what it was represented to be.

In my opinion "Cabiria" would have been much more enjoyable if the wonderful effects of the first four reels had formed the climax of the film.

"Hypocrites" concluded its successful run at the Palace theatre (which has now returned to the "legit") and this wonderful production is now going the circuit of the leading suburban shows.

"The Clutching Hand" has given place to "The New Exploits of Elaine" at the SCENES FROM "OUTWITTED" (Thanhouser), "PERKINS' PEACE PARTY," AND "RUTH'S REMARKABLE RECEPTION" (Falstaff), RELEASED THIS MONTH ON THE MUTUAL PROGRAM

Empress, and judging by the expectant crowds waiting for admission on the opening night it is likely to prove as great a success as its predecessor.

Essanay Swamping Theatres

In my last letter I complained of the temporary absence of Essanay features and since then this brand of plays has been "swamping" the shows. "Temper" and "The Woman Hater," with Henry Walthall, were followed by the "Circular Path." Chaplin's "Night in the Show" ran for two weeks at three of the leading photoplay houses in Sydney, which certainly proves (1) that Sydney picturegoers like comedy and (2) that Waddington, Ltd., who put on the film know their business.

Marguerite Clark proves the best box office attraction of Famous Players.

"The Dawn of a Tomorrow" will be the next Paramount to be shown here beginning next Monday, following "Stolen Goods" which is the first appearance here of Blanche Sweet in a feature since she joined Lasky.

Sydney will be overcrowded with photoplay houses if the present building boom continues. The Piccadilly was opened last month.

The Australian will begin screening this month and two more are about to be erected, all in the very heart of the city.

The legitimate theatres are beginning to feet the strain now—what will they be like in the future?

"The Truth Wagon" at the Piccadilly last week proved an acceptable comedy. "In Mizzoura" is announced for this week-end.

Equitable Pictures Make Hit

The Equitable productions made their appearance at the Crystal Palace this last two weeks.

"Divorced" was a success mainly because the Australian favorite Hilda Spong played the lead. "Should a Wife Forgive?" also proved popular.

"Bred in the Bone," M. M. P.; "Fairy and the Way," World; "Morals of Marcus," Paramount—these were some of the best features shown recently.

"Twin Beds," the three-act farce being staged at the Criterion theatre, Sydney, has as its stars Hale Hamilton and Myrtle Tannehill who have appeared in Keystone and Kalem productions in the States.

The rumor that J. L. Williamson, Ltd., had produced some of their stage successes in films has been officially confirmed by their advertisement announcing that they will shortly release the following: "Get Rich Quick Wallingford" (Niblo); "Officer 666" (Fred Niblo), and "Within the Law" (Muriel Starr).

They also announce that they have the Williamson submarine pictures ready. These, I believe, were issued in the U. S. A. by Universal some time back.

Louise Carbasse and Digby Bell

I notice by the latest Universal releases that Miss Louise Carbasse is appearing in a feature with Digby Bell for that company. This is, I believe, the same artist who appeared in pictures for the Australian Photoplay Company several years back.

In the photoplay song "When I Dream of Annie Laurie," by the Treble-Clef, I noticed a face very much like Billy Quirk, late of Vitagraph.

One of the most popular of the actors at present is Robert Warwick, being especially well liked in "Alias Jimmy Valentine" and "The Man Who Found Himself."

"My Old Dutch" Appeals

"My Old Dutch" began its initial screening at the Crystal Palace this morning.

A generous amount of advertising together with the reputation of the song will guarantee a good audience, exclusive of the fact that it is a remarkably good story capably acted.

Albert Chevalier is well known to Sydney audiences through his wonderful impersonation of the inventor in "The Middleman" (London film).

At the present time the motion picture theatre proprietors are indulging in a large amount of newspaper advertising, both in daily and Sunday editions, more particularly in the latter.

An announcement in the papers today is to the effect that Waddingtons, Ltd., who control three up-to-date houses in the city; viz., the Globe, Grand and Majestic, have taken over the management of the Strand.

The Strand has been screening the World Film productions. Waddingtons announce that they will open the theatre under the new management by presenting "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," with Mary Pickford.

The popularity contest conducted by the Mirror newspaper has closed with the following artists proclaimed the winners: Henry B. Walthall, 1; Maurice Costello, 2; Harold Lockwood, 3; Mary Pickford, 1; Marguerite Clark, 2; Charles Chaplin, 1, and Mabel Normand, 1.

Chaplin and Normand lead from their nearest competitors by a margin of nearly 2,000 votes. Walthall and Pickford won by about one hundred votes.

KLEINE'S WATSON COMEDIES MAKE HIT

"The Mishaps of Musty Suffer," a series of ten one-reel comedies, featuring Harry Watson, Jr., of Bickel and Watson, which George Kleine is offering, a list of better class theatres for exclusive advance of release date showings, has more than lived up to the expectations of the manufacturer.

Already a considerable number of the most representative houses in America are playing the series, the list including the Strand and Biltmore, New York; the Scollay Square and Gordon Olympia, of Boston; Kunsky's circuit of beautiful Detroit houses; Alfred Hamburgher's Chicago circuit; the Strand at Hartford, Conn.; the Tabor Grand at Denver, and many other theatres.

THIS FINE ARTS CERTAINLY HAS WINNING TITLE

The recent subject made at the Eastern studio of the Fine Arts Company with Douglas Fairbanks, supported by Dorothy West, George Fawcett, Macy Arlein, George Backus and others by Alan Dwan, has been named "Laugh and the World Laughs With You."

The scenario for this was written by Shannon Fife, well known script author.

"MARY PAGE" IS GREATER SUCCESS THAN ESSANAY EXPECTED

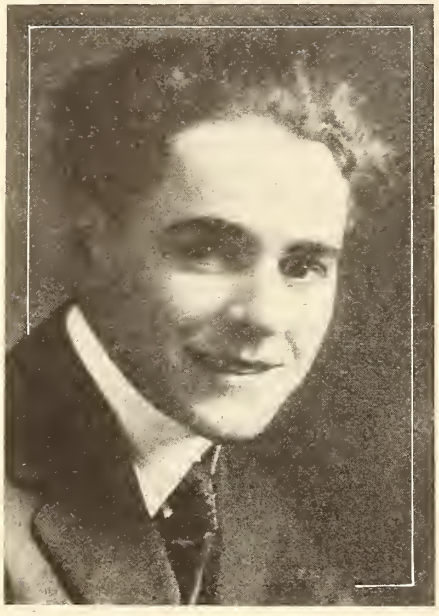
The Essanay company reports that its fifteen episode series, "The Strange Case of Mary Page," with Henry Walthall, Edna Mayo and gowns by Lucile (Lady Duff Gordon) is even a greater success than they hoped for.

It has been necessary to increase the staff in the Essanay laboratories in order to supply the necessary prints of the episodes.

WEBSTER CAMPBELL WORKING IN A VITAGRAPH THREE-REELER

Webster Campbell is one of the latest members of the Vitagraph stock company and is now in pictures at the Hollywood studios. He started his stage career as a member of a stock company at Kansas City and then traveled with a road company to the Pacific Coast.

The show which he was in closed in Los Angeles. He was engaged by the Vitagraph company and in their films has attained distinction as a screen player of ability.



WEBSTER CAMPBELL

He is also a scenario writer and has sold over twenty scripts.

He has appeared in "He Got Himself a Wife," "Bittersweet," "The Hoyden," "Pansy's Papas," and is now working in a three-reeler soon to be released.

NEGATIVE RECEIVED BY SELIG SHOW CONDITIONS IN POLAND

Negative recently received by the Selig Polyscope Company, of Chicago, Ill., from battlefields in Poland, is said to show true conditions in that war-torn, unfortunate country.

These war films will be in readiness for release in about two weeks. There are four or five thousand feet of perfect film which presents almost every detail of war's devastation.

The starving population, including the grief-stricken women and little ones, the marching columns, scenes along the lines of battle, these and many others are vividly pictured.

Leaders among Polish societies in the United States working to alleviate suffering among their countrymen and women in Poland, have expressed great interest in these latest war films.

HARMON BUYS STUDIO SITE FOR MIRROR

Clifford B. Harmon, president of Mirror Films, Inc., has closed a deal with the Glendale Development Company whereby the new film organization acquires a large piece of land adjoining the present studio plant of the company at Myrtle and Martin avenues, in Glendale, Long Island.

It is the intention of the company to build a modern motion picture city there, and the property just purchased will be used by the company in addition to the grounds on which the studio plant now stands. The transaction is said to have involved about $150,000.

The purchase makes the Mirror owner of property running from Martin avenue to Louisa place, thence to Union avenue and thence to the Rockaway branch of the Long Island Railroad which skirts it for a distance of 712 feet.

A station for the accommodation of the Mirror studio people will probably be built.

SECOND CO-STARRING MEDIUM OF CLEO RIDGELY AND REID FOR LASKY

Following her recent success as co-star with Wallace Reid in the Lasky production, "The Golden Chance," a Paramount picture, Cleo Ridgely, it was announced by the Lasky Feature Play Company this week, is already at work in a second production in which she and Mr. Reid will appear as co-stars.

CLEO RIDGELEY

The photoplay is entitled "Behind the Mask," by Cecil B. De Mille and Jeannie MacPherson, and the producer is Paul Dickey, the famous dramatist and stage director, who recently joined the Lasky producing force.

"ONE DAY," MOSS, FOR STATE RIGHTS

The B. S. Moss Film Corporation announces the forthcoming release of "One Day," a sequel to "Three Weeks," from the novel by Elinor Glynn.

This company, of which B. S. Moss is the president and active head recently released "The Salamander," a photoplay version of Owen Johnson's novel. It is understood "One Day" will be disposed of on the state rights plan.

ILLINOIS LEAGUE ELECTS OFFICERS

At the regular meeting of the International Moving Picture Exhibitors League of Illinois, held in the Masonic Temple Building, on Friday noon, February 4, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: President, George Henry; vice-president, John H. Freundt; treasurer, William J. Sweeney; secretary, Sidney Smith; sergeant-at-arms, A. Balaban. The last three officers were re-elected.

The following members comprise the new executive committee: Fred Hartman, George M. Laing, August Zilligan, Julius A. Alcock, H. Lieberthal, M. A. Choyinisky, and M. S. Johnson. A chairman will be selected later by these committeemen.

Frank Rembusch, president of the Mirror Screen Company, and president of the Indiana Exhibitors' League, was a guest of the Illinois organization.

WILMUTH MERKYL PICKED AS LEAD FOR PETROVA BY METRO

Wilumuth Merkyl, regarded as one of the foremost of the younger leading men of the stage or screen, has been engaged by Metro and will make his bow under Metro auspices in "The Soul Market," in which Mme. Petrova is starred.

This is an original story, written by Aaron Hoffman, the well-known playwright and author.

Mr. Merkyl had a long and varied career in grand opera and on the speaking stage, before he went into motion pictures. He was recently starred in "The Fortunate Youth," and before that was leading man for Helen Ware, in "The Price," Betty Nansen in "The Celebrated Scandal," Marguerite Clark, in "Gretna Green," and other notable productions.

WILMUTH MERKYL

Mr. Merkyl made his professional debut in grand opera at the Royal Opera House in Berlin, and since adopting the stage has appeared all over the world, playing in several languages.

He has appeared in India, China, Japan, South Africa, England, Australia and in Canada and the States. He had the leading male singing role in "Adele," and appeared with Hazel Dawn in light musical comedy.

Lincoln Is Experienced Stage and Screen Star

Leading Man for Lubin, Who Began in a Stock Company, Generally Recognized as Being the Best Training School for a Player, Was Associated With Broadway Successes Put on by Road Companies in Many Parts of the Country

E. K. LINCOLN, leading man for the Lubin Company, brings to his new affiliations a varied experience as a screen and stage player.

Mr. Lincoln served a difficult and protracted apprenticeship behind the footlights, before he entered the silent drama.

He began in what is generally recognized as the best training school for the stage—the stock company, appearing in successive seasons with companies in Johnstown, Pa., Paterson, N. J., Columbus, Ohio, Zanesville, Ohio, Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

He then went into a wider legitimate field, and became associated with Broadway successes presented by road companies in many parts of the country. He was leading man in such plays as "Over Night," "The Virginian," "Graustark," "The Squaw Man," and others, becoming known of course to theatregoers in a variety of cities.

Years of painstaking work built up a reputation which Mr. Lincoln put to excellent advantage when he decided to go to the screen.

When he forsook the stage, he became associated first with the Vitagraph Company. He was featured in many of their most important photodramas and played the leading part in "A Million Bid," the photoplay that signalized the opening of the Vitagraph theatre on Broadway.

In "Littlest Rebel"

Subsequently, he appeared in the Photoplay Production Company's version of "The Littlest Rebel," which was also one of the most popular footlight dramas of recent years.

His interpretation of the role of Hero brought him considerable screen popularity. Besides appearing in the leading role, Mr. Lincoln gave material assistance in working out details of the picture.

Some of his other conspicuous successes on the screen were: "The Call," "The Wood Violet," "Shadows of the Past," "The Wreck," "The Girl from Alaska," and "The Fighting Chance."

But Mr. Lincoln's screen affiliations are not confined to his work as a leading man and star. He has an office in New York City, where the E. K. Lincoln Players, Inc., has its headquarters. In addition he owns two modern studios, one located at Grantwood, New Jersey, and the other in Blandford, Massachusetts. Mr. Lincoln is so thoroughly acquainted with the producing end of the business, as well as the acting end.

Despite his varied interests, and his work in his present capacity as leading man for Lubin for whom he is enacting a number of important roles, Mr. Lincoln finds time for a number of diversions.

He is, among other things, an all around athlete, and his athletic accomplishments he finds valuable in his screen work.

He is six feet in height, and weighs 185 pounds—a physique which enables him to undertake successively "heroic" parts, and those which call forth abilities of an athlete.

His recreations consist of motoring, horsemanship, and other forms of outdoor sport, but his principal hobby, perhaps, is the training and ambition of show dogs.

He owns the Greenacre kennels, from which a number of prize winners have issued.

Mr. Lincoln, by reason of his long connection with stage and screen, is the possessor of a wide circle of admirers among followers of the photo-dramatic art, and has a large number of personal friends both in and out of his profession who have learned not only to appreciate his talents, but who also have conceived a high regard for his social qualities—another evidence of his popularity.

As a supplement to this issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS you will find an excellent likeness of this Lubin star.

Southern Gaumont Companies Please Bradford

General Manager, in New York from Trip to Jacksonville, Fla., Reports Activity on Five Reel Features for Release as Mutual Masterpictures

AFTER a month spent at the Jacksonville, Fla., winter studios, F. G. Bradford, general manager of the Gaumont company in America, has returned to New York.

Mr. Bradford reports that the Gaumont companies are all busy making five-reel features for release as Mutual Masterpictures.

During his visit the companies have been strengthened by additional players. Before returning to New York he was able to see three new productions in work.

"The work in Jacksonville was so interesting that I hated to come North," said Mr. Bradford at the Flushing studio of the Gaumont company in discussing the activities of Gaumont stock companies in the South.

"I consider one of the most enjoyable events of my visit to be the witnessing of the filming of the final scenes of 'The Dead Alive.'

"Since this is the first Gaumont release in which Marguerite Courtot is starred, naturally I took a great interest in the production.

"Both the photoplay and Miss Courtot have lived up to my expectations in every way.

"Miss Courtot is of French descent, and French is the language used in her home. A former Gaumont director, himself a Frenchman, is now with us. Naturally, he was assigned to direct Miss Courtot.

"This is Henry J. Vernot. Not only did he direct Miss Courtot, but before that he wrote the scenario himself with his little star in mind.

"While I was at the Jacksonville studios Mildred Gregory began 'According to Law,' under the direction of Richard Garrick. Howard Hall was brought especially from New York to play opposite her.

"On the way North I have talked with exhibitors in several towns, and outlined to them the story of 'According to Law.' They became as enthusiastic over it as I am myself.

"Another photoplay which I saw started was 'The Haunted Manor.' Here is a production that certainly will maintain the Gaumont prestige. It has a number of scenes in East India at the court of a wealthy and powerful rajah or native ruler.

"Edwin Middleton, who directs it as his first Mutual Masterpicture, not only has studied the life thoroughly, but he is being aided by the head of a band of East Indians who are wintering with a circus near the studio.

"From the circus elephants, lions and tigers have been secured, and with these as local color the spectator will certainly not be able to complain that he is not seeing India as it really is.

"Iva Shepard, who received unmeasured praise from critics who saw her in 'The Drifter,' is starred in this five-reel feature. She appears as an American adventuress with whom the rajah is infatuated.

"The scene ultimately shifts to America. For these scenes the players go to St. Augustine for settings amid the fashionable surroundings of the winter colony."

HERRINGTON TO SPEAK IN ALTOONA, PA.

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 12.

Fred J. Herrington, national president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, has been asked to deliver an address before the Chamber of Commerce of Altoona, Pa., and has accepted the invitation.

He will deliver his address on the evening of March 9, and will take for his subject "The Growth of the Motion Picture and Newspaper and Its Effect Upon the Community."

There has been no mention regarding any statement about state censorship, but it is understood that President Herrington will have plenty to tell the Altoona business men regarding that phase of the industry.

Mr. Herrington is against the state board, it is said, and never overlooks a chance to tell of the shortcomings of that organization and the thorns they throw in the paths of the motion picture men in that state.

He has been a missionary on this subject for many months, and should anything be done to get the next legislature to repeal the law it will be due to the large amount of work done by Mr. Herrington all over the state.

LUCILLE STEWART A VITAGRAPH LEADING WOMAN

Lucille Stewart has been selected as the new leading woman for Ralph W. Ince in the Brightwaters studio of the Vitagraph company. She is at present working in a five-reeler, written by James Oliver Curwood.

Miss Stewart was born at Sheepshead Bay, N. Y., and was well known locally as a choir singer, trained under the direction of Mrs. Mary Gunning, mother of Louise Gunning, comic opera star.

She appeared in amateur theatricals and later entered vaudeville. After working in several other companies, Miss Stewart entered the employ of the Vitagraph and was sent to the British West Indies, under the direction of Henri St. Lupe.

Her best work up to the present time is as the society woman in "The Sins of the Mothers," in which Anita Stewart and Earle Williams are featured.

In the new production which Ince is filming, Miss Stewart's gowns will be not an inconsiderable attraction. Supporting her in the cast are Huntley Gordon and John Robertson.

Industry Opens Generous Hand for Actors' Fund

Motion Picture Interests Will Contribute Toward Million-Dollar Campaign $500,000 and May 15 Is Designated National Tribute Day, When Exhibitors Will Aid

THE motion picture industry has decided to contribute $500,000 toward the million-dollar campaign for the endowment of the Actors' Fund. At an executive meeting it was decided that Monday, May 15, be designated as the National Tribute Day on which motion picture theatre managers, exhibitors and those who control theatres giving vaudeville and pictures all over the United States, would be requested to contribute to the fund a percentage of their receipts, and every artist and every employee in the film industry be petitioned to give an optional donation.

Announcement of this has just been made by Samuel Goldfish, chairman of the motion picture campaign.

In a year and at a time when numerous appeals for charitable funds are being made upon the public, it is confidently hoped that the motion picture campaign by the very extent of its scope and the whirlwind methods of its propaganda and collection will establish a new record in the long history of American benefactions.

Some weeks ago the Actors' Fund of America launched a movement to raise a million dollars to establish a permanent endowment from the interest of which all expenses of the big charity could be met.

The endowment also would forever remove the Actors' Fund from the necessity of appeals to the public for support.

Because of the great expansion of the motion picture industry and the entrance of thousands of players of the legitimate and musical comedy stages into the film world there has been expressed a desire on the part of those prominent in the motion picture industry to help the Actors' Fund.

The directors of the Actors' Fund requested Samuel Goldfish, executive head of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, who is one of the younger and most successful men in the industry, to head the motion picture campaign.

Plans just announced embrace a national appeal to the public through the twenty thousand motion picture theatres of the United States and to many thousands of persons employed or interested in every branch of the industry.

In consummating these elaborate arrangements Mr. Goldfish has had the cooperation of every leading man in the industry.

In addition to the general committee of which Thomas A. Edison is honorary chairman, the campaign will be intimately directed by executive committee and finance composed of Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, treasurer; Arthur H. Spiegel, J. W. Binder, J. E. Brulatour, William A. Johnston, John Wylie, Mitchell Mark, George Kleine, J. A. Berst, W. W. Hodkinson, Marcus Loew, and Adolph Zukor.

Mayor Mitchel has consented to serve on the board of honorary directors.

In its general outline the motion picture campaign will be conducted through the great net-work of distributing forces which are at command of the principal selling agencies of the industry.

Literature will be sent to every exhibitor in the United States, together with lantern slides and circulars to be given away to the public.

"Motion Picture Day of the Actors' Fund" will be nationally observed and by increasing to an appreciable degree the receipts of all motion picture theatres on that day it is the scheme of the committee to exact a small percentage of the day's revenues.

Selig Cameraman Braves Wilderness for Picture

Lockwood Represents Himself as a Timber Cruiser to Escape Vigilance of Railroad Officials in Effort to Get Film of Snowslide Wreck at Corea, Washington

THE hardships undergone to secure film features is graphically related by E. B. Lockwood, a member of the staff of cameramen of the Selig-Tribune, in a letter received in the general offices of the Selig Polyscope Company, Chicago.

Lockwood secured the only pictures taken by any motion picture operator of the snow slide on the Great Northern railroad near Corea, Wash.

This snowslide cost the lives of four persons and three coaches were almost completely buried in the avalanche. Exclusive pictures of the catastrope appear in Selig-Tribune, No. 11 released February 7. Lockwood writes:

"I had an idea that the cameramen would not be welcomed with open arms and when our train reached Skykomish, I quietly dropped off the side of the train away from the station and cached my camera. I then went to the hotel and posed as a timber cruiser.

"There I became acquainted with a pool room proprietor and, through his assistance and that of a Seattle newspaperman, I was able to get a guide and two packers.

"Knowing that we would not be allowed to reach the scene of the wreck over the right of way, we took the trail overland leaving Skykomish at four in the morning.

"We had only three pairs of snowshoes and, as I was the lightest and carrying only the grub I did without them. The snow was about eight feet deep on the level and we expected to make the eleven miles to Scenic, Wash., by three o'clock Monday afternoon.

"As a matter of fact, we did not reach Scenic until 6 o'clock and our grub was all gone. At one place near Scenic we crossed a big slide, and it took us just forty-five minutes to make seventy-five feet.

"Reaching Scenic I again posed as a lumber cruiser and was able to deceive the railway officials and the detectives who were in the hotel there to prevent cameramen from getting pictures.

"Tuesday morning we left early for the scene of the wreck, and on the way I struck a bad spot and was carried 250 feet down the mountain before I was able to grab a sapling and stop my progress.

"Later I fell into a hole in the honeycombed snow and was rescued by the packers.

"We reached the scene of the accident at 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and I made my first set-up 300 yards from the scene of the accident.

"Between this point and 200 feet of the wreck I made four pictures, and each time it was necessary to knock down, pack, carry and then set up the machine. The last picture was made about two hundred feet from the wreck and just off the right of way."

A REMARKABLE ISSUE, SAYS HORSLEY

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 3.

Motion Picture News,
427 S. Figueroa St.,
Los Angeles, Cal.

Gentlemen:—

Please accept my congratulations on your Studio Directory Number.

This is the most remarkable issue of a motion picture trade journal to date and will undoubtedly be treasured by everyone affiliated with the motion picture art.

I do not look for it to be excelled until your next issue, which will have to be a wonder indeed if it exceeds the beauty, convenience and taste displayed in the getting up of this number.

Sincerely yours,
DAVID HORSLEY.

IDA SCHNALL MAKES PERSONAL APPEARANCE WITH "UNDINE"

During the showing of "Undine," the Bluebird Photoplay in which Ida Schnall is featured, at the Moss and Brill theatres in New York, Miss Schnall will supplement the films with personal appearances on the stage of the various theatres in a vaudeville stunt.

She will exhibit herself in demonstrations of physical culture, while her personal manager, M. B. Haas, lectures to the audiences on the benefits of swimming.

JACQUES EARL ABRAMS ON ROAD FOR KNICKERBOCKER

Jacques Earl Abrams, who is traveling throughout the Middle West, representing the Knickerbocker Star Features and the Vim Comedies, is an "all-round man" in the film business, having been an exhibitor.

JACQUES E. ABRAMS

writer and actor before becoming the general representative of the Knickerbocker company.

He is reporting good things from the West, and the Knickerbocker Star Features bespeaks for him a good reception among exhibitors and exchange men.

"Corner in Cotton" Ready from Metro Next Week

Five Reel Feature, an Extra Release, Produced by the Quality Pictures Company, and Featuring Marguerite Snow, Shows Business Battle Between Money Kings

"A CORNER IN COTTON," with Marguerite Snow in the stellar role, and an all-star cast, will be released on the Metro program during the week of February 21.

This five-part production is an extra release for Metro for that week, as "The Price of Malice," a Rolfe-Metro picture, starring Hamilton Revelle, will also go out on the Metro program at the same time.

"A Corner in Cotton," which was produced by the Quality Pictures Corporation, deals with the story of the daughter of a Wall Street broker, who becomes interested in settlement work.

She learns of conditions among the poor cotton mill employes in the Southland, and goes there to learn conditions at first hand.

She obtains a position in the mill, and her singular beauty attracts the attention of the foreman, who attempts to force his attentions upon her.

She is rescued by the son of the owner of the mill, and a strong friendship develops between them. The owner of the mill is the sworn enemy of the girl's father, whom he characterizes as "The Wolf of Wall Street."

When the broker learns of this, he attempts to ruin the Southern planter, by forcing a corner in cotton on the Exchange.

The girl breaks this corner and succeeds in bringing the two men together, with a better understanding of themselves and of the conditions under which they live.

This bond is further strengthened when the son and daughter of the two men announce their engagement.

Beside Miss Snow, the cast includes Frank Bacon, Helen Dunbar, John W. Goldsworthy, Lester Cuneo, Zella Call, Wilfred Roger, Howard Truesdell and William Clifford. "A Corner in Cotton" was produced under the direction of Fred J. Balshofer.

"The Soul Market," a five-part Metro picture, produced by the Popular Plays and Players, with Mme. Petrova in the stellar role, will be released on the Metro program February 28.

The story deals with a musical comedy prima donna, who becomes weary of the methods of wealthy men who barter with young girls of the stage, tempting them with a life of luxury and ease.

The prima donna views the theatre and the high life attending as being a "soul market," where young girls are bought and sold the same as they were in the days of ancient Babylon.

She is brought to this realization when she is about to give herself over to a man of wealth, rather than marry the young man she loves.

There are many striking scenes in this production, including an allegory showing a Babylonian slave market where girls were sold to the highest bidder. The scenes in and around the theatre were made at the Princess theatre, New York City.

Chorus girls from the Hippodrome were used in the ballet scenes, and a score of beautiful show girls from "Stop! Look! and Listen!" appear in the restaurant scenes. These were photographed in Murray's restaurant, in West Forty-second street.

In addition to Mme. Petrova, the supporting cast includes Arthur Hoops, Wilmuth Merkyl, Gypsy O'Brien, Evelyn Brent, Fritz de Lint, Fraunie Fraunholz, and other well-known stage and screen artists. The production was directed by Francis J. Grandon.

Eleven Companies Working on Keystone Comedies

Mack Sennett's "Laughmaking Workshop" Is in a State of Overtime Turning Out Pictures from Scenarios by Hampton Del Ruth and His Associates

MACK SENNETT has found it necessary to work his Keystone comedy factory overtime in order to keep up with the demand for his hilarious contributions to the Triangle program.

The director general now has eleven complete companies working, including the Mabel Normand-Roscoe Arbuckle combination at the Eastern Keystone studio.

Hampton Del Ruth, his managing editor, is driving Jean Havez and his associates in the scenario department at top speed.

"Fatty" and Mabel have already completed "He Did and He Didn't," in and around New York, and are now busily engaged on a new Keystone that bears the working title of "The Lure of Broadway."

Mabel is a country girl, made prisoner in a Bowery dive. Her rescue is finally accomplished after a thrilling gang fight.

William Collier's first Keystone, "Better Late Than Never," in which he has the support of Mae Busch, is scheduled for early release.

Fred Mace is working on a story that concerns an oil well that is expected to be a hilarity gusher. Ford Sterling has finished "shooting" scenes on the roof of a Los Angeles skyscraper.

Harry Gribbon and Mack Swain are extracting laughs from a scenario that makes fun out of the instalment plan of acquiring a home and its furnishings.

Louise Fazenda and Harry Booker, "Dear Old Dad," are chafing in their combination of the enthusiasm of youth and experience for more opportunities to exhibit their talents for laughmaking.

DeWolf Hopper has finished "Sunshine Dad," his second Triangle-Fine Arts story, and is to appear soon in another American comedy, called "The Philanthropist."

David W. Griffith is so pleased with the combination that filmed "Don Quixote" that he is retaining the principal members for "The Philanthropist."

Edward Dillon will again be the director, Fay Tincher the foil for the huge comedian, and Max Davidson will have an important role.

So many reports have been published about Constance Collier in connection with various film and legitimate enterprises that it seems timely to state that at present she is playing Lady Macbeth with Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree at the Fine Arts Studios.

Miss Collier is taking orders from the former Frohman director, John Emerson, who has been assigned by David W. Griffith to produce the Triangle's contribution to the tercentenary celebration of the Bard of Avon's death.

KLEINE'S "SCARLET ROAD" FEATURES MALCOM DUNCAN

George Kleine's "The Scarlet Road," scheduled for release February 16, features Malcom Duncan, Anna Q. Nilsson, and Della Connor.

A New Year's cabaret scene in a Broadway hotel, requiring the services of more than three hundred "extras," is one of the striking moments.

The story, said to be highly dramatic, concerns the life of a young man who is directed in his father's will to go to the latter's hunting lodge, "when you have dissipated your fortune; there you will find a solution of your trouble." The young man follows instructions, and when he gets to the lodge finds a hangman's noose.

ANITA STEWART WITH VITAGRAPH FOR INDEFINITE PERIOD

Anita Stewart has signed a new contract with the Vitagraph Company of America for an indefinite period.

ESSANAY CAMERAMEN FILM PAINTED DESERT AND PETRIFIED FOREST

Through the enchanted land of New Mexico and Arizona, over the mysterious trials of ancient America, a corps of Essanay cameramen have just traveled and the results of their efforts in filming the beauties of the extreme Southwest will shortly be released.

The picture will form another of the two-in-one reels, with Cartoonist Carlson's Canimated Nooz Pictorial as the other five hundred feet.

Over the famous Enchanted Mesa the cameramen traveled filming its grandeur. The petrified forest of Adamana, Arizona, the Painted Desert, Canyon Diablo, St. Michael's Indian school and trading post, all were visited and caught by the camera.

By motor and pack mules the cameramen visited some scenes which were fifty miles from a railroad.

Not the least of the interesting features of the films are the studies of the cliff dwellers' homes in the rocks, the Pueblo Indians, the Canyon De Chelley and Canyon Del Merto.

OVEY BACK ON RELEASE CHART WITH "JERRY'S MILLIONS"

After a week's absence from the Mutual schedule of releases, due to the introducttion last week of Billy Armstrong as the Cub Comedy star, the name of George Ovey again returns to its accustomed place on the release chart in connection with the Cub Comedy "Jerry's Millions," which is to be released February 11.

"Jerry's Millions" is a typical Ovey subject with the irrepressible Jerry, the character played by the star, constantly being drawn deeper and deeper into trouble until no longer able to combat increasingly strong opposing forces, he seeks refuge in the calaboose.

Director Milton Fahrney has staged the story of Jerry's complications in his best style, and for Ovey's support he has provided a large cast of Cub players, including Louis FitzRoy, Jefferson Osborne, Gordon McGregor, George George, Arthur Munns, Harry Jaconson, Joseph Von Meter, Belle Bennett and Janet Sully.

William Farnum a Fighting Man in "Fighting Blood"

Story of Life in Kentucky Mountains, Directed by Apfel for William Fox, Presents Star in a Strenuous Role—Film Was Made on the Coast

"FIGHTING BLOOD," starring William Farnum, which William Fox will release on February 20, is a drama of the Kentucky mountains. Oscar C. Apfel, who wrote and directed the picture, spent several weeks in the mountains of that state, absorbing the atmosphere and observing the life of the mountaineers.

Mr. Farnum, it is said, outshines all his previous efforts in his fighting scenes, which are among the most striking in the production. In one he ejects a mob of toughs from church.

In another he "licks" the bully of the mining camp. The making of these was witnessed by Jess Willard, heavyweight champion; Barney Oldfield, automobile racer; and Frank Chance, one time famous first baseman.

The Fox publicity department reports that each was enthusiastic over Farnum as a specimen of fine physical manhood.

Many of the scenes were made in the Mojave Desert, Cal.; others were made in the San Bernadino mountains at Skyland, altitude 5,800 feet. Street views were taken in Redlands, Cal.

In support of Mr. Farnum appear Dorothy Bernard, Fred Huntley, Henry J. Hebert, H. A. Barrows, Dick Le Strange, and Willard Louis.

The story concerns itself mainly with Lem Hardy, a Kentuckian (Mr. Farnum), who comes from a long list of fighters renowned for courage. Hardy is sent to prison on a false charge, and after his release becomes a minister.

Meantime the real thief marries Evie, with whom Hardy is in love. Hardy's first church service is interrupted by a gang of toughs, whom he proceeds to eject from the church.

Later, when he is preaching in a saloon, the camp bully orders him to quit. Not until he has licked the bully, who afterwards becomes his staunch supporter, is he allowed to continue the service. Hardy eventually meets Blake and Evie, in what are said to be highly dramatic circumstances.

El Dorado Feature Company Is New Film Concern

Production of 5-Reel War Picture Is Planned Under Direction of Forbes, Former Stage Manager for Late Charles Frohman, with Players Headed by Neva Gerber

THE El Dorado Feature Film Company, a new concern headed by Bruce F. Bundy, has under way a five-reel feature which deals with the present war from a somewhat different angle and in a manner which can in no way give offense.

Mr. Bundy, while an ardent golf enthusiast, has found time to study the producing end of the film business and intends to produce pictures of a high standard.

Harris L. Forbes, who has stage managed productions of the late Charles Frohman and H. B. Harris, and who also is experienced in film producing, has been secured as managing director; having under his direction a capable company headed by Neva Gerber, who is supported by Lamar Johnstone, Rex Downs, May Cruze, Harry Ogden Crane, Rena Carlton, and others.

Pasadena, Cal., has been decided upon as a producing center though companies will be sent to various parts of the country to secure the correct atmosphere for the plays and novels which the company will produce as a part of their policy, featuring noted stars.

The present executive offices are located at the studio, 40 West Mountain street, Pasadena, Cal.

In the forthcoming release of the El Dorado Director Forbes was fortunate in securing the use of the exclusive Cumnock academy of Los Angeles which is an exact replica of Shakespeare's home at Stratford-on-Avon.

In addition to the use of the academy the graduating class of 1914, comprising the daughters of many wealthy southern California families, played prominent parts in the scenes, and the proper school atmosphere was successfully secured.

Thanhouser Makes Bid to Stage Heavyweight Fight

Film Magnate Proposes Holding Fist Battle Between Jess Willard and Frank Moran in New Rochelle Arena—"Ruby" Negotiates for Event

TO his activities as theatrical manager and film magnate and producer, Edwin Thanhouser, now wants to add fistic laurels. Mr. Thanhouser has communicated with Tex Rickard, the promoter of the forthcoming championship battle between Jess Willard and Frank Moran, with a view to staging the fight in a New Rochelle arena.

Rickard has offered, and the fighters have accepted a purse aggregating sixty thousand dollars, and the only details now to be arranged concern the time and place for the event.

Although it is reported that Madison Square Garden had already been arranged for, it is said that Mr. Thanhouser is prepared to over-bid any offers thus far made.

Even if the Garden should have been engaged, he can make sufficiently attractive financial motions to change the minds of all concerned and swing the big fight to New Rochelle, so reports go.

Mr. Thanhouser is now out of New York City, and the negotiations are being carried on for him by Leon J. Rubinstein. "Ruby" has full authority to raise the ante to a notch which will make Thanhouser the victor in the bidding.

The entire populace of New Rochelle is behind the plan, and the procedure indicates a determination, with the co-operation of the New Haven Railroad, to break all attendance records for a championship battle.

At the time of going to press Mr. Thanhouser is awaiting Tex Rickard's next move.

HOOPS NOW WITH METRO, IN "SOUL MARKET"

Arthur Hoops, well-known screen and legitimate leading man, has signed an engagement with Metro, and has begun work on his first feature for that company, "The Soul Market," in which Mme. Petrova is starred.

Mr. Hoops was with Famous Players for nearly two years. Later he was starred with Betty Nansen in "The Song of Hate" and played the lead in Fox pictures.

Recently he was seen in the stellar roles in George Kleine's "The Danger Signal" and "The Final Curtain."

Before going into pictures Mr. Hoops was a leading man in important Broadway and road productions.

Universal Busy on New Comedies and Dramas

"The Desperado" Has Oklahoma for Its Locale, While a New Fitch Production and "The Full Cup" Are Laid Abroad—Number 13 of "Graft" Completed

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Feb. 10.

HARDSHIPS of the settlers in Oklahoma because of the scarcity of wood as the result of the government reserving the forests and appointing a large number of deputies to protect them is pictured in "The Desperado," a two-reel Universal subject from scenario by Calder Johnstone.

The name role is that of a young Virginian who becomes a deputy, and because of the idleness of this task spends much of his time gambling, at which he loses all.

Believing he has been the victim of foul play by the coterie of card sharks he attempts revenge and because of his acts becomes a fugitive fleeing from a sheriff's posse.

While making his escape he comes upon a pioneer's little daughter who had been bitten by a rattlesnake, and in saving the child's life he forfeits his own.

The sheriff sees that the stone at his grave is marked "Christ aint a-goin' to be too hard on a man who died for a little kid."

The name part is taken by Rupert Julian who also directs the filming and he is supported by Jack Holt and little Zoe Beck.

The filming of the F. McGrew Willis adaptation of the Clyde Fitch play, "The Way of the World," was begun this week by Lloyd B. Carleton.

Emory Johnston appears in the part of the Governor, and husband of the woman of the triangle, Dorothy Davenport is the wife, and Hobart Bosworth has been cast for the part of Neville, the heavy.

Jack Curtis is the political boss, Gretchen Lederer the wife of Neville, and the other players are C. Norman Hammond, Adele Farrington, and Herbert Barrington.

This production will have a number of expensive settings including interiors of clubs, Monte Carlo, the executive mansion, and a church.

The story is of a decidedly damatic type and like most adaptations from plays the absence of action in the scenario is noticeable.

The attractive beauty of an Italian woman, retired from professional life of a dancer, in the prologue of the five-reel subject, and later the same qualities of her daughter, who becomes an artist's model, cause the infatuation of a millionaire, in "The Full Cup," being made at Universal City.

The dual role is taken by Louise Lovely. The prologue is laid in Italy where the man of wealth learning of the dancer induces her to go to the inn and give an entertainment for him and his friends.

The dancer's husband is soon lost from the effects of drink and the host of the party in attempting to kidnap the dancer and take her to the yacht brings about a tragedy for she escapes from him and is drowned.

The husband with his daughter comes to America years later to seek revenge, but is prevented in this by the death of the millionaire from heart failure when he is confronted by the infuriated Italian.

Supporting Miss Lovely in this Bluebird feature will be Lon Chaney as the husband and father, Norman Hammond as the millionaire, Jay Belasco as the American artist, Lule Warrenton in the character part of the dancer's mother, Marjorie Ellison and Hayward Mack.

Number thirteen of the Universal Graft serial has been successfully completed without injury to any member of the cast although Richard Stanton, directing the production and also playing the leading part that of the investigator, narrowly escaped injury by remaining too close when an artificial explosion wrecked the "plant" of the powder trust.

Director Allen Curtis, of the Universal Joker company is filming another of his stories, entitled "Fifty-Fifty," wherein a pair of country people spending a few days at a summer resort both fall in love with waiters, the wife with the head waiter, and her husband with a beautiful tray balancing chicken.

Two days of love making on the quiet and both couples decide to elope. In the meantime the waiters, husband and wife, count up what they have touched the rubes for and finding that it is quite sufficient, catch the first train.

Mr. and Mrs. Bilkins have each left notes for the other, and when they find their respective elopements are not to be, turn the hotel over in order to secure possession of their farewell epistles. William Frahney, Gale Henry, Milburn Moranti and Lillian Peacock are the principals.

A one reel comedy drama pointing out the foolish ideas frequently entertained by children was made at Universal City during the past week, and features the Short family, consisting of father, mother, and their son, Antrim, all members of the stock company.

The title of this is "There is No Place Like Home."

FOX CARD INDEXING DIRECTORY NUMBER

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 29, '16.

J. C. JESSEN,
Motion Picture News,
Los Angeles, Cal.

Dear Sir:—

The Special "STUDIO DIRECTORY NUMBER" of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS under date of January 29 is a very valuable addition to our Library of Information.

We are card indexing its entire contents for reference. We surely appreciate the great amount of work that it must have taken in this compilation and look forward to your next semi-annual section, which, as we understand, is to be a part of your valuable magazine.

We find the main edition of the "News" as interesting, reliable, authentic, and unprejudiced as ever.

Yours very truly,

FOX FILM CORPORATION,
(Signed) S. N. Robinson,
Branch Manager.

SELIG BUYS RIGHTS TO RIVES NOVEL

Rights for motion pictures of the Hallie Erminie Rives romantic novel "The Valiants of Virginia," have been purchased by the Selig Company, and an adaptation for the screen prepared by Wallace C. Clifton, who holds the position of scenario editor of the Zoo studio.

This subject is to be filmed in five reels under the direction of T. N. Heffron. The film story will contain a prologue the time of which is 1885, and the main portion of the story continues up to 1915.

This has to do with matters of financial nature in New York and the family of Valiants in and about their home in Virginia. The cast has not been named, it is announced.

GEORGE CLARE RE-ENGAGED BY HORSLEY

George Clare, Jr., a legitimate actor of more than twenty years' experience, who made his first appearance as a David Horsley player in the character of Syrus, a Grecian gentleman, in "The Soul's Cycle," has been re-engaged by Mr. Horsley for the part of Senator Thurston in "A Law Unto Himself," featuring Crane Wilbur, which is to be released February 28 as a Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe Edition.

Mr. Clare's dignified bearing in the character of the Grecian, his physique, his control of expression and his dramatic instinct as an actor were recommendations for his re-engagement.

BRITISH GUIANA SELECTED FOR EQUITABLE INTERIORS

Bruce McRae, the noted Broadway idol and star of a dozen recent dramatic successes, left New York last week for Havana, Cuba, to join Frank Powell's Equitable company, now staging "The Chain Invisible." Mr. McRae replaces Emmet Corrigan in the principle role in Le Gallienne's story.

After a week at Havana, the company, composed of forty people, will journey to Georgetown, British Guiana and Surinam, Dutch Guiana, for a series of big wilderness and water scenes. Primeval forests of giant trees being essential to the story, the two Guianas were selected as excellent locations.

DANCE CHRISTENS AMERICAN STUDIO

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Feb. 10.

The new enclosed studio at the American Film Company's plant at Santa Barbara, was recently christened by a dance given the members of the producing companies in the vicinity.

The stage floor is approximately one hundred feet square, and the walls and roof are entirely of glass, the former being exceptionally high to permit the use of large sets.

The grand march of the ball was led by P. G. Lynch, studio manager, and Mrs. Lynch. A ten piece orchestra furnished music and throughout the evening refreshments were served at a buffet. A number of Los Angeles photoplayers attended.

Screen Examinations

"THE WRONG DOOR"

(Blue Bird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

IF lively, unceasing action makes a picture, this is one. The action runs a full 5,000 feet, and most of it is furnished by Carter de Haven, with considerable side-play by Flora Parker de Haven. Carter de Haven, however, as an imposing, forceful, inexorable business man, does not impose on us to such an extent as to be impressive.

But he certainly is active, and he makes a good screen comedian. It is only when he appears at the same time with grown men that his shortcomings as the leader of them appear most forcibly.

The picture has been excellently staged and photographed. Business and stage life are represented, and well represented. De Haven is the wealthy Iron King. He sees and falls in love with a dancer at the theatre, and finally makes her acquaintance. She is a home-loving body, and every night after the performance hurries home to her aged father.

Father, however, is a crook, and he shares in the profits of a raid on the Iron King's safe. When he disappears the effects of the old home are sold at auction, and the Iron King buys in a little chest which he has learned the girl is anxious to keep.

He tries to present it to the girl, but she refuses to accept it, and pays him for it. The money which she leaves is found to be a part of that stolen from the safe.

PHIL BUYS THE BOX AT AUCTION

The Iron King, however, refuses to suspect the girl, and tries to trace the money to its source. Through these proceedings the fact that the father is a thief is discovered, and the girl is in despair. She insists on his collecting all the stolen money, and returning it to the Iron King. Then the old man, who has been shot when his pals discovered him false to their interests, shows how he has been in their grip and has been forced to become one of them against his will. Thus is everything cleaned up.

All in all, there is much in the picture which will appeal.

"LOVE'S CRUCIBLE"

(Brady-World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"LOVE'S CRUCIBLE" will be welcomed because it has a deeply appealing theme, handled in a way that stamps the entire picture as dissimilar to many other productions with the same central idea.

It is based on the play by Jules Eckert Goodman, entitled "The Point of View," and features Frances Nelson.

Myra is a country girl with an undeveloped taste for art. Her refused sweetheart, Stephen, furnishes her father with money that she may be sent to the city to study her chosen work.

In New York she makes quite a success of painting, but she meets and learns to love Robert Lawton. Robert betrays her love, but afterwards, spurred on by his sister, he asks her to marry him, which request Myra scorns.

MYRA'S WORK ATTRACTS ATTENTION

Stephen comes to the city and discovers the state of affairs, and after showing his willingness to kill Robert he again offers himself to the girl he has always loved, but Myra, having learned of the city and its ways, tells him to wait, while she goes on with her interrupted course in art.

Frances Nelson makes an appealing character of Myra. She plays well, and has a dash and vivacity about her in the early phases of the picture that contrasts well with her serious scenes coming afterward.

Douglas MacLean as Robert is a good type and a convincing actor, while June Elvidge as his sister, and Lumsden Hare as Stephen, give very pleasant interpretations.

The story is worked out in good fashion. It is so constructed as to thoroughly convince, there being a good reason for the acts of all the characters.

It seems not at all unreasonable to predict success for "Love's Crucible." It has a popular theme, which has been handled throughout in a convincing fashion, and added to these merits there is Frances Nelson, an attractive and clever star.

Settings and photography measure up well with the customary properties of the Peerless studio.

"KENNEDY SQUARE"

(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon—V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

F. HOPKINSON SMITH'S novel of aristocratic life in the Old South has been picturized in a pleasing and convincing manner. The characterization, placed in the hands of such skillful screen players as Charles Kent, Antonio Moreno, Muriel Ostriche and others, is well defined.

S. Rankin Drew has provided direction that is adequate. The costuming is correct, the locations well chosen, and the plot runs smoothly.

A novel introduction is provided by a sub-title explaining the

The Biggest Showing on Broadway

8 Triangle Theatres on Broadway

To meet the wishes and to secure the approval and support of their exacting patrons, theatre managers in New York have learned from experience that it is to their own financial advantage to present motion pictures of the highest standard.

That is why the following eight theatres on Broadway, the Gay White Way of New York, are now running TRIANGLE PLAYS.

Knickerbocker Theatre.....1200 Seats
Broadway and 38th Street

81st Street Theatre.....2200 Seats
Broadway and 81st Street

Schuyler ..... 600 Seats
Broadway and 82nd Street

Riverside .....2500 Seats
Broadway and 96th Street

Broadway Photoplay..... 600 Seats
Broadway and 103rd Street

Nemo Theatre.....1200 Seats
Broadway and 110th Street

Claremont .....1500 Seats
Broadway and 135th Street

Audubon Theatre.....2800 Seats
Broadway and 165th Street

Theatres of this class know and appreciate the advantage of TRIANGLE PLAYS, for it has been proved to them that such pictures can be made to show returns through the box office window.

And the same is true all over the country. Whether it be in a large city or a small town boasting of only two or three theatres, you will find the best house showing TRIANGLE PLAYS because

Triangle Plays Pay

The Eighty-First Street Theatre
A Successful Triangle House

Located in the heart of one of New York's best residential sections, A. L. Shakman's Eighty-First Street Theatre is a wonderful example of a successful TRIANGLE HOUSE. Night after night you can watch the line as it eagerly pays its money at the box office window.

Mr. Shakman's motto is "Good Prices and Good Pictures," and for this reason he is running TRIANGLE PLAYS because

Triangle Plays Pay

But when you stop to consider the class of actors and the kind of pictures it is no wonder that the mere mention of TRIANGLE PLAYS is a drawing card. For instance

NORMA TALMADGE with her established reputation has a following that few can equal.

The mere mention of DOROTHY GISH is sure to bring the crowds.

MAE MARSH already has many full houses to her credit.

As a character actress BESSIE LOVE is a sure laugh-producer.

CLARA WILLIAMS has never failed to impress those who have seen her on the screen.

"Aloha Oe"

Wonderfully spectacular, and yet with that heart interest that the moving picture public loves "Aloha Oe," a typical TRIANGLE PLAY has already proved a success and a money maker.

"The Lamb"

"The Lamb" with Douglas Fairbanks and Seena Owen is a motion picture so good that it has made all other pictures better.

It tells how love and danger wiped a yellow streak as wide as a barn door from a young eastern society man. It will keep your patrons jumping, wondering, gasping.

"Better Late Than Never"

That this picture is a Keystone Comedy is sufficient to assure you that your patrons will appreciate it, but when added to this is the fact that two such prominent stars as William Collier and Mae Busch appear the success is certain.

YOU are wasting your opportunities if YOU ignore advertising.

The Right Kind of Advertising Help

And in addition to supplying you with the kind of motion picture plays that the public like to see and is willing to pay for, especial pains are being taken by the Publicity Department to furnish the kind of advertising material that will convince prospective patrons that they really must see TRIANGLE PLAYS at your theatre.

Slides, heralds, lobby displays, special advertisements, stock posters and other material up to the TRIANGLE standard furnish you with unlimited assistance.

TRIANGLE PLAYS are an assured success, and if you have not already at least made an effort to secure information in regard to their presentation in your town why not write today to eminence of the author, and reproductions of several of his charcoal drawings are shown. This has the effect of putting the spectator in a sympathetic mood immediately.

Charles Kent gives an excellent impersonation of St. George Temple, the old aristocrat who befriends Harry Rutter, his hot-headed young friend, after the latter gets into the bad graces of his lady love through looking too long upon the wine when it is red. Antonio Moreno gives a good portrayal of the young Southerner, as does Miss Ostriche of the girl.

THE CHALLENGE

Subsequently the young man is driven out of his home, because, in fighting a duel with his rival, he violates the laws of hospitality. He goes to South America, returning a rich man, in time to restore St. George to his home, from which the latter has been evicted in consequence of mortgaging it to pay the young man's debts.

The plot is largely concerned with showing the mutual affection of St. George and Harry Rutter, and while the denouement can be clearly foreseen, the whole action is pitched upon a plane of pleasing sentiment.

Others in the cast are Thomy Brooke, Raymond Bloomer, Dan Jarrett, Hattie Delara, Harold Foshay, Herbert Barry and Logan Paul.

The photography is fair. Some of the lighting effects are far below the usual Vitagraph standard.

"THE PRECIOUS PACKET"

(Pathé Gold Rooster—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

STORIES of intrigue in high life seem to be ever popular. This is such a one, and it has features which should give it an unusually wide appeal.

The hero and heroine are of the type which win the sympathies readily, the bad men are just about bad enough, and the spirit of adventure just about developed to the proper degree.

Ralph Kellard and Lois Mercdith are the featured leads. Of these, Mr. Kellard commends himself more seriously to the attention. His work is direct and sincere.

Miss Meredith is pretty enough to suit anyone, but she does not show any marked ability in the registry or expression of ideas. One is always glad, however, to have her in the picture.

Ralph Kellard plays the part of one of England's "younger sons." He is ruined at the track, and the girl to whom he is engaged jilts him as soon as his property is gone.

Then the diplomatic secret service hears of him; he is just the type of young man they want, and caring little what becomes of him he accepts any mission unquestioningly.

In Canada a young woman calling herself a descendant of the Bourbons, is attempting to set up a French monarchy, with herself as the hereditary ruler. The young man is sent to Canada with a sealed packet, which is to open after so many weeks, and follow its instructions to the letter.

News of his mission reaches the conspirators, they capture the young man on his arrival, and hold him prisoner at the home of the "princess." Search for the packet is in vain, and he refuses to divulge its hiding place. Then the "princess" uses her wiles on him, and in consequence the two fall in love.

Attempt is made to torture the secret out of the emissary, but the "princess" saves him. She escapes with him from her own followers, who chase them in automobiles until their driver is shot and their car plunges over a cliff.

The young man and the "princess" reach the secret service agents; the packet is opened and its instructions are to invalidate the claims of the "princess" by seeking her out and marrying her. This suits all hands.

"HOP, THE DEVIL'S BREW"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE opium traffic, and the attempts to smuggle opium into San Fransisco from across the Pacific, following the prohibition of 1909, has inspired this story. It is melodrama, with a basis of fact, and the producers announce that the actual scenes, showing the methods used to get the drug ashore, were taken with the permission and aid of the federal authorities, and are based upon actual occurrences.

"Heart interest," as it is ordinarily understood, has been subordinated to melodrama and thrills, which in this case have the added value of being actualities or a close reproduction of them. Phillips Smalley and Lois Weber, who play the leads, show their deft touches all the way through, and they have been provided with a most interesting story by Rufus Steele.

There are several little technical faults which hinder the registration of the situations; for instance, the typewritten cablegrams have not been photographed with sufficient contrast to make them readable at any distance from the screen, and thus several important points are apt to be lost.

The principal characters are Ward Jansen, a customs inspector, and his wife, the daughter of William Winter, an influential politician. While Jansen is absent on an investigation in China, his wife becomes a victim of the opium habit, and after his return her actions in attempting to get hold of the drug, as well as to silence a blackmailing maid, give rise to suspicions as to her faithfulness.

Jensen hears that the steamship Queen is bringing in a large shipment of opium, and he and his men set about rounding it up. They get all but one package, which is smuggled ashore, and gets to the opium den, where it is distributed. Jansen learns where this den is and raids it, finding his wife among the inmates.

They have an understanding, and he takes her home, and there learns that her father is the head of the smuggling organization. When Winter learns that his own daughter is a victim of his greed, he is overcome by grief and kills himself. Jansen and his wife are reconciled.

Beside the Smalleys, whose work is uniformly excellent, Marie Walcamp, Charles Hammond and Juan de la Cruz do some excellent work.

"DIMPLES"

(Columbia-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE charm of Mary Miles Minter moving in a story that furnishes her a role well suited her, places "Dimples" among the features that are considerably well worth the time and money to see.

In addition, some of the prettiest locations seen in many a day have been chosen as backgrounds for the story.

These are introduced when the action shifts to the Sunny South, and an entire estate, abounding in artistic nooks and corners, has furnished an ideal background to the action.

Miss Minter is at all times an entrancing sight as Dimples, the hard-working little daughter of a miser, who is brought by her aunt to a Southern home, where she enters into a romance with Robert Stanley, a young man who has been disappointed in love. Miss Minter meets the slim demands of her part quite adequately.

While there are very few who will not enjoy "Dimples" because of its wholesomeness and artistic beauty, one is inclined to frown on Director Edgar Jones for not producing an entirely perfect picture.

There are scenes here and there that pass as mere incidents in the relating of the story when they could have been made to stand out as noticeable pieces of comedy or color. In particular, that bit where Dimples makes her unceremonious entrance into the scene where her aunt and the minister are conversing.

Dimples comes rolling down hill and upsets the minister, or rather, that is what she is intended to do; but the minister is very plainly waiting for Dimples' arrival, and he starts to fall before she strikes him.

But "Dimples," because it leaves such a good effect, considered in its entirety, can bear up easily under slight adverse criticism. As a commercial proposition and as a delightful entertainer, "Dimples" knows no common bounds.

Thomas Carrigan plays Robert Stanley in a likeable manner, and Charlotte Shelby is the severe aunt. Peggy Hopkins, though not polished, is one of the best types we have ever seen for the debutante.

William Cowper, John J. Donough, Schuyler Ladd, Fred Tidmarsh and Harry Ford have important roles which they carry to the good effect of the picture.

"THE GRIP OF JEALOUSY"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

AGAIN the old South of days before the war forms the background for a drama in which blood runs hot, slaves are mistreated, and bloodhounds called into play. The story concerns two families which are engaged in a feud.

LINDA IN THE HANDS OF HER ENEMIES

Evidently the aim was to produce a sensational picture, and this aim has been realized. In its realization, however, a good deal has been lost. The theme is not clearly told, the first part of the action particularly being confusing.

This is not the fault of the material in the story—there is plenty of material at hand and of its kind it is interesting—but the highest possibilities of suspense and dramatic values have not been gained.

Characters are introduced too abruptly, and there is a failure at times to prepare for climaxes.

Nevertheless, this subject, because of its sensationalism will interest a good many people. It contains a murder, an attemped abduction, sudden death, and cruelty. By contrast, a love story runs through the plot. The element of pathos is strong: the child of the secret marriage is taken immediately after her mother's death to the cabin of an old negro, and brought to young womanhood there in ignorance of her identity.

The sister of the dead girl, in order to shield her niece, comes near being forced into marriage with a plantation overseer, who is acquainted with the facts.

The overseer's son is prevented, in the nick of time, from abducting the girl, and everything ends happily.

The picture contains a fine piece of realism—a terrific rain storm.

The cast is entirely acceptable, and includes Louise Lovely, Grace Thompson, Jay Belasco, Hayward Mack, Colin Chase, Harry Hamm, Lon Chaney, Mr. Neff, Walter Belasco, Marcia Moore, and Dixie Carr. Joseph De Grasse directed.

"THE OVAL DIAMOND"

(Thanhouser-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS is a detective adventure story, of rather breezy and attractive type. It is melodramatic in its principal elements, but should be acceptable and prove an excellent entertainment for thousands of persons. It is well produced, and well acted, which, with the assistance of good photography, make it well abreast of the average production of this type.

SYLVIA ESCAPES

Young Robert Ledyard discovers that there is something mysterious in the yard of the house next door. By scaling the high wall, he finds Sylvia Daunt, a beautiful young girl, in distress.

He makes her acquaintance, unconventionally, and learns that she is pursued by a cruel half-uncle and his son.

Her father owned a magnificent oval diamond, back in South Africa, and the efforts of Major Dennison, his half-brother, to get hold of it, led him to flee with Sylvia to New York.

There Dennison arranged a taxi cab accident in which the father was killed, and Dennison got hold of the diamond. Then Sylvia was held prisoner in this very house.

Robert immediately interests himself in Sylvia's case. Then follow a number of hair-raising episodes, in which the Major and his son try to trap Robert and Sylvia, and which is complicated by the arrival from Africa of four miners who also seek the diamond.

Robert and Sylvia finally gain possession of the diamond, and then they are married. On their honeymoon they are traced to the rear platform of the train by a mysterious man, who finally unmasks himself, appearing as Colby, one of the four miners.

He demands the little packet containing the diamond, which he has seen Robert thrust into a waistcoat pocket.

Robert grudgingly gives up the packet, the man jumps from the train and flees. Then it is discovered that Robert has given the man a paste diamond, and has the real one in an inside pocket.

Harris Gordon, Barbara Gilroy and Arthur Bauer head the cast.

A FEW MINUTES FROM "ONE DAY," THE LATEST B. S. MOSS FEATURE MADE FROM ELINOR GLYN'S NOVEL

"THE NE'ER-DO-WELL"

(Selig-Sol. L. Lesser—Ten Parts)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

IF we were asked to single out the one thing which stamps this as an extraordinary picture, we should say—the story. It was written by Rex Beach, who wrote "The Spoilers." And when we say "The Ne'er-Do-Well" is absorbing through every foot of its length, we are only telling you, in another way, that it contains a remarkable story.

But we hasten to add that the picture is also remarkable for direction and acting, only in less degree than for its theme and the way it is handled. Colin Campbell, who directed it, has achieved what few directors have ever achieved—he has built a photoplay of great length virtually without padding. It is action—action—action all the way.

If that is not enough praise, we will offer two other bits of evidence. The first is our own, and the second comes from the largest audience we have ever seen at a private screening—an audience which crowded the Candler theatre, New York, to capacity.

As to the first: we have seen a lot of actors in a lot of pictures, but unless we are very much mistaken, Wheeler Oakman, who has the title role, is a real screen star.

His delineation of "The Ne'er-Do-Well" is one of the best defined, most satisfying pieces of acting within memory.

In the second instance, we offer you the verdict of a delighted audience, for that is what the Candler audience was. It responded instantly to the appeal of the picture—its humor, its pathos, its tragic moments, in a way that testified unmistakably to its worth.

To go back to the story: the characters are genuine characters. Where the characterization by Rex Beach stops, and the characterization by the players begins, we cannot attempt to say, but the two are a winning combination.

Oakman makes Kirk Anthony, the Ne'er-Do-Well, a strong, virile, resourceful young American, with a keen sense of humor. He starts by being a worthless young rake; and he ends by being master, not only of himself, but of a good many others.

The early scenes show him, a burden upon his rich father, spending his time in roistering. Then he is drugged, put aboard a ship to Panama, and there his new life begins.

On the ship he meets Mrs. Edith Cortlandt (Kathlyn Williams), and Mrs. Cortland, from the "mid-channel" of unhappy married life, takes the youth under her wing.

In Panama he lands very shortly in jail, after starting a riot at a fire; and, finally, through a series of adventures, gets a job as a conductor on the Government railroad.

Mrs. Cortlandt continues her attentions, but Anthony, who has real character, keeps his head. He falls in love with, and secretly marries Chiquita Caravel, a Spanish girl.

Cortlandt commits suicide, but Anthony is accused of his murder, and just when things are beginning to look serious for him, Anthony, Sr., arrives from the States and gets the boy out of trouble. All ends happily, except of course for Mrs. Cortlandt.

This sketch of the plot by no means does justice to it. On the contrary, for instance, there is Allan Allan, a tatterdemalion West Indian negro, who meets Anthony when he is down and out, and becomes his valet.

This character, excellently impersonated by Jack McDonald, furnishes much of the humor of the story.

There is also Ramon Alfarez, commandante of police, an explosive Spaniard, Anthony's rival, played by Sidney Smith.

Again, we have Norma Nichols as the Spanish girl; Harry Lonsdale, as Cortlandt; Frank Clark, as Anthony, Sr.; Lamar Johnstone, as Runnels, superintendent of transportation in Panama; Harry De Vere, as a detective, and Will Machin, as Locke, a crook, who disappears early from the plot. Miss Williams appears to fine advantage, and the whole cast is good.

After the action moves to Panama, it brings into view the Canal as a great background, tropical gardens, roads, and views of many kinds; life of the natives in Panama, Toboga Island, and other scenes which will interest anybody and everybody.

Mind you, these scenes, except for a few hundred feet of Canal views, fit perfectly into the story, and are not shown merely for the sake of increasing footage.

The story, as we have said, is a rattling good one, but we will enumerate a few of its thrills: Anthony and his gay companions drive an automobile squarely through a cafe door; after they get in there is a series of realistic fights, in the staging of which Director Campbell again shines.

In Panama, Anthony undertakes to teach the natives something about fire fighting, and while the fire burns merrily, Anthony buffeted by the native police, knocks various people down with streams from the fire hose.

Another high light is a banquet, given in honor of Cortlandt, where Anthony, always ready to do the right thing, makes a personal present to Cortlandt, only to have the latter turn around and say:

"Now, I am going to give you something—my wife—she is yours anyhow and now I am going to give her to you." (One of the very dramatic scenes, by the way).

The action is tense throughout. Several times Campbell introduces what we should call "smash" effects, by bringing a situation suddenly to a climax—something we have never seen done in quite so effective a way before.

Remembering in particular Rex Beach's story, Wheeler Oakman's acting, Colin Campbell's direction, and all the other elements of the production, we lay the case of "The Ne'er-Do-Well" before the exhibitor as completely proven. The verdict is: It is an extraordinarily good picture, and a certain money maker.

"ONE DAY"

(B. S. Moss—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

JEANNE IVER OPAL, the daughter of Pavlovitch, usurping regent on the throne of Veseria, an imaginary principality in the Balkans, held an audience spellbound by her acting at the first private showing of "One Day" in an uptown theatre, in New York, last week.

The picture is one of the best released this year and will prove a satisfying medium of entertainment wherever shown.

Excellent lighting, many elaborate sets, interior and exterior, a well-picked cast whose work gives finish to the story development—all these make the Moss film distinctive. But for all this, it is necessary to make another reference to Jeanne Iver, whose winsome beauty, compelling personality and superb acting do as much for the success of the film as anything.

The direction by Hal Clarendon deserves a special word of commendation for two reasons. His work shows cleverness, and this opportunity is taken to make answer to a complaint sometimes voiced by directors in general—and director-generals.

The grouch is this—when a picture is good a reviewer often forgets to give the director credit, and if the picture fails to meet the required standards of film art the director gets all the blame. So here is a case where "that which is Caesar's is rendered unto Caesar.'"

If the Moss company maintains in its next picture the high plane of production it has set for itself in "One Day" the release of the picture will undoubtedly be looked forward to by exhibitor and public as an event of importance.

"One Day" is called a sequel to Elinor Glyn's "Three Weeks," described as "an appealing romance burning with a passionate, resistless love." For all the sensuousness implied in the picture by these perfervid words from the zealous press agent, the story is wholesome and clean. Perhaps it's a shame to let out this secret, but it's true.

"One Day" does not need to trade on the reputation of "Three Weeks" for patronage. It is able to stand wholly on its own feet as something more than a One Day release, and will probably prove a first-run picture capable of Three Weeks' straight booking.

The plot? Don't bother to ask; just sign for the picture with the assurance of getting something novel, delightfully presented for the entertainment of your patrons.

The cast of characters and the players are as follows: Paul, by Victor Sutherland; Paul Verdayne, his father, by Barclay Barker; Dimitri, by Robert Broderick; Pavlovitch, by John Webb Dillion; Stefan, by Arthur Evers; Prince Ronneaus, by Hal Clarendon; Laneau, by Walter D. Nealand; Accomplice, by Frank Whitson; Prime Minister, by William Bechtel, and Master Paul, by Master Richard Ross.

"THE SCARLET ROAD"

(Kleine-Edison—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

SUCH a picture as this exemplifies the principle that no one man is qualified to pass on the merits of a picture. The subject ignores many of the strict canons of art, yet it is a picture which would attract thousands.

We are artistic—heaven knows—but we venture the prediction that "The Scarlet Road" will make money if properly placed.

The direction is what might be termed "spotty." In many places —and it must be admitted that they are the most important places —real artistry is shown; little touches are provided which if carried out could have made a sort of "human document" of the film.

The story carries us through the usual "cabaret life" showing how easily a cabaret dancer can ruin a young man with money, and how she herself will be the one to suffer in the end, while the erstwhile ruined young man rides past in a touring car, with his wife and children, all clad in furs.

The story is crude in itself, yet by virtue of its presentation, it has an unusual appeal.

It is the kind of picture which, if we had been compelled to pay fifteen cents to see it, would have made us feel that the money was well spent.

Harry Tremaine, a young clerk, has perfected an aeroplane motor, which he is unable to finance for marketing purposes. He suddenly inherits $200,000 from a father away out west, and instead of marrying the girl of his choice, he spends the money on a Broadway cabaret dancer.

When it is gone his father's lawyer hands him an envelope in which is a note telling him to find the old man's cabin, out west, and there he will discover the "way out." He is compelled to "beat" his way West as a tramp, and reaching the cabin and following instructions, finds a hangman's noose dropping from the ceiling.

In the face of this he resolves to make good by himself, and does, through a series of extremely fortuitous circumstances. He is financed in the manufacture of his patent, and becomes the wealthy head of his own company.

Then he goes West again to eradicate the vision of the hangman's noose from his memory, and pulling it from the ceiling, discloses a shower of gold coin. Notwithstanding this he blows up the cabin with a dynamite stick, goes back and marries the girl he had neglected.

Anna Quirentia Nillson plays the part of the cabaret dancer with considerable conviction, and opposite her is Malcolm Duncan, who has done good work in previous Kleine releases, and does very well in this. Della Connor, Iva Shepard and John Jarrott are also in the cast.

"SOLD TO SATAN"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"SOLD TO SATAN" follows the general idea of "Faust," with the action brought up to date. As a result the picture offers a story that everyone knows.

If a person hasn't heard "Faust," he has certainly seen one or twenty of its innumerable followers that are more or less similar to the original.

This version was prepared by Captain R. P. Rifenberick, Jr., and produced under the very able direction of Edward Sloman. The story, despite its familiarity and stock situations, manages to hold one with a compelling interest all the way. The power of its theme and the gruesomeness of many of the situations are responsible for this.

In fact a picture following the lines of "Faust" is practically sure of being gripping if handled with capability. Captain Rifenberick and Mr. Sloman have furnished the capability for "Sold to Satan," and the result is a mighty fine piece of work.

Producers who are on a hunt for stories might turn to this one often. Evidently it will never go back on its friends.

John Merrill, an old castoff, makes the remark that he would sell his soul for youth and wealth. His Satanic Majesty appears and gives him his chance. To fulfill the treaty, Merrill must bring other souls to the Devil. Young and wealthy he sets about his work.

His first victim is Archie Ashton. He places temptation in Archie's way, in the form of a fifth ace to a poker pack, and after the poor boy has been discovered, he suggests suicide, and Archie takes it as the easiest way out of his trouble.

Next, Merrill is called upon to direct his activities against old Ashton, Archie's father. This affair is easy, for all Merrill has to do is to withdraw his support from Ashton's faltering bank, and with financial failure the broken man's heart goes back on him.

The banker's daughter, with whom Merrill is in love, is the next victim. But here Merrill rebels, and unable to keep his bargain, he changes back to the old and penniless castoff. He dies and his soul is eagerly seized by the Devil.

L. C. Shumway makes the most of the role of Merrill. Wavering between the dictates of his heart and the commands of Satan, who is forever appearing at his side, Shumway appears to fine advantage.

Edward Sloman, himself, appears as His Majesty, and suggests the part merely on account of his makeup. Alan Forrest gets in a fine bit of acting as Archie, while the other roles are taken by Ben Hopkins, May Cruze and Adelaide Bronti.

TEITEL NEARLY READY TO TONE AND TINT PICTURES IN NATURAL COLOR

ALBERT TEITEL, president of the Ideal Film Studios and Laboratories at Hudson Heights, N. J., will introduce into the motion picture market tinted and toned films.

Despite the fact that numerous film producers now hand-color their films, which is very expensive, as the majority is done abroad, and duty is high, Mr. Teitel says that this tinting and toning are done by developing the films in a series of developers.

It can be done at very low cost, thus giving every producer a chance to color his scenics and interiors in natural color effect. Work is now progressing.

"HAUNTED MANOR," THIRD TITLE FOR A GAUMONT, WILL PROBABLY STICK TO FIVE-REELER

THE lengths to which motion picture companies must go in finding names which have not been used as titles is illustrated by the fact that the Gaumont company has had to change the title of a forthcoming Mutual Masterpicture twice.

The photoplay, which is a five-reel feature from the pen of O. A. Nelson, was originally called "The Touchstone." This was changed to "The Sorceress." The second, and what is hoped is the final change, is to "The Haunted Manor."

ILLUSTRATING THE NEW PALLAS-PARAMOUNT PHOTOPLAY, "HE FELL IN LOVE WITH HIS WIFE"

"HE FELL IN LOVE WITH HIS WIFE"

(Pallas-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

PALLAS has given E. P. Roe's sentimental melodrama excellent settings, with broad sweeps of landscape, beautiful country roads and glimpses of farm life which stand in sharp contrast to the gloomy story.

Director William D. Taylor has worked in several bits of realism which will compare favorably with anything of their kind. The most notable of these is a rainstorm, in which the elements rage true to life.

The light effects in this scene, and throughout the picture, are far above the average, and the photography is quite flawless. The selection of locations was particularly happy.

The piece is not without its thrills. We presume nearly everybody knows the Roe story, but, if not, it may be summarized as follows:

James Holcroft, a farmer, takes Alida Armstrong from the poorhouse as his housekeeper. Alida has fled from her home after she discovers that Ostrom, with whom she is living, is married.

Holcroft gradually falls in love with his housekeeper-wife, and when Ostrom attempts to make Alida go away with him under threat of killing Holcroft, the two men meet in a fatal struggle on a cliff, and Holcroft hurls Ostrom to his death.

Previously, Ostrom has shot his wife's brother, and this, together with the struggle on the cliff—an excellent fight, by the way—and Holcroft's single-handed combat with a band of sneering neighbors, makes up the thrills to which we refer above.

Florence Rockwell is seen as Alida, the poorhouse bride, and gives a fair impersonation. Miss Rockwell's efforts to express deep emotion are a little reminiscent of stage grimaces, and her interpretation is devoid of the appealing qualities it would have if her appearance were more youthful.

Forrest Stanley, as the farmer, really a character part, does good work through most of the picture. Page Peters appears as the villain, Lydia Yeamans Titus in the role of one of Holcroft's wretched housekeepers, gives a sympathetic impersonation. Howard Davies is another of the principals.

Scenes showing the poorhouse, the farm and its environs, and the countryside, are very pleasing.

As a whole, the picture presents ordinary melodrama in a handsome garb.

"THE TARGET"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

HOBART BOSWORTH is all but guarantee conclusive of a feature's drawing power. The rest of the burden rests on the story, its construction and the manner in which it has been directed.

"The Target," though possessing a story that when it is analyzed is rather unconvincing, and which is burdened with a number of unnecessary sub-titles, offers Bosworth an excellent role, which he handles with his usual skill.

The subject sets out to demonstrate that every man's friend will forsake him, deceive him and betray him when personal desires interfere. Such is the discovery of Big Bill Brent, an honest lawyer, whose platform is made up of two planks—truth and sincerity.

Big Bill is made the victim of a woman of the world, a selfish partner and a number of other personally ambitious souls who forget the fact that they once held the object of their attacks as a friend.

Lastly, however, Big Bill discovers that his mother is the best friend he ever had or will have in days to come.

Whether or not patrons will be convinced, and consequently heavily interested in "The Target" depends on the magnetism of Hobart Bosworth, and as this is a quality not to be underestimated, the chances are that the picture will fulfill its mission as an entertaining subject.

JACK PROVES HIMSELF A FALSE FRIEND

As is customary in the Bosworth subjects, the artistic and technical side of the picture has been well attended to. Scenes, some of them laid in the great Northwest, are indeed beautiful, while the photography always does full justice to them. The lighting is good also.

Anna Lehr heads the supporting cast as Brent's mother. She makes a very sympathetic figure, and save for the fact that she doesn't look the part, she plays with feeling and sincerity at all times.

Maude George as the woman of the world who marries Brent and then deserts him, Dick La Reno as one of his friends, Albert MacQuarrie as his partner, and Jane Novak and Ronald Bradbury complete the cast.

"The Target" is conclusively an episode feature, and notwithstanding this it retains the interest closely throughout its entire length.

"THE TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

CECIL B. DE MILLE has made a truly artistic picture out of the now famous story and play of John Fox, Jr. It might be described as a picture of the "better sort." He has had the best of material to work with in story, drama and cast, and he has overlooked no opportunities, so far as we can see, to provide telling situations, and "punch"—if we may be allowed to coin a phrase!

Artistry announces its presence in various ways; most of them are subjective, but nearly all of them may be defined as the right thing, done at the right time, and the artist is the person who can pick the right time.

We do not care to be more explicit than this as regards the notes of artistry in this picture, but no one who sees it will fail to note that they are there. Melodrama, it is, but not mawkish melodrama, and it is never allowed to carry its melodramatics too far.

John Fox first wrote the story; then Eugene Walter made a play, and afterward Janie McPherson adapted it to the screen, and Charlotte Walker was cast for the leading role; that is, the genesis of this release. Miss Walker's work is convincing and finished.

We pass lightly over the fact that as a screen figure she does not please us personally, but there are enough thousands who do like her.

In this play she is June, the daughter of a moonshiner, and beloved of her cousin. When the revenue officer arrives, she entices him to the cabin, where he is seized and made prisoner. Immediately the two fall in love.

The cousin's jealousy is aroused, and he locks the officer in the cow stable, whence he escapes by burning his bonds. He organizes a posse and returns for the moonshiners, who escape from their beleagured cabin after June has held up the man she loves, with a rifle.

The moonshiners escape. Through a note sent to the sheriff's posse by the revenue officer, and which June has translated for the moonshiners—and translated correctly while trying to do the very opposite—they waylay the young man and shoot him.

He is brought to the cabin to die. June prevails upon her cousin to go for a doctor, and he brings the posse under a flag of truce. The revenue officer is saved, but the cousin is shot as a "traitor" to the moonshiners.

Later the moonshiners agree to give up the traffic, and are set at liberty, and the revenue officer and June are betrothed.

Theodore Roberts gives a strong portrayal of Tolliver, the leader of the moonshiners, and Thomas Meighan is excellent as the revenue officer. Earl Fox's work as the cousin of June is also of a high order.

"RUPERT OF HENTZAU"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

ANTHONY HOPE'S stirring romance has been made into a photoplay certain to find favor with lovers of adventure—particularly the kind of adventure which happens in the mythical kingdom of Ruritania.

The picture was made in England, and is acted by an English cast throughout. Henry Ainley, an accomplished screen player, is seen as Rassendyll, the Englishman, whose impersonation of the King leads to all sorts of thrilling incidents.

Mr. Ainley does very fine work. Opposite him is Jane Gail, whose contrasting role as the queen, is immensely pleasing.

As Colonel Sapt we have Charles Rock, in an excellent character part. Others are George Bellamy, Warwick Wellington and Stella St. Andrie.

The staging, always effective, brings to view old castles, rich palace interiors, beautiful country scenes, and the like. The theme runs smoothly; all its points are brought out carefully and with dramatic effect. The costumes are of a modern period.

One scene showing the burning of a hunting lodge which becomes a funeral pyre for the king and one of his faithful subjects, touches the highwater mark of realism in the picture. Its full value to the plot is gained, and the fire itself is finely managed.

As every one who has read Hope's novels knows, action, dash, and daring—all upon a highly romantic plane—are synonymous with the author. There are narrow escapes for the hero, duels, and rapid excitement of varied kinds.

Suspense is the first name of the author—or it should be—and this picture has preserved that name intact.

THE DUEL BETWEEN RASSENDYLL AND RUPERT

If you want a clean, absorbing story of adventure, well told, you will want "Rupert of Hentzau."

CLARIDGE FILMS SEES NEW ERA IN STATE RIGHTS FEATURES

CLARIDGE FILMS, Inc., has been formed to engage in the State Right Feature Film Business on a sound and logical basis. One of the most experienced film buyers in the country, Agnes Egan Cobb is the vice-president and general manager of the new company, which has a financial backing and the active co-operation of several experienced film men.

For seven years Mrs. Cobb has been engaged in the business of buying and distributing film, and is perhaps in as good a position as anybody to gauge the needs of exhibitors and the public.

"The Heart of New York," starring the matinee idol, Robert T. Haines, the first release of this company, is the sequel to "Traffic in Souls."

"BATTLES OF A NATION" NOW READY FOR RELEASE

THE Buffalo Times' motion picture department announces that it has just released to exhibitors "The Battles of a Nation" which, heretofore, has only been seen in the first class legitimate houses throughout the country.

John F. Miller, Norman E. Mack's personal representative, has decided to book the exhibitors direct from this territory, which will cover greater New York, New Jersey, Delaware and the New England States.

The exhibitors will be permitted, even encouraged, to view "The Battles of a Nation" in the projection room before booking.

DOZEN DETROIT HOUSES FORM BOOKING CHAIN

A DOZEN or more of the smaller motion picture theatres of Detroit have linked together for booking features, and are able to give an exchange about fifteen days' solid booking on single features.

The purpose of combining together on a circuit is to get a reduced price for each exhibitor.

If it works out successfully in Detroit, leaders of the movement plan to extend it to outside the city.

ARKANSAS EXHIBITORS SHOW ACTIVITY

WORK has started on the Princes theatre at Argenta. Louis Rosenbaum, of Douglas, Ariz., has leased the building, and is superintending the construction.

W. O. Patton & Sons, contractors, are remodeling the Central theatre building in Hot Springs for Sidney M. Nutt, the owner. Five thousand dollars will be expended in improvements before it is opened as a motion picture theatre.

"A FOOL'S REVENGE"

(Fox Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WITH a formidable reputation behind it in its career on the speaking stage, "A Fool's Revenge" makes its way to the screen in all its unrelenting force, and unsparing frankness. Little or nothing is left to be supplied by the imagination; realism is given without regard for conventional folk and their ever accompanying sensibilities.

It is only fair to remark that "A Fool's Revenge," inasmuch as it possesses the above traits, will rub some people the wrong way. There are others who will refuse to take the picture seriously after it has advanced beyond a certain point. We are not guessing at or hazarding these opinions, for we saw the way in which the picture was greeted at one of Mr. Fox's New York theatres.

There is the Fool, whose wife has been lured away from him by a man whose specialty is luring. Later the Fool does all in his power to make it easy for a second villain to lure the first villain's wife. But then there is the terrible mistake—instead of the first villain's wife the Fool has aided in the seduction of his own daughter.

THE VILLAIN AT BAY

There in a paragraph is the reason why some folks will be displeased with the picture—it's only human nature. On the other hand there are many who will be neither offended nor amused by it, but who will consider it a strong dramatic piece.

William H. Tooker makes an appealing and pitiable Fool. He has done his work well, and the Fool's part is not an easy one. Maude Gilbert is the erring wife, and Ruth Findlay plays the role of the daughter. Richard Neal is the first villain.

W. S. Davis, co-author of the scenario and director, has handled his theme well, save for those scenes in which the second villain busies himself with preparations for carrying out his desires toward the Fool's daughter.

Davis has interspersed many touches of light comedy here and there, using a little puppy in many of the earlier scenes as a medium for this relief. There is also an unintentional comedy character. He has only a small part as the lover of the Fool's daughter, and hasn't a great bit to do, but he is a poet, and your picture audience will seldom accept a poet as a hero.

A supporting cast of uniform competency assists the players named above.

"DAPHNE AND THE PIRATE"

(Fine Arts-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

HERE is Lillian Gish in a drama that boasts, by reason of its star, of a countless number of comedy touches. It is a Lillian Gish picture from first to last. She has been allowed any number of closeups, and in them she displays a varied series of realistic and telling expressions. Miss Gish is truly delightful, and so is "Daphne and the Pirate."

It is a costume production, laid in France and Louisiana around the year 1718. Daphne is the daughter of a French nobleman who has seen better days. Philip de Mornay, the idol of the King's court, meets her, and because she flaunts a vixen temper, he resolves to win her.

He commissions his hirelings to capture her and take her to Fanchette's place, which is, to say the least, notorious. Shortly afterwards Philip gets in a fight and believes he has killed the king's counsellor. He is obliged to flee to a desolate inn and here he is captured by pirates on shore scouring for recruits.

Fanchette's place is raided by soldiers who are looking for wives to take to the settlers in Louisiana. Daphne goes along much against her will. The pirates attack the ship carrying the wives across the water, but mainly through Daphne's cool-headedness they are defeated and captured. Naturally she causes the release of Philip.

To say the least, this is a delightful picture. The story smacks strongly of originality and it is laid in a romantic period, which adds materially to its worth. The costumes add a dashing touch of color to the story, and there is the fencing and fighting with old-time cannon to furnish suspense. The fight of the two ships at sea is marvelously well handled.

Elliot Dexter plays Philip, and though he is hardly the correct type for such a role, he is sincere and fills the requirements of his part to fair advantage. Walter Long is a brutal D'Arcy. Howard Gaye, Lucille Young, Richard Cummings and Jack Cosgrove contribute good performances, but Miss Gish is likely to overshadow them all. Anyone who denies the fact that she is a star is either out of his mind or not capable to speak on the question.

"THE STAMPEDE"

(Robert C. Bruce)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ROBERT C. BRUCE'S pictures run to the sensationally interesting with this release. His scenic pictures of the Northwest give way to a series of scenes caught at a roundup or Western County Fair, showing the treacherous games of the cowboys and cowgirls.

There has by no means been too many of these pictures, and Mr. Bruce's should be more than welcome. An audience will never tire, and as yet it hasn't been given a chance to tire of watching cowboys seesaw on a bucking broncho, throw a buffalo, engage in trick races and perform various other stunts that a resident without the pale of a Western ranch trembles at thinking of.

The cameraman, an unusually important factor in the making of such pictures, has done his work well in "The Stampede." He has been able to follow the course of careening animal and rider in a pretty steady fashion. Seldom do the pictures jerk violently, and therefore the thrill of each individual feat has been caught with all its sensational force.

The reel is well and clearly titled, fully explanatory in itself. Book it if you want a thriller filler.

"THE DEAD ALIVE"

(Gaumont-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

HERE we have again our old pal, the double role. Twin sisters, resembling each other to the minutest apparent detail, and of course, played by the same person, with the usual double exposure which allows them to confront each other and speak more or less unpleasantly.

Like all other unusual camera effects, this style of double exposure is no longer considered wonderful—as a matter of fact, the audience has been taught to expect it, and when it comes, the spectator is so busy analyzing the technical work which made it possible that it detracts from the interest in the story.

The principal interest in this picture is that it serves to introduce Marguerite Courtot to five-reel feature pictures. The new Gaumont star, although known far and wide through her work in smaller subjects, here has unusual opportunity. She does her work well—in fact, she is the picture.

Miss Courtot has an especially "picturable" face, and by dint of much training has become a very attractive figure on the screen.

In this subject she shows poise and a certain thoughtfulness in her work which enhances it, especially as regards its sincerity.

Most of the situations given to her would have been easy to spoil, but she has made most of them convincing, and thereby has saved the story. This is the story.

There are twin sisters, Jessie and Mary. Their father, "Old Jim," is worthless, and gets a job in "Doc" Ardini's gambling house. The girls come to the city and get jobs of their own, Jessie in a department store, and Mary on the stage.

Jessie is loved by Stuyvesant, a young millionaire, but just as she is about to marry him, her father kills a man in the gambling house, and the disgrace comes out. Jessie feels she cannot marry Stuyvesant and flees, but he finds her and makes her marry him.

Then Ardini gets a hypnotic control over Jessie. He has discovered the identity of the girls, and tries to use this knowledge to blackmail Stuyvesant.

About this time, Jessie falls overboard from her husband's yacht and is drowned. Ardini goes to the grief-stricken bridegroom and tells him he can bring his bride back to life. He uses Mary for this purpose.

But as soon as Mary sees her dead sister's husband, she relents, confesses who she is and the part in the scheme, and Ardini is exposed.

The resemblance to his dead bride starts a new love in Stuyvesant's heart; and the old problem of "marriage with deceased wife's sister" is quickly overridden.

Sydney Mason, H. W. Pemberton and James Levering are in the supporting cast.

There is also another good tip to directors in this picture. We have a cabaret scene, in which all the men are in correct evening dress. This is no fault of any particular director, for none seems to have thought of any other kind, but we have never run across such a scene in real life.

"THE CRAVING"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture De Luxe—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

THIS production leans strongly toward the melodramatic, and while none of the episodes are individually exceptional, the cumulative effect of them gives a powerful impression. The college scenes depicted have a good deal of the "Dick Merriwell at Yale" flavor, but far less than most attempts at reproducing the collegiate atmosphere. The swift action and well sustained intensity of the plot efface the effect of the improbabilities that constantly appear.

William Russell has the chameleon ability to blend with his surroundings. On the campus he certainly gives the rah-rah impression, but in the rough mining camp that he subsequently visits he is still in harmony with the picture. His husky physique serves him well in a smashing good fight with the heavy.

Robert Miller, a small boy who has heretofore appeared in "bits," has a fat part. He does not have the mop of silky golden hair usually affected by child actors, and he differs from his aristocratic contemporaries in another respect—he is a clever actor.

Helene Rosson in the heroine part, Roy Stewart as the heavy, and Rae Berger and Charlotte Burton in character roles compose the balance of the cast, and all of them are excellent.

In college, Foster Calhoun and Oliver Bailey are rivals for the position of full-back, and for the hand of Margaret Cummings. Calhoun wins both these honors, and Bailey plots his downfall. Hearing that Calhoun has a hereditary craving for liquor, Bailey persuades the "gym" masseur to drop some alcohol on the full-back's tongue while rubbing him. This reawakens the latent tendency, Calhoun gets drunk the night before the big football game, loses the game, is dismissed from college, and his engagement with Margaret is broken.

Accompanied by "Crooky," a lame newsboy whom he has befriended, he goes West. There he marries a dance-hall girl, and is habitually drunk. In a fire he thinks his wife has been killed, and so quits drinking for a year, to prove his worthiness to Margaret. But Bailey discovers that Calhoun's wife is alive, and tries to prevent the marriage. "Crooky" proves that the marriage with the dance-hall girl was illegal, so Calhoun is free to marry Margaret.

"FIDO'S FATE"

(Keystone)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A COMEDY in which Charlie Murray unintentionally gets himself into a number of precarious mixups with another man's wife, is what "Fido's Fate" offers, in a way that is somewhat funny, but not in a way that reflects the customary credit on Mack Sennett.

The subject lacks the usual breath-robbing climax of a Keystone release. There is a chase that introduces some quick action and a few novel scenes, but it lacks the dash and sensationalism of Mack Sennett's brand.

"Fido's Fate" will make its witnesses laugh, simply because poor Charlie is quite innocent in his intentions toward the other gentleman's wife. A dog secreted in this lady's bag, that Charlie has bought for his wife, furnishes the lead ample opportunity to wriggle himself into precarious situations without giving offence.

Charlie Murray himself is somewhat funny, even if his actions here lack original flavor. The support comprises Alice Davenport, Fritz Schade, May Emory and Frank Hayes. Summing up, one might term this a fair comedy, but a poor Keystone.

"NEW YORK," PATHE, BRINGS OUT NEW YORK IN CROWDS AT WEST END THEATRE

THE Pathe Gold Rooster play "New York" drew so well at Loew's West End theatre on 125th street, New York, last week that for the first time in the history of the house it was found necessary to open the second balcony.

A large crowd was waiting for the doors to open, and hundreds were turned away. Florence Reed, the star of the picture, was present at the performance.

Mr. Loew will open his new Brooklyn theatre, The Regent, with the film this next week.

"THE CLARION"

(Equitable—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

TAKEN from the novel by Samuel Hopkins Adams, "The Clarion" presents in dramatic form an exposé of quack medicine and certain evil social conditions existing in the slums, resulting from careless neglect of the property owners.

Mr. Adams' book is noted for its power and its unrelenting attack on venders of patent medicines. While the picture offers a story that grips in many of its phases, those who have transferred the novel to the screen have let a few opportunities for making their work wonderfully strong, slip by.

They have produced an exciting picture, but the expose of the sale of useless medicines is subordinated to showing the squalor and misery of the poor. If it had been shown more vividly that this state of affairs resulted from use of the patent medicine, the effect would have been considerably more powerful than it is at present.

SURTAINE DEFIES THE CAPITALIST

Carlyle Blackwell, a well known and liked hero, is featured in the role of the young reformer, Surtaine. His performance is most suitable. Surtaine, too, is on the side of the masses, and with a character like that, attractive from the outset, Blackwell fairs very successfully.

"The Clarion" rises to a climax in which a large mob plays an important part. The mob is well handled, and the way it has monopolized the street speaks well for the care given the scenes by Director James Durkin.

To do justice to the realistic effect created by the mob it is only fair to mention that the individual members look their parts.

Surtaine is the son of a man who has made millions through a doped patent medicine. Given a large sum of money by his father, Surtaine buys the Clarion, a paper which has incessantly attacked the false business.

Surtaine prints nothing but the truth—and all of it, so straightway he gets in hot water by attacking the daughter of a prominent citizen who has run several persons down in her automobile. The father of the girl, using his influence, has all advertising withdrawn from the Clarion.

Then Surtaine discovers that his father's medicine is all wrong, and he breaks with him. Pursuing his activities further he discovers an epidemic of fatal disease in the poorer quarter. One of the property owners is his fiancee, but he goes on with the attack and opens her eyes.

The quarter is quarantined, and deprived of work the men break loose and attack the Clarion office, blowing it up. Surtaine's fiancee then instigates improvements in the filthy quarter, his father at last sees the light and closes his patent medicine establishment.

Realism is dominant in the picture. The filth depicted in the poor quarter, for instance, is real filth, the mob scenes are good. and the newspaper office a fine replica of a small establishment.

Howard Hall as Surtaine's father, Marion Dentler as his fiancee, and Charles Mason, George Soule Spencer, Rosemary Dean and Philip Hahn complete the cast.

"WAY OF THE WORLD," BY FITCH, IS BOSWORTH MEDIUM FOR UNIVERSAL

UNDER the direction of Lloyd Carleton, Hobart Bosworth has begun his work in the portrayal of a role as widely different from any other that he has ever essayed before the camera as day is from night.

The part is a real,dyed-in-the-wool heavy and the production is a film version of Clyde Fitch's popular drama, "The Way of the World."

Heretofore Bosworth has been known to patrons of the films the world over as a leading man with no taint of the heavy about him.

In his latest production, however, he casts from him the mantle of sympathy-arousing leading man and assumes the garb of the deep-dyed, much-despised villain.

The play was arranged for the screen by F. McGrew Willis and will be staged in five reels.

FOREIGN TRADE COUNCIL DELEGATES VISIT NEW ORLEANS TO SEE PARAMOUNT TRAVEL PICTURES

WILLIAM J. BRYAN'S endorsement of the Paramount South American Travel Pictures is said to have been fundamentally instrumental in having the Foreign Trade Council delegates visit the new Crescent theatre in New Orleans.

This theatre was recently opened and is at present conducted by W. Fred Bossner, manager of the department of theatres of the Paramount Pictures Corporation.

In different sections of the country these travel pictures are being used in schools and universities. Recently they have been added to the curriculum in the foreign department of the City National Bank of New York, through the efforts of Frank C. Vanderlip, is president, The American Bankers Association and the New York State Bankers' Association have also endorsed the films.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR THE BUSY EXHIBITOR

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"His Mother's Son." (Biograph. Mon., Feb. 21.)—This is a reissue, telling an unusual story in a dramatic manner. A masterful woman drives her son from bome, and bullies her busband and daugbter.

She dies of apoplexy, and the property is so involved that husband and daughter are turned out of the house. Accompanied by an orphan whom they bave befriended, tbey wander helpless until all finally get work in a cheap restaurant. When affairs are about at their worst, the son returns from a successful trip.

He finds the little family in poverty, and a strain of his mother's blood shows. He wrecks the restaurant, then takes everybody off to a better home. Mae Marsh, Jenny Lee, W. Christy Miller, Walter Miller and Robert Harron compose the cast.

"The Guilt of Stephen Eldridge." (Biograph. Three reels. Wed., Feb. 23.)—This is a tense melodrama, along conventional lines. It is well cast, and capably produced. William Gordon is in prison, sentenced for a crime really committed by Stephen Eldridge.

Ignorant of the real facts, Douglas Gordon, son of the prisoner, is taunted by John Curzon, son of the guilty man. The bitterness between the two is increased by their rivalry over Eleanor Curzon.

Eleanor's parents force her to marry John, but before the wedding occurs, Marie A'Allot, an adventuress, appears and threatens to reveal her relations with John unless he pays her blackmail.

Desperate for money, John rifles his father's safe, and there finds a confession of the crime, signed by Eldridge. His sense of right asserts itself, he makes public the confession and the wrong is righted.

Douglas marries Eleanor. The cast includes Charles H. Mailes, Ivan Christy, G. Raymond Nye, Jack Mulhall, Vera Sisson, Gretchen Hartman and Jack Drumeir.

"Golden Lies." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Feb. 12.)—Will be reviewed in next week's issue.

"The Bridesmaid's Secret." (Essanay. Tues., Feb. 22.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Hazel Field is asked to be a bridesmaid at the wedding of her friend, Muriel Carroll.

She takes a train to the city, but it is late, and she is not met. She falls into the hands of a resort keeper, and is imprisoned. That night Muriel's fiance, John Dempster has a bachelor supper, and the guests decide to paint the town red.

They go to the resort where Hazel is a captive, and she asks Dempster to take her to Muriel. He does this, on the condition that Hazel never mention the bappenings of that night. She agrees, and next day, when she sees that he is the groom, understands the meaning of the condition.

In the cast are John Lorenz, Marion Murray, and Fritzie Ridgeway.

"Canimated Nooz Pictorial." (Essanay. Split reel, with scenic. Wed., Feb. 23.)—This animated cartoon not shown for review.

"The Despoiler." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Feb. 26.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Ben Cameron, a wealthy widower, is rejected by Mary Rodgers in favor of Richard Warner, a bookkeeper.

Cameron's son associates with crooks, and soon becomes a criminal. Warner cannot support his family, so Mary works as a clerk in a store. Cameron's son hides some lace in her dress, and threatens to accuse her of theft if she does not pay him.

When he comes around for another payment, he is shot by his father, who is calling on Mary. When Cameron discovers that it is his own son he has killed, he is in anguish.

The cast contains Bryant Wasbburn, Warda Howard, and Darwin Karr.

"Ham the Diver." (Kalem. Tues., Feb. 22.)—An excellent number witb Ham, Bud and Ethel Teare who appears to most ravishing advantage. The plot is novel.

Ham goes into the water in a diving suit, but wben Ethel comes along Bud forgets all about pumping air to his pal at the bottom of the sea. The conclusion while slacking up a bit in laughs is very well handled.

"Earning His Salt." (Kalem. Wed., Feb. 23.)—Tbis is one of the first comedies starring Ethel Teare and although that young lady appears to ber usual attractive advantage she was almost forgotten by the author, who has allowed her a very thin and slight part.

Plot more than business causes the laughs here and tbe funniest moment arrives with the climax. Jack MacDermott plays opposite Miss Teare.

"The Night Watch." (Kalem. Fri., Feb. 25.)—Another one of those very strong dramas, something like "The Guiding Hand" in construction, written by Howard Irving Young and produced by Robert Ellis.

The doctor who watches over a critically sick young man and who discovers that he is the one who wronged his daughter furnishes the situation about which the story is built.

It would be a very fine picture indeed, if Ellis, who plays the physician, hadn't decorated bis brow with heavy black lines. It is very bad makeup and materially hurts the story.

Others are Richard Purdon, Artbur Albertson and Dallas Tyler.

"Sold to Satan." (Lubin. Three reels. Thurs., Feb. 10.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in tbis issue.

"Billie's Lucky Bill." (Lubin. Sat., Feb. 12.)—Bill is very much of a dub and finding a thousand dollar bill he proceeds to get credit everywhere he goes.

After passing the bill he reads of counterfeiters and is afraid that he will be apprehended as one, but it develops that his bill was good after all.

To this there is added the plot in which Bill proves himself a business success in some way that is not understandable. Billie Reeves shows to rather poor advantage in this comedy that doesn't give him a chance.

"A Song From the Heart." (Lubin. Mon., Feb. 14.)—Paul Powell wrote and directed this old fashioned heart interest number. Its greatest asset is Melvin Mayo, who appears as an old musician.

The old musician writes his opera and naturally his long lost daughter is playing the prima donna's part on the opening night.

There are a number of delightful touches in this, there is no villain and there are a few improbabilities, but the subject will please except in its few impossible phases, such as the one in which the chosen diva gets drunk on the night before the opening, refusing to appear the next day.

Others in the cast are L. C. Shumay and Birdie Priest.

"Virtue Triumphant." (Selig. Mon., Feb. 21.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"A Safe Risk." (Selig. Sat., Feb. 26.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. The Hocum Accident Insurance Company, a fly-by-night concern, pays Joe Inright $25 a week indemnity for injuries he has received.

This looks like easy money to Bill Hardluck, so he takes out a policy, and then tries to get injured. For some time each attempt is spoiled, but he finally bungs himself up considerably, only to discover that the insurance company has gone out of business.

Sidney Smith, Ralph McComas, and Betty Nathan are in the cast.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Life's Harmony." (American. Three reels. Tues., Feb. 22.)—This is one of the melancholy kind of plays that Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh do better than anything else.

There is very little action, but the character delineations are exceptionally good. George Periolat has a part totally dissimilar from the one he was given in "The Diamond from the Sky," and he is admirable. The story is negligible, and there is some drawing-out of the scenes.

Josiah Pringle, a benevolent old musician, is the organist in a small country town. A new man, Gordon Howard, is engaged to play the organ, so Pringle's means of livelihood is taken away.

Pringle's adopted daughter, Faith, falls in love with Howard, and they become engaged. Howard offers to take Pringle's model for a new kind of organ to Washington to have it patented, and to sell it.

Weeks pass by, and Howard does not return. The Pringle family are about to be turned out of their home, when Howard returns with $20,000. He explains his absence by telling of an accident.

"Too Much Married." (Beauty. Wed., Feb. 23.)—This is exactly the same kind of polite farce that this company has found so popular. Many audiences enjoy the exaggerated marital troubles that crop up in them. The favorite combination, Carol Halloway, John Sheehan, John Steppling, and Lucille Ward, appear.

After a quarrel between the newly-weds Jack and Nell, Nell goes home to her mother. When Jack's father pays him a visit, he does not dare tell him of the quarrel, and introduces the cook as his wife.

"Flooded With Trouble." (Vogue. Thurs., Feb. 24.)—The enterprising director of this company had a bappy inspiration when he thought of using the flooded districts of Southern California as settings for this slapstick comedy.

The rough work is not so pronounced as it has been in some of the recent releases, and there are many laughs in the piece. The cast is composed of Rube Miller, Madge Kirby, Arthur Tavares, Alice Neice.

Rube and Arthur are two city employees, and they are called upon to help pedestrians in the flood district. They have a merry time carrying pretty girls across the lagoons, and pushing old men into the water.

Rube meets Arthur's wife, and Arthur meets Rube's spouse, and not knowing each other's identity, they get along finely. When the two wives discover their husbands' perfidy, however, an exciting chase ensues.

"Double Crossed." (Mustang. Three reels. Fri., Feb. 25.)—There is a little of the problem play, and a great deal of the Western, in this well-acted old story. The director chose his effects with good judgment, and made a realistic, as well as an interesting picture.

The players are equally at ease on horseback or in the drawing-room, and in general acquit themselves creditably. The good points of the production more than make up for the age of its theme.

The cast has in it Thomas Chatterton, Jack Richardson, and Anna Little.

John Kling, a cattle man, spends most of his time making money for his wife Anna. She does not realize that he is working for her, and in her loneliness she is attracted by Lemp, a tramp whom her husband has befriended and made a partner.

Lemp tries to persuade her to run away with him, but she refuses. Kling overhears Lemp's pleading, but does not hear his wife's reply. He first ruins Lemp financially, and then attacks the home-breaker.

After a tremendous fight, Lemp is knocked unconscious. Anna, who has witnessed the combat, rushes to her husband's arms.

"The Craving." (American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe. Five reels. Sat., Feb. 26.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Cooking His Goose." (Beauty. Sun., Feb. 27.)—The old-time stunt of having a person change into an animated inanimate thing is revived in this picture with good comedy effect. With the exception of this innovation, the release is not remarkable.

Orral Humphrey, Gladys Kingsbury, and Dixie Steward are in the cast.

When Ima Knutt discovers that his wife cannot cook, he goes off on a drunk. When he goes home his loving spouse cracks him over the head with a whisky bottle.

In the delirium caused by this blow he dreams that his wife has turned into a bottle, and is pursuing him. When he comes to, his wife is pouring milk on him to revive him, preferring a live drunkard to a dead husband.

"The Candy Cook." (Vogue. Sun., Feb. 27.)—This slapstick comedy was not shown for review. The candy cook, by his flirtatious manner, and bis ignorance of candy-making, finally achieves the complete dismantling of a confectionery store.

In the cast are Lew Trembly, Evelyn Thatcher, Josh Binney, Buster Gould, and Lloyd Allen.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"Siberia, the Vast Unknown." (Pathé. Split reel.)—This is an attractive and instructive scenic, giving glimpses of the little-penetrated wastes of the great north of Asia.

The pictures start with a panoramic view of Nome, Alaska, and carry the spectator across the straits, into the Siberian wastes. Studies of Eskimo and Siberian life are given.

On the same reel is "Watch Flowers Grow," a study of the opening and growth of various well-known flowers.

"Luke Foils the Villain." (Phunphilms.)—Luke is really funny as a happy miller, singing at his work from morning till night. He is loved by Mazie Nut, and they are happy in each other.

Then Luke discovers that a villain is attempting to "steal the papers." This means that Mazie's father will be in trouble, the mortgage will be foreclosed on the old home, and an innocent man will be made to pay the penalty for a crime he did not commit.

Luke rouses himself, and by stealing the papers himself, foils the villain, who is very, very angry. He makes up for it by breaking up a tete a tete between Luke and Mazie.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Graft." (Universal Special Feature. Two reels. Eleventh Episode. Week of Mon., Feb. 21.)—Richard Stanton makes his debut in this number as hero. He is summoned to defend Bruce Larnigan who is charged with murdering the head of the Illegal Bucket Shops.

The trial proves that the district attorney had done the deed when quarreling over his relationship with the man's wife.

The trial is quite telling and the lawyer's method of proving the attorney guilty is cleverly evolved and somewhat novel.

"Sons of Satan." (Red Feather. Five reels. Mon., Feb. 21.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of February 19.

"The Disappearing Groom." (Nestor. Mon., Feb. 21.)—This Christie-Davey comedy is rather poor, being void of suspense, while the direction could have been better. Ray Gallagher, Neal Burns, Billie Rhodes and their usual supporting cast appear.

"The Dupe." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., Feb. 22.)—Telling the story of a man who is forced into a life of crime, only to be speedily reformed when he encounters a country girl whose innocence has led her into a precarious position.

There is much action in this and a great bit of it is physically thrilling. Underworld life is pictured in all its horrors, while the types seen in these scenes are marvelously real.

Some of the subtitles are excessively sentimental, but otherwise, for its kind the picture is good. Herbert Rawlinson and Agnes Vernon play the leads. William Worthington directed from a scenario by James Dayton.

"Pipe Dreams." (Victor. Tues., Feb. 22.)—A fair comedy with Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby, in which the wife believes she can write scenarios but is sadly disillusioned. The subject has some original material in it, although its fine points fail to register in some instances.

"Madame Cubist." (Victor. Two reels. Wed., Feb. 23.)—A romance that departs from the conventional and pictures its female lead as a most extraordinary creature.

She wears a different gown in every scene and for some untold reason retains a quantity of pets, such as monkeys and bears. Mary Fuller appearing in this role fashioned by Elaine Sterne will undoubtedly be the subject of much comment due to her weird costumes.

The romance is pretty, but even though Clifford Grey makes a manly figure of his part, Miss Fuller is practically of sole importance. There is a mask ball that adds a pleasant touch of the spectacular.

"Turtle Doves." (Rex. Wed., Feb. 23.)—An English subject with Edna Flugrath and Langhorne Burton in the principal parts. While the body of the picture is somewhat dull, the finale will amuse because it is typical of the much abused English sense of humor. The end will call for smiles and slight snickers rather than hearty laughter.

"A Beast of Society." (Big U. Three reels. Thurs., Feb. 24.)—A modern melodrama introducing Travers and Louise Vale to the Universal program. The story is by Harvey Gates and tells how a woman was tricked into leaving her husband by a wealthy man.

In later years the same man attempts to seduce the woman's daughter who has remained under the care of her father. This incident serves to bring the two together again.

The picture is not always convincing, as its big situations are strained; also the fall the villain takes, breaking his neck, is rather impossible. Travers Vale directed, also playing the husband, while Louise Vale, Douglas Gerrard and Jean Taylor complete the cast.

"John Pellet's Dream." (Laemmle. Thurs., Feb. 24.)—Through an error this drama was reviewed under the title of "Arthur's Last Fling," on page 876, issue of February 12.

It is one of Rupert Julian's best pictures and is highly deserving in every respect. "Arthur's Last Fling" was not shown for review.

"I'll Get Her Yet." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., Feb. 25.)—A very good comedy featuring Pat Rooney and Marion Bent, vaudeville stars of no little repute.

While the business perpetrated is chiefly of the stage variety, it registers very well indeed, while there is enough that is original in the two reels to rank them very high. Victor Potel also has a prominent part and appears to unusually good advantage.

"Her Friend the Doctor." (Nestor. Fri., Feb. 25.)—Not yet shown for review.

"After the Play." (Victor. Fri., Feb. 25.)—Not yet shown for review.

"The Stampede in the Night." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Feb. 26.)—A Western that truly deserves the name, as it is full of action, wonderful riding and appropriate acting.

A cast of favorites including Olive Fuller Golden, Hoot Gibson, William Canfield, Peggy Coudray and Neal Hart play the principal roles. Harry Carry wrote the story and Jacques Jaccard directed.

"Uncle Sam at Work," No. 10. (Powers. Sat., Feb. 26.)—This opens with a picture of Secretary of War Garrison and subsequently shows views of West Point, the cadets on parade and manoevers of the regular army. In the print shown the photography was quite poor.

"Married on the Wing." (Joker. Sat., Feb. 26.)—Ernest Shields playing the drunk gets an average portion of comedy out of this picture, while the plot assists him to a considerable degree.

The scenario was by Ben Cohn and Shields while the direction was taken care of by Roy McRay and Shields. Lois Wilson and Sherman Bainbridge lend support.

"Dad's Dollars and Dirty Doings." (L-Ko. Two reels. Sun., Feb. 27.)—Several novel touches, such as a scene in which an automobile whisks off a lady's skirt, make this picture quite distinctive, although appealing more to unconventional folk.

The story is a burlesque on the melodrama in which a girl is lured from the farm by the bright lights. Alice Howell is the girl, and cuts many funny figures in the city.

It was unfortunate that the producer chose to picture a death scene. It is totally out of place in a burlesque that is otherwise very good.

"Her Greatest Story." (Laemmle. Sun., Feb. 27.)—A strong heart interest offering concerning the struggles of a girl reporter and how she finally made good. Myrtle Gonzalez and Fred Church are featured in this.

BRUCE F. BUNDY

PRESENTS

EL DORADO FEATURES

PREMIER RELEASE

"The Impersonation"

IN FIVE REELS

Featuring this charming bit of femininity

MISS NEVA GERBER

ASSISTED BY SUCH WELL KNOWN SCREEN ARTISTS AS LAMAR JOHNSTONE—REX DOWNS—MAY CRUZE AND OTHERS OF EQUAL NOTE

Using the European war as a background the author has succeeded in evolving a plot which, while embracing the leading features of the great conflict, does not give offense to any of the participants.

In the role of Rhoda Lyons, a Western girl who is studying abroad when the war breaks and unwillingly drawn into the maelstrom of conflicting forces, Miss Gerber combines the daintiness of innocent girlhood with the intense dramatic action of the Western character, which seeks obstacles for the sheer joy of overcoming them.

RELEASE DATE WILL BE ANNOUNCED SHORTLY.

ADDRESS ALL INQUIRIES TO HARRIS L. FORBES, MANAGING DIRECTOR, EL DORADO FEATURE FILM CO., STUDIO AND EXECUTIVE OFFICES, 40 WEST MOUNTAIN STREET, PASADENA, CAL.

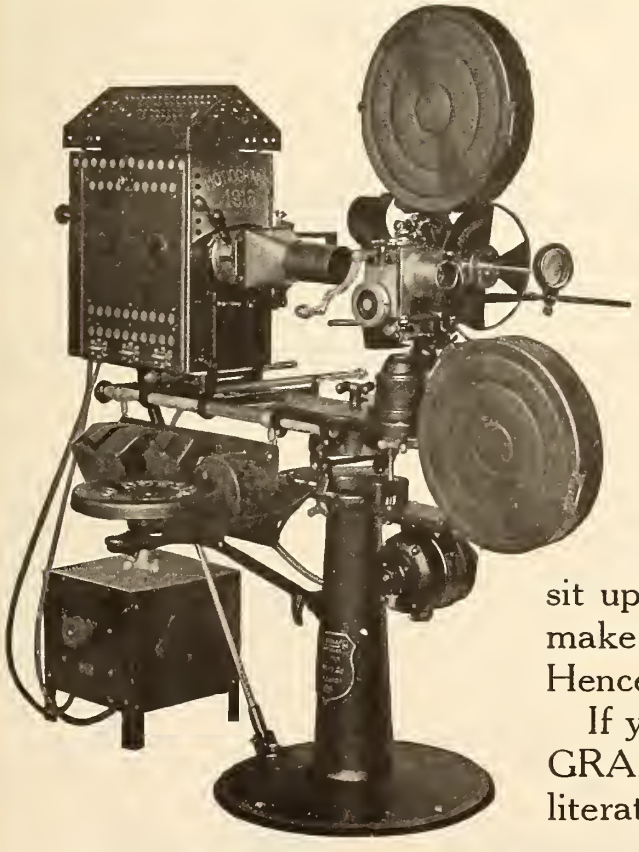
10% OF JANUARY'S MOTIOGRAPH SALES WERE INSTALLED IN NEW THEATRES

90% REPLACED OTHER MACHINES



WHY?

Because users have realized that they must have a machine that will stand the heavy grind, —not a machine that is continually freezing or being repaired every thirty or sixty days.

The New Model MOTIOGRAPH with the NEW SLIDING DISC and FRONT SHUTTER is making the real live user sit up and take notice that it is time to make a change for a MOTIOGRAPH,— Hence 90% replaced other machines.

If you don't know about the MOTIOGRAPH ask your dealer or write for literature.

Motion Picture Projection Simplified

By J. H. Hallberg

56—While on the subject of the magnetic blow out of the arc, especially of importance with high ampere arcs when D. C. is used, state what other precaution besides the setting of the carbon must be taken, in order to maintain a steady arc without sputtering and flaring forward.

Ans.—While I have touched only very slightly on the carbon setting in the foregoing answer, I may, in view of this new question, state that with A. C. the blow-out effect is not as pronounced as with D. C., therefore, with A. C. the carbons may be set to good advantage as shown in Fig. 34, which represents a mild form of the "jack-knife" setting.

This setting will not be at all satisfactory for D. C. where the amperage maintained is over 30 or 35 at the most, because with the setting, as in Fig. 34, the magnetic blow-out effect would be so powerful and the slanting of the upper carbon so great that the arc would be lifted right out of the crater on the upper carbon, not only due to the magnetic blow-out effect, but also due to the air current caused by the tremendous heat development at the arc.

You understand that heated air rises rapidly and therefore there is a constant effect of lifting the arc upwards, so that if the upper carbon is too slanting, relative to the lower, the arc will not stay in the upper crater where it belongs, but it will elongate the upper crater or climb out on the upper edge of the upper crater, away from the core, and when this happens you know the arc will sputter and flare forward, being almost uncontrolable.

In view of this understanding, the carbons for D. C. should always be set in almost perfect alignment, as illustrated in Fig. 33, but both carbons may be tilted backwards at an angle of anywhere from 25 to 35 degrees, by tilting the entire lamp, but the carbons must remain in perfect alignment with each other.

In the old days when 15 to 20 amperes was a large amount of current, with the D. C. arc, an even more exaggerated carbon setting than in Fig. 34, was employed, termed the "right angle" setting as is herewith illustrated in Fig. 40.

This carbon setting is perhaps the most efficient from a light giving point of view, but it is not always practical with more than 25 amperes of D. C., and it is not at all satisfactory when it is used with A. C.

The foregoing explanation will guide the operator in using his own best judgment in securing the setting which, for his particular purpose, will give the best results.

Another important point to be remembered with large ampere flow at the arc, is that due to the increased magnetic blow effect on the arc and the increased velocity of the air currents within the lamp house around the arc, tending to lift the arc out of the upper crater, great flexibility and centralization of the arc is obtained by using a cored carbon in both the upper and lower holders.

The old school has told you to use a cored carbon in the upper and a solid carbon in the lower holder, where the upper is the positive and the lower is the negative for the D. C. arc. This carbon combination was satisfactory up to within a few years ago when 30 to 35 amperes was the most current used at the arc.

Now, however, with our modern projecting systems, calling for an average of 50 amperes D. C., at the arc and, may be, as much as 120 amperes at the arc, as some of our new modern theatres will use, in order to centralize the arc you must use cored carbons in both top and bottom. Otherwise, the arc becomes almost uncontrollable.

Another factor with D. C. arc is that where only 25 to 40 amperes of current is used, an arc between 45 and 50 volts drop will give a steady and well controlled arc, whereas with 50 to 100 amperes at the arc, the potential drop across the arc must be increased from 50 volts to as much as 60 volts in order to secure proper combustion with a steady arc.

These changes have been brought about and determined upon by close observation and the experience of those who have had charge of the larger and more modern projection equipments.

Auditoriums in English Theatres Magnificent

Mural Paintings, Striking in Design and Arresting the Eye of the Patron by Their Artistic Merits, Give Interiors Unusual Finish—Seats in First Three Rows in Balcony of Holderness Hall, Hull, Bring Greater Admission Price Than Benches in "the Pit"

IT will be interesting to the exhibitors in the United States to note certain features in regard to motion picture theatre construction and lighting in England.

Illustrated in this article are three houses of varying types and different points to recommend them. All have one feature which is of particular importance and which is not followed to a great enough extent in this country. This is the means of illuminating the theatre. All three houses have the indirect system which insures the absence of glare, so trying to the eyes and objectionable in the majority of American picture houses. These fixtures were supplied in this instance by the National X-Ray Reflector Company of Chicago.

HOLDERNESS HALL, HULL, ENGLAND

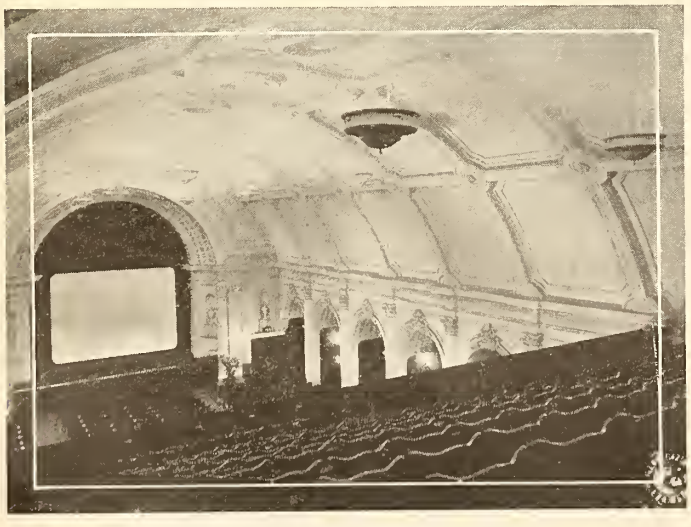
In the case of Holderness Hall, located in Hull, we have several distinguishing features. The orchestro is divided into distinct sections by a partition four and one-half feet high, the rear section being fitted with upholstered seats on which a considerable advance in admission is charged, the front half of the orchestra having benches which are not reserved.



ANGEL CINEMA, ISLINGTON, ENGLAND

The balcony is likewise divided, the first three rows being reserved at a higher price than the rear, though all have upholstered seats and are reserved at an advanced rate over the benches in the front of the auditorium.

Another feature of particular interest are the mural paintings on the side walls which lend warmth and attractiveness to the house. This is a feature which can be adopted very reasonably by houses in this country if they would only realize the degree to which they help the appearance of the theatre.

The location of the projection booth is also worthy of notice. This is directly back of the orchestra and gives an absolutely level throw to the screen so that there is no distortion or eye strain.

This feature, whenever it is within the building laws, is one which should be adopted, although many localities do not allow it.

The Angel Cinema of Islington is interesting because of its arched ceiling which allows ventilation at the highest point, which is an ideal condition.

Another feature is the location of the side aisles which give the appearance of a cloister, as shown in the illustration, the side columns of the theatre being between the seats and the aisle.

The Lime Street Picture House, located in Liverpool, has one feature very similar to Holderness Hall, in that one row of seats in the centre of the orchestra has been omitted, thus forming a cross aisle, separating the house in two parts.

LIME STREET PICTURE HOUSE, LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

In this case, however, all seats are reserved, the rear of the orchestra being held for higher price than the front.

In the last two houses the projection room is located above the balcony as is the case in most houses in the United States.

MANAGERS IN THE SOUTH PLACE ORDERS WITH MENGER AND RING FOR LOBBY FRAME

THROUGHOUT the South theatre managers realize the value of artistic lobby display frames, and have been placing large contracts with the firm of Menger & Ring, 304 West Forty-second street, New York. A. Hullsey's theatres of Galveston, Dallas, Fort Worth, Waco and Houston, Tex., are being equipped with novelty frames.

A contract was awarded to Menger & Ring by the Adams Brothers for their new theatre in Paterson, N. J., which opens on February 22. The contract calls for about $1,000, it is said.

Who Will Answer All Questions You Send in, No Matter How Simple or How Difficult

HOW MUCH POWER NEEDED FOR GENERATOR AND HOW MANY KILOWATTS AN HOUR?

A. J. B., Bismarck, N. D.:—I am thinking of putting in my own light plant, that is, a generator connected direct with a motor using the city power to run the motor. What I want to find out is the amount of power it will take to run this generator and how many K. W. it would require an hour.

What I have in sight is a 7½ K. W. 110 D. C. generator with a 65 ampere capacity.

How many horse power will a motor have to be to run this generator with full load; and it may be that it will have to draw a little overload sometimes. I can get A. C. for motor or 220 D. C. now in the theatre. Which of the two would be the best?

Ans.—It would be considerably to your disadvantage to purchase a 7½ K. W. 110 volt D. C. 65 ampere generator for the operation of your moving picture machine arc lamp and to mount this generator directly connected to a motor for operating on A. C. or D. C. 220v.

A motor for this service would have to be between 10 to 12 H. P. capacity and for 220 volt D. C. If the generator had to be overloaded a 15 H. P. motor should be used, but with A. C. a 10 to 12 horse power motor would do, as A. C. motors stand more overload for short periods.

Such a motor generator running at 65 amperes and 110 volts would consume about 10 to 11 K. W. per hour and would be a most inefficient apparatus for your service.

What I would recommend is an A. C. to D. C. motor generator capable of delivering anywhere from 30 to 70 amperes direct current for the operation of one motion picture arc.

With such a motor generator operating on A. C., it is possible by means of a field controller which comes with the motor generator, to control the amperes at the arc without the use of a rheostat in series with the arc, thereby effecting a large saving on current and capacity of motor.

For comparison the generator which you propose, motor driven when operating one arc at 60 to 70 amperes, would require about 10 K. W. per hour, whereas one of the special types made for this purpose would require only 5 to 6 K. W. per hour, saving from 40 to 50 per cent. on your electric bill.

With the motor generator specially made for the purpose a switchboard can be had which will change the generator automatically, when a switch is manipulated, so as to make it operative for the control of two arcs at the same time delivering between 30 and 35 amperes to each arc, while transferring from one machine to the other, in that manner securing the dissolving effect.

The cost of such a motor generator on single phase would not be more than about $289 and the switchboard for the double arcs to be used with it would be only $50 additional.

If you should be fortunate enough to get, from the Electric Light Company, the 220 volt, 3 phase, 60 cycle service such as they furnish for motors instead of single phase, which can be used for both motors and lighting, then the cost of the motor generator for maximum of 70 ampere capacity would be only $249, with $50 extra for switchboard.

Against the above investment for a new and modern equipment which will save you 40 per cent. to 50 per cent. on your current consumption, you have to purchase the generator you spoke of.

You would also have to provide a cast iron base and coupling which would cost at least $25 to $30 more, and if for single phase a 10 H. P. motor would cost you over $200.

If for three phase such a motor would cost you around $140, which, in my opinion, would be a very bad investment on your part, and you would never secure the results with this outfit as you could with the specially constructed equipment for the purpose. In addition it is possible that the generator on which you are figuring does not run at the correct speed which should be 1,720 to 1,750 r. p. m. for the motors I have priced above.

A D. C. motor of 10 to 12 H. P. capacity would cost you as much as, if not more than the single phase motor mentioned above. Taken as a whole, I recommend that you install a new modern motor generator with switchboard for two lamps as referred to above, if you wish to operate two machines to dissolve one picture into the other.

EXHIBITIONS IN PLACES NOT FIREPROOF

J. L. W., Utica, N. Y.:—I intend to start a traveling exhibition with motion pictures among the Polish population with the intention to obtain funds for the Polish Relief.

Kindly advise me if the exhibition could be given in church halls, or other places which are not fireproof and are located above ground floor. What laws are existing at the present time regarding the same in Pennsylvania, New York and Massachusetts?

Can the machine be operated by a person not possessing operator's license?

Does the same fire law exist when using calcium gas or electricity?

Ans. In all cases where motion pictures are exhibited to audiences you must provide an approved type of motion picture machine with all fire-protecting shutters, magazines and devices. This machine must be placed in a fire-proof asbestos booth.

The machine and the film should always be in the hands of a competent licensed operator. It would be unwise, though in some instances it might be allowable, to let an inexperienced and unlicensed operator handle film and moving picture machines.

If I were you I would write to the city authorities and especially to the fire chief of each town or city where you intend to exhibit and lay before these authorities your case with the request that they give you by return mail the conditions under which they will allow you to exhibit.

You will naturally have to state the hall in which you wish to give the performance in the various places and if you do not know, you might ask, with your request in what hall the city authorities allow performances of the kind you intend to give.

In Massachusetts I am sure that they will not allow you to operate without a licensed operator and I am also quite sure that you will have to have a special permission to use calcium gas, and I am not at all sure that you may use, in the state of Massachusetts, calcium gas as stored in tanks under pressure; but they may allow the gas making outfit known as the model "B," which manufactures the gas from chemicals as required and does not store the gas and which is absolutely harmless and free from danger.

The same laws do not exist in different states and if you want to be further advised I recommend that you, in addition to writing to the local authorities of each place where you desire to exhibit and get their permission, that you write to the state department having control of the rules and regulations for motion picture projection in each state.

In Massachusetts the motion picture shows come under the direct supervision of the state police department.

I am sorry that I cannot give you the detailed information as to the laws in the different states and furthermore the old rules are subject to change from time to time and any information that I might give would in all probability be subject to change in some individual cases.

HOW TO OVERCOME CARBON SPUTTER

R. W., Sandwich, Ill.:—I have been using ⅝ in. Bio carbons and have been getting a very good light. I received a trial shipment of ¾ in. Speer carbons and seem to have considerable trouble.

The light sputters more than it ought to, and the light seems to come and go. Can you suggest any way of setting carbons to overcome this?

I am using a Powers 6-A machine and use A. C. 110 volt, 60 cycles, single phase and am drawing the highest amperes possible through a Fort Wayne Compensarc.

Ans.—The change from imported carbons to domestic will in most instances require a change in the adjustment of the current controller such as the Compensarc or the rheostat, if one is used; also it may be possible that a change in the setting of the carbons and the method of maintaining the arc must be made.

The reason for a change of this kind is that the different make carbons are not composed of the same materials. Some carbons are made under higher pressure than others.

Then again different chemicals are used in the core filling for the different carbons and some carbons are made with large core and some with small core.

All differences in the quality and make-up of the different carbons must be considered and I happen to know that the Speer carbon in the ¾ in. size was first made with a core offering considerably lower resistance than with the Bio carbon.

The manufacturer then reduced the size of the core to increase the resistance of the arc but on a quantity of carbons sent out the core was really too small, which increased the resistance too much and made the carbon burn very poorly on A. C.

The manufacturer then increased the size of the core but not to quite such an extent as the original size and also changed the mixture for the core so that now, I believe, the Speer carbon in the ¾ in. size is very satisfactory.

The ⅝ in. size which I have also made extensive tests of, never gave any trouble excepting in some instances where a ⅝ in. carbon was used over 50 or 55 amperes, under which condition you might expect them to give trouble from penciling.

My suggestion to you will be to communicate with the Speer Carbon Company, of St. Mary's, Pa., sending to them one new carbon which you have not used and one of the carbons after it has been burned; in fact, send two burnt carbons, one set of them, so that the factory can see how the points look and test your carbons under their conditions.

You will then receive a report from the factory and you can rest assured that if your carbons are not right they will be replaced free of charge.

I find that the best carbon setting with A. C. is to have the lower carbon set vertically and the upper one inclined backward to the extent of about 30 degrees from the vertical line.

If you should happen to have the Speer carbons with the low resistance core, it may be that you will get better results operating on the 50 ampere notch of your Compensarc, but I would by all means, communicate with the Speer factory at once and send them the samples, as the factory will be sure to help you out.

TWELVE HUNDRED ATTEND FIFTH ANNUAL OPERATORS' BALL IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

Special to Motion Picture News

Washington, Feb. 12.

TWELVE hundred persons attended the fifth annual ball of the Motion Picture Operators' Union, Local 224, of Washington, D. C. President B. A. Spellbring, chairman ex-officio of the entertainment committee, directed the arrangements and saw to it that the affair was completely successful.

A motion picture was taken of the dancers. Honor guests were Eddie Fallell, of the General Film Company, Atlanta; F. B. Sweet, of the Powers Company, Boston; H. L. Berkholm, of the Simplex Company, New York; and Mr. and Mrs. Howett, of Baltimore Local 181.

ST. LOUIS INDUSTRIAL MOTION PICTURE FILMS COMMONWEALTH STEEL PLANT

HARRY LE MERTHA, E. P. Lasche and G. B. Harney have organized a company for the production of industrial motion pictures in St. Louis. These men are well known in business circles there, and Mr. Le Mertha has been a moving picture cameraman for some time.

The firm has turned out a very satisfactory film of the Commonwealth Steel plant in Granite City, Ill., and just finished a two-reel film for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, besides having contracts for other films to be made immediately, some of them to be used for advertising purposes, some to be kept as records, and others for distribution.

The film company, which is known as the St. Louis Industrial Motion Picture Company, has offices and studio in the Swanson-Crawford Exchange building, at 14 North Ninth street.

FACIAL EXPRESSION

Film Producers spend staggering sums in salaries to actors and actresses who, with their knowledge of "FACIAL EXPRESSION," convey to us the trend and plot of the play—wonderful, yes MARVELOUS! Often a "hidden smile" or "wink" will convey to the audience that which words would be inadequate to describe—and all in the fraction of a second.

What if the screen shows a CLOUDY picture and the highlights and the shadows of the face are "flat"—the audience did not SEE THE POINT. WHAT THEN! Just mingle with your audience tonight and you'll KNOW.

Is it any wonder that some exhibitors FAIL? No, they go down by mere force of gravity.

The MINUSA GOLD FIBRE SCREEN, "Built by Brains," will show your films in their "True Light"—to the highlights on a single hair. The facial expression will be as in real life—soft, beautiful. While a "Minusa" shows a very Brilliant, Natural picture, it is not glaring, and WILL NOT TIRE THE EYES!

Get a "Minusa" and watch YOUR facial expression change. You'll SMILE—Always.

Write or Wire for Samples and Prices.

LOBBY AND TEA ROOM MAGNETS IN ENGLISH THEATRES

THE comfort of the patron is of primary importance in the minds of English theatre builders, as is shown in the case of the Lime Street Picture House, of Liverpool, and Holderness Hall, of Hull.

In a preceding article we described the features of the interior of the auditoriums of both these houses. There are other features, however, which are of equal importance.

In the case of the Lime Street Picture House, we have two features of paramount interest. The lobby, instead of being an ordinary runway between the street and auditorium, is so arranged that as you enter it, it gives the appearance of being the entrance to some well-equipped hotel, with palms and plants decorating it.

The stairs of the balcony are set in at the side and are not noticed at first glance.

For the benefit of the patrons there is a public telephone booth at one side, which is not an ordinary unsightly wooden closet set up at one side of the lobby, but is built into the wall in the form of a closet with a leadcd glass door leading into it.

Another feature of this house is the tea room, which is fittcd up with comfortable sofas and chairs, in which the patrons, either before or after the shows, may gather.

VESTIBULE ENTRANCE, HOLDERNESS HALL, HULL, ENGLAND

In addition to being an attractive feature, this is a source of considerable income to the proprietor, and also gives him a strong advertising feature.

Holderness Hall, of Hull, has a combination of lobby and rest room; that is, in the side of the lobby there is a large open fireplace around which are grouped comfortable chairs for the patrons who are waiting for the next show or who are delayed in leaving.

Instead of the tea room this house has a cafe, which opens off the landing on the stairs leading to the balcony. This, like the tea room idea, is an advertising point, and also a source of income.

Both these theatres use, as described before, the indirect lighting system in the auditorium. This is also true in the lobbies and rest rooms. The light is not only soothing, but most pleasing, and should be more universally adopted in this country.

THEATRE NEWS OF VARIOUS STATES

NEW HAMPSHIRE

R. H. Hurd, of North Berwick, has purchased the Home theatre moving picture business of Roberts and Keniston in South Berwick.

E. Johnson has opened his motion picture place in Pepperell. This theatre is located on Main street in the old Lawrence hall, and has been completely remodelled.

NORTH CAROLINA

J. E. Scarborough is completing a new moving picture theatre on Pettigrew street between Mangum and Church streets, Durham. The building is designed for office and lodge rooms above the theatre and will give accommodations to thirty offices as well as provide for a meeting place for some of the colored lodges. The cost of overhauling the building and putting it in shape is in the neighborhood of $1,500.

OHIO

If the plans of Manager Joseph Grossman, of the Standard theatre, the most prosperous of Cleveland's downtown houses, mature, the Lake Erie city will soon have its first duplex theatre. Mr. Grossman wants to lease property adjoining his theatre and put up a duplicate building connected with the present house by a doorway leading from the lobby. Cleveland is more poorly equipped in the way of downtown theatres than any large city in the country. The Standard, with a seating capacity of about 700, ranks as the largest downtown motion picture house in the city, but if the plans for the duplex house go through, it will increase its accommodation to 1,550 seats.

OKLAHOMA

The Colonial theatre at Wirt was burned January 19. Manager G. W. Jennings announces that he will rebuild at an early date.

The Regal theatre at Pauls Valley was burned recently, but will be rebuilt soon, as announced by Manager H. C. Harrison.

Carl Gregg is making over and improving the Broadway theatre at Tulsa, and will play vaudeville and pictures.

Damp Plaster Nuisance and How It Can Be Cured

Decorations Prevented from Discoloration and Peeling with a Little Precaution—"Pitting" in the Surface Is Avoided by the Use of Calcined Lime Instead of the Old-Fashioned Kind—Masonry Rendered Impervious by Liquid Waterproof Cement

"THE music pit of the theatre which I occupy is periodically flooded with water which comes in from the surrounding ground," writes a correspondent. "At all times it shows a slight dampness. The nuisance is getting worse, and I would appreciate it if you could advise me what is best to do to correct this fault."

From the above question I understand that the sub-surface soil upon which the theatre is built is hard-pan or clay which does not allow surface water to pass through.

Certain seasons of the year, most generally in spring when rains are heaviest and after the thaw of winter's snow, surface water accumulates to such a great extent that unless the sub-surface soil is sand and gravel, such water forces itself through masonry.

The writer has seen even the best of cement walls subject to such conditions.

Unless your pit is actually subject to water pressure, as it would be if it were near a river or other body of water, I would suggest that the entire house side of the masonry of the musicians' pit be chipped off so as to present an entirely new clean rough surface.

Wash Masonry with Liquid Waterproof Cement

Such masonry should then be washed with a liquid waterproof cement and the entire body given several successive thin coats of waterproof cement as well as a cement hardener.

The experienced mason or cement contractor could do this work very reasonably. There are many different waterproofing compounds on the market, and the contractor could advise as to what is most used in your locality.

It is best to leave the selection of this compound to the contractor, making him responsible on a guarantee to waterproof the pit.

If any particular brand of material is suggested to him, you will take the responsibility away from the contractor where it should be placed, because, no matter how good the quality of the ingredients, if the workmanship is not of the best and if the material is not used with judgment, failure will result.

"I am about to re-decorate my theatre, made necessary by the fact, that the decorations done at the time of completing the building are entirely discolored and in some places have peeled off," writes another correspondent. "Will you ylease give me your idea how to prevent a repetition of this?"

Discoloration and peeling off of decorations might result from various causes, especially when a finish is given the O. K. by a builder to plaster shortly after the latter material is placed.

Any finish applied to damp or green wall plaster will surely result in discoloration, and sometimes peel. No wall finish should be applied until the plaster is thoroughly dry.

By this is meant not only at the surface, but it should be dry through its entire body. Even the wall in back of the same should also be thoroughly dry, for if the wall is not thoroughly seasoned, the dampness contained in the masonry must work itself out in time.

Moisture Evaporated Toward Interior

The tendency is for the moisture to evaporate toward the interior of the building where the building is heated and the dry interior will attract the dampness through the plaster and spoil the decoration.

The writer has known buildings that were supposed to have been thoroughly dried out after months of heat being applied, only to find the decorations spoiled after every precaution was taken in the line of sizing the plaster.

Discoloration will also follow when the finished plaster contains too much lime, and not enough of plaster paris.

Pitting of the walls will result where old fashioned lime is used and where the said lime is not thoroughly slacked. This can be avoided by using in finished plaster nothing but calcined lime, now put up in bags.

Where the wall surfaces are broken up, with well designed plaster decorations, it is well to leave the decorating of the theatre until two or three years have passed, by that time the plaster and walls will be dry. This has proven very successful in many instances.

White Wall Not Always Objectionable

The white walls have not been objectionable to the motion picture theatre. They do not reflect light to the disadvantage of the screen.

Where the plaster is damp below the surface of the adjacent outside ground, the walls must be thoroughly waterproofed, as described in previous article.

In your instance, be sure that before redecorating no dampness comes through from the exterior wall. Get at the source of the defect. Then thoroughly remove the present decorations and resize the walls well with a dependable size.

The Bridgeport Wood Finishing Company manufactures a material especially suitable for sizing walls that might become damp.

NATHAN MYERS.

BUFFALO, N. Y., UNDERGOES UPHEAVAL IN FILM CIRCLES; SEVERAL THEATRES CHANGE MANAGERS AND POLICIES.

THERE has been a regular explosion in Buffalo (N. Y.) photoplay circles during the past week. Several theatres changed managers and policy, while it is understood one theatre will close in the near future, and will be closely followed by another.

Mitchell H. Mark, president of the Mitchell H. Mark Strand Theatre Company, which operates the Strand, New York, after several conferences with the United Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., has effected a consolidation of the New Victoria and Elmwood theatres, both of which houses will have new managers under the new régime.

Edward L. Hyman, former assistant manager of the Strand theatre, and manager of the Family theatre, will go to the New Victoria, while Leon S. Brick, of the Regent theatre, will take control of the Elmwood.

It is rumored that the Regent theatre will close. Employes have been given notice. Under the new policy, it is said that the prices at the Elmwood will be raised to fifteen cents and the Paramount program presented, while the Victoria will also run the Paramount after the Elmwood, but at ten cents.

The Globe theatre, which has been closed, at Main and Ferry streets, for several months, has reopened under new management. The Palace theatre has cancelled its Triangle program, discharged the orchestra, and will go back to its old policy of ten cents admission, with leading features as the program.

"The Strange Case of Mary Page" is one of the new numbers booked at the Palace. William Rosenthal, former assistant manager of the Palace, becomes assistant manager of the New Victoria, while it is expected that E. S. Davis, now managing the Elmwood, will take charge of one of the United Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., houses. This company controls the Colonial, Columbia, Keith's Allendale, and a few other smaller houses. William Leyser, formerly manager of the Marlowe, will go to the Family.

The charging of fifteen cents admission at the Elmwood is a radical move, indeed, and its effect will be watched with interest.

No local theatre, except Shea's Hippodrome, has ever "got away" with anything over ten cents admission. The coming of "The Birth of a Nation" to the Star, a local legitimate house, for a season of four weeks at a top price of two dollars, will also be watched with interest.

The effect on over one hundred theatres in Buffalo and its resultant "fever-heat" competition, is beginning to show a reaction. The territory upon which a theatre can now draw for patrons has become decidedly limited.

There is a big house in almost every section of the city. In some sections of the east side there is a house on every corner. At Lafayette square there are three big houses, almost next door to each other. These are the Lyric, Family and Olympic. Two blocks away are the Strand and Palace.

Within a block of these are several other houses, the Bijou Dream, Keith's, the Hippodrome and the Academy. Naturally the competition among these theatres is very militant.

Several houses which, a few years ago, were among the most popular and prosperous of Buffalo theatres, have now, with the building of several new, large institutions, taken "a seat to the rear," and just about holding their own.

Among the survivors at the final reckoning will be those houses which, with an admission price of ten cents, are giving their patrons a good program, good music and an atmosphere that tends to draw patrons, because of its homelikeness.

Several Buffalo houses have been particularly unfortunate in having three or four managers within a year.

Patrons become friendly with one manager, get acquainted with him, begin to get "chummy," and offer friendly suggestions for improvement of the house; the house begins to get better pictures, and subsequent better business—and zip! a change takes place and another manager is announced.

It is said that one locality was so displeased with the coming of a new manager that one patron offered to get up a list of 1,000 names, offering to send this list of "pleased patrons" to the controlling company, in an effort to retain the manager whose work had built up a good business and who had given patrons what they wanted.

There are many mangers in Buffalo who apply 1916 ideas to their houses, who study conditions and act accordingly, while some still draw on those methods which were "the thing," when "Washington Crossed the Delaware." They talk "class" from early morning till late at night, but action, "sticktoitiveness" and "up and doing" are things not in their personal makeup.

ONLY ONE STRAND IN NEW ORLEANS SINCE MILLER OBLIGINGLY CHANGED HIS TO THE EMPIRE

THE question of "button, button, who's got the button?," which promised to fade into insignificance beside the much more interesting question "who's going to build the first Strand theatre in New Orleans?," has been decided, and permanently decided, it is thought.

Not long ago the DeSoto Building Company announced the purchase of a site in Baronne street and plans for the erection of their new theatre, which was to be called the Strand.

A few days following this, Jac. Miller, owner of the Hippodrome theatre in Baronne street, began remodelling a three-story building in the 1000 block in Baronne street, which he announced would be called the Strand.

Leo Fellman, president of the DeSoto Building Company, got busy on the telephone, and the conversation went something like this:

"Hello, Mr. Miller! We're building a Strand theatre over here in Baronne street. Can't you leave us alone?"

"Well," (the answer) "I didn't read the papers; but I suppose if you thought of it first, it's your idea so go ahead, and we'll change the name of ours. A rose by any other name, etc.—"

And very obligingly Mr. Miller re-christened his theatre. It will be the Empire, and open on February 15.

THE HOME THEATRE, WASHINGTON, D. C., DRAWS PATRONAGE WITH PLAYS FOR EVERY MEMBER OF THE FAMILY

A NEW theatre has opened in the residential section of Washington, D. C., called the Home, which is likely to live up to its name.

It has a seating capacity of about seven hundred.

It has an oriental appearance with its colored tiling decorations, both exterior and interior, and its arches and towers. The display boards are uniformly arranged and lobby display is aimed at attractiveness rather than gaudiness.

The interior is roomy, with a high ceiling and ample ventilation. Artistic lighting system is found both in the side wall brackets and the inverted lamps which hang from the ceiling.

Added to this is a line of lights surrounding the interior lobby, which forms something of a foyer, upon which enter the staircases to the mezzanine tier. These lights are used especially between shows, and aid in the rapid emptying and filling of the theatre.

The mezzanine tier is perhaps the unique feature of the house. This adjoins the lounging promenade, is roomy, and fitted up with comfortable chairs, and promises to be a much sought for location by patrons.

Features will form the program of the Home theatre, with a ten-cent admission.

An orchestra of five furnishes the music, which follows the pictures admirably.

With two machines, there is no delay between reels. The projection is excellent, and altogether the newphotoplay house promises to meet all the up-to-date needs.

$50,000 THEATRE ONE OF SEVERAL PLANNED IN PHILADELPHIA

H. BERMAN, owner of the Great Southern at Third and Snyder avenues, Philadelphia, with 1,200 seats, and of the Penn at Fourth and Dickinson streets, with 1,000 seats, is now supervising both houses.

Piano and violin are used at present but orchestras are contemplated as the next step in betterment.

Since the new year a tentative policy of straight ten-cent admission instead of the former five-cent price has been tried. So successful was the move, Mr. Berman expects to make both houses ten-cent ones permanently.

Work will soon begin on a moving picture theatre, costing between $35,000 and $50,000, for James B. Clarke, on a recently-purchased plot at 4765-67 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh. Plans call for an ornamental front and an interior 135 feet long, fireproofed throughout.

The property was bought at a cost of $15,000.

Announcement has been made at Centralia that Attorney Daniel Murphy, of Philadelphia, who owned the moving picture theatre that was destroyed by fire in Centralia some time ago, contemplates erecting another modern moving picture theatre.

A. J. Houseweart, of Lopez, who recently purchased the Golder lot at Benton, expects to at once erect an up-to-date moving picture house with accommodations for 400.

CALIFORNIA

THE Ellis Street Investment Company, Inc., has awarded contracts for the erection of one of the largest moving picture houses in San Francisco at Ellis and Mason streets.

Ellis J. Arkush has purchased a large lot at Redwood City and will erect a moving picture house. William Topke, of San Mateo, is the architect.

The H. C. Pike estate will erect a one story moving picture theatre on Franklin street, near Fifteenth, Oakland. Edward T. Foulkes, San Francisco, is the architect.

F. C. Malkmes has sold his theatre at Gilroy to J. Hanson and will remove to Campbell.

R. Puccinelli has purchased an interest in the Crescent theatre at Los Banos. C. D. Acker still retains his half interest in this house.

The Majestic theatre at Tulare, which has been closed since S. J. Greenwood sold out last fall to H. H. Lester of Exeter, has been reopened. The entire building has been remodeled by its owner, Michael Reardon, the ceiling raised and the seating capacity increased. It will be conducted for the present as an exclusive moving picture house.

The Regent theatre at San Francisco has been purchased by F. A. Lacy. This well-known house is located in the Fillmore street district.

CANADA

A fire in Timmins, Ontario, one of the farthest North towns resulted in about $500 damage to the Empire theatre, which is using Universal Service. The theatre will only be closed temporarily.

Mr. Giachino, who operates two theatres, one in Haileybury, Ont., and one in Cobalt, Ont., announces his withdrawal from Haileybury owing to unsatisfactory conditions during the last few months.

Newmarket, although only boasting a population of about 1,100 people, now has two houses. The Patricia, the new house just completed, will run Universal Service commencing February 14.

CONNECTICUT

The lease on the Strand theatre, Main street, Bridgeport, has again been transfered to its former owner and manager, Charles Berger. Hereafter the house will be under the personal management of Frank T. Montgomery, a well-known picture man from the south. Prior to opening under the new regime, improvements aggregating several thousands of dollars were made.

ILLINOIS

Manager Donald Bester has re-opened the Court theatre at Kankakee after having it closed for more than a week for remodeling. An entire new front has been installed, the floor dropped to the street level and a new heating and ventilating system put in. The interior has been redecorated in pink and gold.

The Fox theatre management at Aurora plans to show motion pictures every day in the week except Sunday, when vaudeville will be offered.

Harvey Bowser and L. C. Britton have leased the Majestic motion picture theatre at Mt. Vernon and, after making a number of improvements will open.

The Joy, the north end moving picture theatre, Mt. Carmel, has changed hands. George Miller, who for some time has been the proprietor, has sold out to John Coleman. Mr. Coleman has made certain interior improvements to meet the demands of the fire requirements.

KENTUCKY

Fire which broke out early in the evening of February 4 in the Lexington opera house, Lexington, destroyed one reel of film and other reels were damaged by water. The blaze, which started from an ignited piece of film, was confined to a small area owing to the fireproof construction of the booth.

LOUISIANA

N. Sobel, owner of the Washington theatre, Washington and Magazine streets, New Orleans, has installed a 12x16 Minusa screen, enlarged his seating capacity from 500 to 800, and has put in new opera chairs.

MAINE

Pearl Crockett of Brooks was in Bangor recently on a business trip in connection with his new theatre in Brooks. He purchased a power 6-A motion picture machine and will use it in his new theatre, which is to be opened about the first of March. This house, which will be devoted exclusively to motion pictures, will have a seating capacity of 500 and is in a new building. It will be the first house of its kind in Brooks.

For the first time in Bangor the Triangle pictures were shown at the Bijou theatre, a vaudeville house, Monday, February 7. The service is to continue indefinitely.

The Universal theatre in Belfast that was burned down some time ago has just been remodeled and will open in the near future.

Arthur L. Harriman has resigned his position with the Westbrook electrics and has purchased a picture theatre in Norway.

MASSACHUSETTS

James E. Brady has been granted a license to conduct a motion picture show in the building formerly occupied by St. Leo's church, Leominster.

The Ware brothers have purchased the Strand theatre in Peabody and are already operating it.

John J. McDonough has taken a lease on the Tyler theatre, in the Morningside section of Pittsfield, and will continue to conduct it as a motion picture house.

A permit has been granted for moving pictures in Knights of Columbus building, Somerville. Mayor Cliff signed the papers in the name of Past Grand Knight James A. Kiley, who has been working energetically among those opposed to granting a permit.

MICHIGAN

The Wyandotte Theatres Corporation, Wyandotte, has taken over the new Majestic, the Marx and the new Lincoln theatre in that city and will book them in conjunction with the Caille & Guthard theatres of Detroit. Henry Roehrig has been elected president; Carl F. Schroeder, vice-president; Harry Tucker, vice-president; Arthur W. Edwards, secretary, and Henry J. Guthard, of Detroit, treasurer. The corporation has a capital stock of $100,000.

Another moving picture theatre is being planned for Lansing, by Frank E. Church of Lansing, and Howard O. Pierce of Detroit. These men have secured a lease on property on South Washington avenue and expect to break ground for the new enterprise by March 1. The theatre complete will cost $70,000. Plans call for a large stage, an organ loft and all modern conveniences.

The Bijou theatre, Iron Mountain, is being rebuilt, and will be remodelled into a high-class motion picture theatre.

The Rialto Theatres Company, of Detroit, which some time ago announced that it would erect a handsome theatre at Gratiot avenue and the Boulevard, has purchased the Pearl theatre and property adjoining, which gives it 105 feet on Gratiot avenue at the corner of Mt. Elliott. It is the plan of the company to erect a new theatre on this property, making two altogether. C. Howard Crane, with offices in the Dime Bank building, is the architect for both enterprises. Each theatre will accommodate more than 1,000 people and will likely be amphitheatre style.

MINNESOTA

Andres Brothers and Lidren are erecting a picture theatre at 896-898 E. 7th street, Minneapolis. The cost is estimated at $25,000. Herman J. Andres, who will act as manager, announces that the house will be completed about April 15.

August Wallentin has applied for a permit to erect a store and theatre building at W. 7th street and Main avenue, St. Paul. The theatre is planned to seat 540 people while the entire structure will cost in the neighborhood of $15,000.

The city council of St. Paul has refused permission to C. H. Kenaley to erect a motion picture theatre on the southwest corner of Grand avenue and Chatsworth street.

A one story brick moving picture theatre to cost $8,500 is to be built by P. Potvin at 2100-02 Sixth avenue north, Minneapolis.

Fire, starting in the operator's box, totally destroyed the Royal theatre in Crookston at 10:30 p. m. February 2. Thomas Wallace, the operator, battled with the flames with fire extinguishers until they had gained too much headway and he was forced to leap through the small door and flames to safety. The theatre was recently purchased by J. N. Neumann of Bemidji, and was being managed by his son, Ernest Neumann. His loss will amount to several hundred dollars as the fixtures were entirely destroyed. His insurance recently expired and was not renewed.

MISSOURI

C. W. Morelock, manager of the Pageant theatre, 5851 Delmar bl., St. Louis, has bought out the interest in the theatre held by B. P. Bogy and M. P. Howard.

Mr. Morelock will make alterations in the house by putting in mirrors and marble slabs in the lobby, and by employing union musicians in the orchestra, and will make only occasional use of the Unit symphony organ, which was a bone of contention between the theatre management and the Musicians' union when the house opened last fall.

The program will be changed daily in the future, many big features will be used, and the admission will be reduced to ten cents for all seats.

The Merry Widow theatre, 1451 Chouteau avenue, St. Louis, has been sold to F. A. Klockenbrink by George Hay, who has been operating the place for several years. The Merry Widow has a seating capacity of 400, and is a five cent house.

Charles Loeffel has purchased the Hickory theatre, at Hickory street and Jefferson avenue, St. Louis, from Charles Monette. The Hickory is a small house in a busy district, and plays to good audiences at five cents admission.

The Franklin theatre, on 9th street and Franklin avenue, St. Louis, has passed into the hands of J. W. Cotter, and was opened to the public on February 10. Mr. Cotter was formerly manager of a feature film exchange in St. Louis.

NEW JERSEY

Irving Engel, formerly manager of the Al. Reeves Theatrical Company, has taken over the management of the Clinton theatre, South Clinton avenue, Trenton. He has been in the theatrical business for years and is now starting a chain of motion picture houses for a New York company.

Thorne estate to Lewine and Kempner, who will erect a motion picture theatre.

L. J. Fookes, controlling a chain of vaudeville and motion picture theatres, leased through Joseph A. Wasserman the Park theatre at 180th street and Southern boulevard, New York City. Mr. Fookes also leased through the same broker from the Casino Amusement Company the Darling theatre, at Gloversville.

Joseph Weisbeck, Alden's postmaster, has purchased the moving picture show business in that city.

Frank L. Mueller, of Thirteenth street, College Point, has bought from the Besio Theatre Company, the Regent moving picture theatre on Thirteenth street near Fourth avenue. Thomas Smith was the broker. The consideration was not made public.

L. A. Lang has again become the owner of Lang's Dreamland on West State street, Olean, purchasing the motion picture house from Peter Georgitson and others, to whom he sold it some months ago.

OHIO

C. W. Deible and E. J. Renner have sold the Dome motion picture theatre, North Hazel and West Federal streets, Youngstown, to a local concern headed by C. J. Mohrle. The theatre brought the former owners $110,000. Joseph Trunk will probably remain in his position of manager.

Gus Schroeder, manufacturer of artificial flowers, who has decorated most of the leading motion picture theatres of Cleveland, has become an exhibitor. He has leased the Enjoy-U theatre at Lake avenue, Lakewood.

PENNSYLVANIA

Plans for the moving picture theatre to be erected in North Pittsburg street, Connellsville, by C. A. Wagner and John Wishart, have been returned from Harrisburg with approval, and work will be commenced on the building as soon as possible.

TENNESSEE

Chattanooga is to have a high-class moving picture theatre exclusively for negroes. Atlanta parties have closed a contract with Tom S. Wilcox, owner of the property at the northeast corner of A and East Ninth streets, by which a thoroughly modern and fireproof building is to be erected there. Work of demolishing the old building which has stood at that corner for many years has started and the building will be completely razed before long.

Mr. Wilcox has stated that he has asked for bids and that the contract would be awarded shortly. The building will be brick and concrete, 40x100 feet, and will be especially designed for picture show purposes. It is to be finished April 10.

WASHINGTON

The Mabton Majestic theatre, Mabton, has changed ownership. W. P. Hibbard, who has been manager of the theatre, will retire February 1. The new manager will be F. X. Nagler, of North Yakima. The building will be remodeled.

FRESNO THEATRE INAUGURATES "FAMILY DAY" AT TEN CENTS, AND CHILDREN'S DAY AT ONE CENT

THE Klassay theatre on I street, between Mariposa and Tulare streets, Fresno, was opened on January 29 under most auspicious circumstances. This house, which has a seating capacity of three hundred and five, is one of the best equipped in the San Joaquin Valley.

A ladies' rest room has been fitted up, there are automatic ticket vending and change making machines in the ticket office and fifteen ventilators insure an abundance of fresh air at all times.

However, it is the policy of this latest house of K. Cashin that is the most interesting. Once each month there is to be a benefit performance at which time the proceeds will go to some charitable organization.

Each Monday will be Family Day and on this day an entire family, no matter how large, will be admitted for ten cents.

On Saturday afternoons a special matinee for children will be given, to which an admission price of one cent will be charged.

FIFTY PER CENT. PICTURE AND FIFTY PER CENT. MUSIC, CECIL B. DE MILLE FORMULA FOR SUCCESS

THE old adage that half a loaf is better than none at all may apply to hunger, but not to motion pictures, in the opinion of Cecil B. De Mille, of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company.

Mr. De Mille, who produced for the Lasky company, the Paramount picture productions in which Geraldine Farrar, the noted prima donna, appeared, has taken up the cudgels against the automatic organ, the boy pianist and the squeaky violin in the many badly managed motion picture theatres in the United States.

"For a motion picture audience to watch an exciting production accompanied by the most impossible kind of music, is as ridiculous as for an opera audience to hear a prima donna sing to the music of the overture.

"I venture to say that fifty per cent. of the success of a motion picture is dependent upon the manner in which it is exhibited. The present system is absolutely chaotic.

"The effect produced in motion picture houses my playing big selections of music is just the same as though, at the Metropolitan Opera House, the tenor had finished his great aria and the prima donna came on to sing her love motif but the orchestra kept right on with the tenor's aria.

"It is asking too much of the public to analyze the reasons for the confusion which follows in their own minds.

The orchestra starting from nowhere in particular as regards the continuity of the performance, will start playing "The Tales of Hoffman" and then will play it through to its finish whether the scenes of the picture are comedy, tragedy or pathos.

"Motion pictures are more to be likened to the opera in its most popular form than to the legitimate drama. On this account music plays a most important part in the effectiveness of the entertainment.

"If the choice were to be given to the eleven million people in the United States who attend motion pictures daily, whether they wished their motion pictures with bad music or no music at all, the vote for the latter condition would be unanimous, I believe."

Mr. De Mille said in his opinion, one of the next great developments of the photoplay entertainment, will be the uniform distribution of music with the film production.

The question of the proper music as an accompaniment to the motion picture production is not a new problem for Mr. De Mille to discuss.

When Mr. De Mille's production of Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen" was shown privately last September to Paramount exchange men at the Paramount Convention in Chicago, Mr. De Mille in a short address declared:

"Now you have seen what we do. Now you have seen our share towards making a worthy production. You have seen the results of hours of hard work, of thousands of dollars investment and the most earnest co-operation between the world's leading operatic actress and a studio, united in the purpose of making a masterful production.

"All the advice I have to tell you, gentlemen, who are going out over the country and who are closely in touch with the exhibitors, is that you tell them to give the picture half a chance with the public and it will succeed.

"Tell them not to murder it with a lot of trashy music and tell them that no music at all is better than bad music.

"I venture to say that the producers' part in the success of a picture production is only fifty per cent., the other fifty per cent. is up to the exhibitor."

Mr. De Mille said that after difficult, but decidedly worth while efforts, some standardization had been reached in the manner of projecting the films made by the various companies.

He said he believed that some uniform system of music distribution or regulation would be obtained soon. Mr. De Mille, in behalf of the Lasky company, has taken up this problem on entirely practical basis with W. W. Hodkinson, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation.

SCHIRMER, FISCHER AND LYON AND HEALY SUPPLY NUMBERS SUGGESTED IN MUSIC PLOTS APPEARING IN "NEWS"

John G. Pinkerton, McConnelsville, Ohio.—"The Meditation," from the opera "Thais," I am sure can be gotten at any time from music houses such as G. Schirmer, 3 East Forty-third street; Carl Fischer, 4-6 Cooper Square, New York, or Lyon & Healy, Chicago, Ill.

The number is very well known as a violin solo, but there are piano and organ arrangements. Every number suggested in music plots appearing in this department can be supplied by these same music houses.

However, if you should have any difficulty in obtaining the numbers suggested, I should be very glad to have you communicate the facts to me, and I would give publicity to the matter in such manner as would help to make the obtaining of these numbers convenient.

There is a tendency to jealousy on the part of some publishers which is in a sense detrimental to good picture music, and we feel it our duty to discourage it if we possibly can.

Good musical numbers, regardless of who publishes them, is what a picture theatre wants and for the benefit of all publishers at large, it is highly essential that any boycott on the sale of any musical number should not be possible.

If you were to buy your music through one of the above mentioned houses I feel sure that they would see to it that you were properly served.

We will continue publishing all correspondence that we feel is beneficial or for the information of those interested in picture music and will always be glad to hear from you.

New York Theatre, 1530 Broadway, New York City

justified in selling them. I have been approached on this subject many times, and I feel convinced that the producer of photoplays is the proper person to supply music plots for their different features or other pictures.

The matter of music plots is a business that can only be properly incorporated for the benefit of the picture theatre when it is done strictly in conjunction with the producer of film.

It has been proven to me conclusively that the sale of music plots compiled in such manner as to make their use practical and profitable to the exhibitor could be made a profitable business. Nevertheless at its best it would necessarily be short-lived, as it could never demand any protection.

The producer of film is the only party that can give a capable musician and photoplay scholar the necessary opportunities for making a plot which will be of positive value to the exhibitor.

As an exhibitor, I ask you to require of your exchanges that they furnish you with plots for music. Until we get plots for all features, we should be very lenient with our criticisms. When music plots or music becomes a part of film rental, many minds will be concentrated on the possible results to be obtained by such plots after which the degree of proficiency will assert itself naturally. Credit will be given to him that deserves it.

Concerted movement by the exhibitors and picture musicians is the only way of correcting the present lack of enthusiasm for the betterment of picture music for all—not the few exhibitors.

J. M. Allan:—By following the music plots in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, you will note that the names of publishers of numbers suggested appear after such number in parenthesis.

Following the plots and the suggestions is the only method I could recommend to you for accumulating a good repertoire of suitable instrumental music for pictures.

If you do not care to write to the different publishers separately, you will be able to buy the music suggested through Carl Fischer, 4-6 Cooper Square, New York City; Ditson and Company, 8 East Thirty-fourth street, or G. Schirmer, Inc., 3 East Forty-third street, New York City.

SINGER ACCOMPANIES "SILVER THREADS AMONG THE GOLD" IN BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA

AN UNUSUAL musical innovation in connection with the showing of the film "Silver Threads Among the Gold" attended by gratifying results, was accomplished by H. M. Newsome, manager and owner of the Trianon theatre in Birmingham, Alabama, recently.

Miss Will Nell Lavender, a noted singer, appeared in characteristic songs while the picture was being projected, and the audience was so pleased with the combination that Manager Newsome believes that the Birmingham public will relish more of this musical-movie dish in the future.

"Silver Threads Among the Gold" is Miss Lavender's own undertaking, and it was in the promotion and accompaniment of it that induced her to renounce Broadway for the nonce upon a tour of the South that has resulted in signal success.

Launched as an experiment, her undertaking no longer is in that state, but has added an innovation to the presentation of film drama that promises to revolutionize the method.

"NE'ER-DO-WELL" PREMIERE WITH THIRTY-PIECE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SETS NEW MARK FOR PICTURE MUSIC

"THE NE'ER-DO-WELL" shown at the Candler theatre, New York City, accompanied by a symphony orchestra of thirty pieces, brings new stimulus to the field of picture music.

Selig's screen version of "The Ne'er-Do-Well," which had its premiere presentation at the Candler theatre, New York, on February 10, showed that the producers of big feature films know that to give their productions proper presentation, music is by no means a factor that should be omitted.

This production was accompanied by an orchestra of thirty capable musicians which certainly added to the effect of the production.

With more such enterprising producers entering the field of filmdom we can look forward to productions in the future that will have but one rival, namely, grand opera.

Music Plot for Fox Feature: "Merely Mary Ann"

By Ernst Luz. Projection Time Seventy Minutes

THIS plot is adapted so as to make it possible for the pianist, one man orchestra player, organist or orchestra leader to make some prior preparation for playing the picture. The numbers suggested need not be used; similar numbers, or numbers suggested by the Notes will do as well. It is intended that no unnecessary expense be added for exhibitor or musician.

22.	Waltz (Len. H. Leg.)	"Artist's Reverie" (Jos. W. Stern and Company).	To end.

Note: This picture is different from the usual, the leading character being an unsophisticated person and her action continues light throughout the entire picture.

The story nevertheless has very strong pathos which shows great contrast in the picture.

Exceptional care should therefore be taken in selecting frivolous numbers where light numbers are suggested, making your romantic and pathetic numbers the other extreme; namely, very slow and legato.

Nos. 1 and 16 should be light 2/4 numbers, can have a polka suggestion.

Nos. 2. 3, 7 and 14 are the points where positive pathetic and romantic appeals must be obtained.

No. 15, must be a slow waltz with a minor key predominant, so as to continue the appeal created in No. 14.

Nos. 4 and 17 are concert waltzes with slow legato introductions.

No. 5 should be a fox-trot played very lightly.

No. 6 is an imitation of ringing a dinner bell. This should not be accompanied by any music.

No. 9 can be a selection of light comic opera airs and should play about nine minutes.

No. 10 is a waltz movement to carry the time to the next one given.

No. 11 is a medley 2/4 number of some popular song. It accompanies dancing on the stage.

No. 13 is a horn pipe and also accompanies dancing on the stage.

No. 21 is a song published by Abramson and Company, and is positively suggested on the screen. Should be played once through.

No. 22 should be a slow waltz lento movement played very legato, and having a minor strain predominant.

Nos. 9, 12, 18, 19 and 20 are short melodramatic numbers as are sold by Jos. W. Stern and Company.

The light action together with the cabaret scenes make this picture difficult to play on the organ with much satisfaction. The first and fourth reel nevertheless afford good organ opportunities.
